SAYS LAW IS OBSTRUCTED

ASKS HONEST LEADERSHIP

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—President Harding, speaking this afternoon at the unveiling of a statue of Alexander Hamilton, deplored the increase of factionalism in the United States, which, he said, was growing as never before, all the time seeking to "promote this or that interest without regard to the relationship to others, and without regard for the common weal." He described the menace as one of "hatred and prejudice and violence," saying that coalitions would "invade the constitutional rights of others or subvert the Constitution itself," and urging that "the false cry of class" be throttled.

A paragraph in his speech wherein he spoke of the groups that were "challenging civil and religious liberty" was taken by many as reference to the Ku Klux Klan.

The study of Hamilton's life and achievements has been long a hobby of the President, and Hamilton was the subject of a lecture which he delivered in various parts of the country before he came to the White House. What the world needed today more than anything else, the President said, was the leadership of a statesman of the calibre of Hamilton, and when such a leadership developed, he predicted "the substitution of hope and resolution where hatred and resentment are now hindering recovery." He eulogised Hamilton's conception of financial integrity, and the faith of obligations as a remedy for present world ills.

Except at the close, the President followed the letter of his manuscript. At the end, however, he referred to the fact that as time is recorded, but a short period has elapsed since the days of Washington, Jefferson and Hamilton, a fact, he added, which was brought home to all by the presence at the exercises of the Rev. Dr. Edgar A. Hamilton of Baltimore, a great-grandson of Alexander Hamilton.

THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

The President said:

"Mr. Secretary and My Countrymen:

"It is a most becoming thing to erect, and to me a very gratifying thing to participate in unveiling, this memorial to one of the outstanding founders of the Republic. In the appraisal of constructive contribution to the making of our America, Alexander Hamilton stands foremost and merits our reverent tribute for all succeeding time.

"Hamilton was the inspiring and insistent advocate of union. And the creative genius in the making of the Constitution. More, he was the practical politician, who brought about its necessary adoption.

"To pay him this tribute of outstanding eminence means no disparagement, in any way, of the other stalwarts among the founding fathers. Washington riveted the confidence of the new possessors of independence, Jeffersoon was the foremost advocate of democracy, Franklin was the philosopher in the making of the Constitution, but Hamilton had the conception of a Federal Government, upon which plan the American people have builded to their own satisfaction and to no small degree of world astonishment. When his plan was adopted, he became the master builder, and the integrity of the nation's financial honor is his monument for the ages.

Standards in Financial Honor.

"To the closer students of American history, notably the history of the republic in the making, it must be most gratifying to note the erection of this befitting memorial in this appropriate setting at the south front of the Treasury. It was in the Treasury that Secretary Hamilton made his matchless contribution to the stable republic. Here he put the seal of sanctity upon financial honor and led the young republic from the depths of seeming hopelessness to the very heights of confidence and the supreme consciousness of honored obligations and their honest discharge.

"The task of the founders was no trivial one, and the piloting of the new ship of state demanded the attributes of heroic leadership.

"Here was the very chaos of victory. The triumphant colonists were spent and wearied, financially exhausted and without plans for the future. They had little thought of the nation. Nationality was not the inspiration of the war for independence, but nationality was revealed as the necessary means of self-preservation when independence was won.

Fought Disintegrating Forces.

"There were conflicting ideas, even more pronounced than today—there were varying conditions throughout the colonies, now turned to States. There were opposing ambitions, less understood than now, because of slow communication and less intimacy of association. There were pronounced envies and threatening jealousies. Aye, there were disturbing

Brindell Is Put to Work Beautifying Sing Sing

Robert P. Brindell, former New York Building Trade Union head, now serving a term in Sing Sing for extortion, was entrusted yesterday with the task of beautifying the prison grounds and approaches.

Under guard and assisted by 250 other inmates Brindell went outside the walls and began construction of rustic benches, fences, stairways and bridges opposite the prison office. The bridges will lead to the new bee hives on the bluff above the recently erected garage.

Charles E. Chapin, one-time New York newspaper editor, another prisoner, is to be in charge of the floriculture of the premises upon the completion of Brindell's work.

BRYAN IS BEATEN IN MODERATOR RACE

Defeated in the Presbyterian Assembly After Leading on Two Ballots.

DR. WISHART THE VICTOR

Will H. Hays Starts Drive for $15,000,000 Addition to the Ministers' Pension Fund.

Special to The New York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, May 17.—William Jennings Bryan, candidate for Moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, which began here today its one hundred and thirty-fifth annual session, was defeated on the third ballot by twenty-four votes, his successful opponent being the Rev. Dr. Charles F. Wishart, President of Wooster College of Wooster, Ohio. Bryan took his defeat in silence. He showed no emotion as the election of his rival was made unanimous.

There were four candidates at the outset, the other two being the Rev. Dr. Hugh Kelso Walker, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Los Angeles, and the Rev. Dr. Frank M. Sisley, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Oakland, Cal. Bryan before the first ballot was taken was the favorite and his election was deemed almost certain.

On the first ballot he polled 301, Dr. Wishart 215, Dr. Walker 133 and Dr. Silsley 30. Dr. Silsley then withdrew in favor of Dr. Walker. With 439 votes necessary for election Bryan gained on the second ballot, the count being Bryan 421, Wishart 400 and Walker 56. Dr. Walker then withdrew and the third ballot resulted in the election of Dr. Wishart, he receiving 451 votes to Bryan's 427.

The general opinion is that Bryan's long controversy in antagonism to the Darwinian theory was one of the factors in his defeat.

"I have two speeches prepared, one in case I am elected, the other in case I am defeated," remarked Mr. Bryan to friends in the lobby during the election. As he is a commissioner representing the presbytery of Southeast Florida and has the privilege of the floor, a speech from him attacking the theory of evolution is expected.

When it was announced that the time had come to elect a Moderator Bryan withdrew and sat outside in front of the hall, fanning himself. He appeared extremely nervous. When the election of Dr. Wishart was announced there was such an outburst of hurrahs that the Assembly seemed like a political convention.

A large part of the Southern vote went to Bryan, as did that of Nebraska and Philadelphia. New York gave a majority for Dr. Wishart.

In nominating Mr. Bryan, Dr. Webb said:

"In addition to the presentation of his name, it is perhaps unnecessary for me to remind you that our Church has had but one layman as Moderator. Our Church has never had a Moderator from the Southland, from which Mr. Bryan comes. The name of William Jennings Bryan is known wherever the English language is spoken. In the affairs of State, Mr. Bryan has always taken an uncompromising position for civic righteousness. He believes that the work of the Church is to win the whole world to Christ, and he believes that we can double the membership of our Church in a short time. I ask you to rally for this consecrated Christian layman, William Jennings Bryan, and thus to help bring the world to the foot of the cross."

The Rev. Dr. James C. Reid of San Francisco, in nominating Dr. Silsley, said his candidate was opposed to politics in the Church, and that there had been "no meeting in upper rooms in hotels to organize for him." This caused a laugh, as last evening a group of the Bryanites were in a caucus until almost midnight.

John Willis Baer, a Los Angeles banker, in nominating Dr. Walker, said: "He has no entangling alliances or theological vagaries."

The Rev. Dr. Martin D. Hardin of Ithaca, N. Y., said that Bryan's voice had been raised for thirty years in the cause of righteousness, but that just at

SCHURMAN WARNS PEKING OFFICIALS OF 'DRASTIC ACTION'

PRISONERS FEELING STRAIN

HUGHES JOINS IN REBUKE

State Department Suggests the Chinese Will Try to Blame Powers for Failure.

TSAO-CHWANG, Province of Shantung, China, Friday, May 18 (Associated Press).—Get the foreign captives out of the grip of the Shantung bandits and talk terms afterward, otherwise there will be "drastic action," was the ultimatum laid down to Chinese Government officials here late yesterday by Dr. Jacob G. Schurman, American Minister to China.

The American diplomat, who stopped off here on his way from Shanghai to Peking, told Chinese officials, congregated here to negotiate with the bandits, that unless the foreign prisoners were released immediately serious international complications would result.

"End these delays and confusion between various departments of the Government," he said. "Get the captives out and talk terms afterward, otherwise there will be drastic action taken."

Relations between the Chinese Government and the representatives of foreign countries is described on all hands as "strained," as a result of the bandit situation.

Dr. Schurman kept in constant cable communication with Washington during his stay in Shanghai.

J. B. Powell and other captives have sent word from their mountain prison that all the prisoners are beginning to feel the strain. Some are ill from insufficient food; others, forced to make marches, with their feet unhealed from the bruises and cuts of the rocky trail from the scene of the hold-up near Luchow, are suffering intensely.

The bandits' charge that the Chinese troops have not been withdrawn, despite official assertions to the contrary. This apparently constitutes the greatest hitch to the negotiations for the captives' release.

Two Days May Bring Action.

SHANGHAI, May 17.—It is learned definitely, but unofficially, that the next forty-eight hours will bring a definite decision regarding the powers' course against China. Minister Jacob Gould Schurman is rushing to Peking, where he will arrive tonight. Military action by the allied powers is becoming more probable. All agencies at the command of foreign officials are now being employed to determine whether public opinion supports the use of foreign forces. Newspaper correspondents are being interrogated on public sentiment at home.

Reports indicative of the lessening chances of an early release of the captives stimulates the feeling that the limit has been reached in the present course. The danger of the captives being slain is an outstanding cause for hesitancy. There is a widespread sentiment among Chinese welcoming foreign intervention, but a reservation is often added against Japan participating.

Go to Bandits as Hostages.

TSAO CHWANG, May 17—Minister of Communications Wu Yu Lin and General Yang went to the bandits today offering themselves as hostages for the immediate release of the captives, offering to remain until the Government keeps its promise to take the bandits into the army.

A serious dispute among the chief political leaders as to who is to get the credit for the captives held by bandits is causing the present impasse. There is no dispute regarding the bandits' terms, which Peking is obliged to accept, but a desperate effort is being made to prevent the wrecking of the Chihli party.

General Yang, personal representative of Tsao Kun, Chihli War Lord, returned to Paoting-fu yesterday with Generals Ting and Yang of Tientsin, trying to get control from Minister of Communications Wu Yu Lin. The indications are that there would be an immediate collapse of the Peking Government if there is any settlement, and the freedom of the captives would be delayed.

Another cause for the dispute is the prospective rising of General Ho Feng-yu's brigade, which holds Southern Shantung. Hearing that about 8,000 bandits are about to be paid and incorporated into the army, this brigade,

LONDON, May 17.—Nikolai Bukharin, editor of the Communist organ, the Pravda, of Moscow, has communicated to a combined meeting of the Central Committee of the Russian Communist Party and the Praesidium of the Third International the results of his inquiry into the activities of the representatives of the International abroad and his investigation of the accounts and cash balances of the organization, writes The Morning Post's Russian correspondent.

G. S. Zinovieff, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Third International, is accused of having paid to secret "lady agents" of the Third International in Great Britain and France more than £350,000 in the course of 1922 alone.

Jacques Sadoul, an ex-captain of the French army, is requested to furnish accounts as to the expenditure of £170,000 which he received for the purpose of organizing a Communist mass movement in the French colonies.

Karl Radek, Chief of Publicity of the Soviet Government, is accused of not having as yet rendered any account of the funds he received from foreign agents of the Third International when he was instructed to subsidize Communist organizations in Egypt, Bulgaria and Turkey.

The chiefs of the foreign propaganda department, Narimanoff and Rothstein, are accused of not having rendered any account of the funds placed at their disposal in 1921.

According to Bukharin's report, the total amount of funds spent by the "comrades" mentioned, for which no accounts or documents are available, exceeds 27,000,000 gold rubles [about $13,750,000].

HYLAN WITHHOLDS PIER FOR LEVIATHAN

HE HAS ACTION POSTPONED

Steamship Companies Join in Opposition to Granting a City Dock for the Big Liner.

The International Mercantile Marine Company and the Cunard Steamship Company joined issue yesterday. They sent representatives to the meeting of the Sinking Fund Commission in the City Hall and also sent to the commission a joint letter urging that no plan be considered for the leasing of Piers 86, 88 and 90, North River, unless such plan adequately provides for 1,000 foot ships for which the piers were designed. The matter of the new 1,000 foot piers came before the commission on a request from the United States Shipping Board for the use of Pier 86 for the Leviathan.

Consideration of the request was postponed at the suggestion of Mayor Hylan, who like many other Brooklynites resents the fact that the Shipping Board rejected the bid of the Brooklyn Navy Yard for reconditioning the steamship President Buchanan and gave the contract to the Newport News Shipbuilding Company. Dock Commissioner Delaney was instructed by the Commission to confer with the Chairman of the Shipping Board and express to him the views of the commission.

"If Chairman Lasker expects to get consideration around the harbor of New York," the Mayor said, "he's got to give consideration to the working men in Brooklyn. We are interested in the thousands of working men over there who have got little homes upon which they have paid small sums on account."

Dock Commissioner Delaney pointed out that Pier 86, at the foot of West Forty-sixth Street, is the only pier here long enough to receive the Leviathan. That pier is now occupied by the United American Line, which has pending an application for a lease of that pier and of Pier 84, which is under construction.

"It is recommended," he stated, "that the board approve and consent to the execution of this lease by the Commissioner of Docks for a term of ten years at an annual rental of $300,000 for Pier 86, until the completion of the terminal and upon completion of the entire project, a new rate sufficient to produce 7½ per cent. per annum of the entire cost."

Consideration of the entire matter was put over for two weeks.

Delos H. Cooke appeared for the Cunard Line and J. H. Thomas for the International Mercantile Marine Company.

"All we desire is adequate docks where our large ships can be safely berthed under such conditions that they may be secure from serious damage while in the Port of New York," the letter of the steamship companies said. "This is provided for by extensions on the Chelsea piers and can continue so long as the War Department will allow the temporary structures to remain. If, however, the War Department declines to do this, the only available facilities for our large ships will be the new piers constructed and in course of construction in the vicinity of Forty-sixth Street, namely, Piers 86, 88, 90 and 92."

The letter stated that the War Department for some years had allowed the companies to construct and maintain temporary racks extending the piers in the Chelsea section on the express condition that new piers to accommodate the large vessels were constructed by the city for Cunard and White Star ships. The city accepted the condition, the letter said. It continued:

"We respectfully urge that until the city has the official assurance of the War Department that these extensions will either be made permanent or that they will be permitted to remain until the 1,000-foot piers are built for our ships, that the city should not place itself in a position where it will be unable to fulfill its agreement and unable to supply safe docking accommodations for the 1,000-foot ships on our lines which have been serving the City of New York regularly for a great many years.

"The Dock Commissioner has stated that unless we will cancel our lease for one of the Chelsea piers he will not recommend the leasing to us of any of the 1,000-foot piers. The lease of the Chelsea piers was made in good faith by the City of New York some twelve years ago at a rental fixed by a commission appointed by the Mayor of the city, which was considered at the time to be a high rental."

MASKED BAND BEAT COLUMBIA STUDENT

Post-Graduate Student Writes an Apology Later, and So Do His Abductors.

The feeling aroused among Columbia University students because of the jeers from dormitory windows and fraternity houses on the occasion of a recent review of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps on the campus resulted yesterday in the kidnapping of a post-graduate student, William Lauser Werner, who had upheld the right of protest. Werner was taken by masked students in an automobile to a wood in Westchester yesterday morning, beaten with sticks and left to find his way back to the university as best he could.

He sat in his room yesterday nursing his bruises and writing a statement setting forth his views on the Constitution of the United States, the army and the flag, for which his captors said they would send a messenger last night. Werner explained that in selecting the incidents at the review as an opportunity to uphold the right of free speech he had perhaps acted unwisely, for he said that he had only the greatest respect for the Army and the flag. He cited his own military record to prove it. He served as a corporal with the 316th Infantry in the Argonne and St. Mihiel campaigns. He offered to apologize for anything he had said which might be misconstrued if his captors would also apologize to him.

The kidnapping was the culmination of a hectic week at the university, which began when Major William C. Foote, U. S. A., wrote a letter to The Spectator, which was published May 10, protesting against the jeers of students during the review two days before. During the review students who had gathered in windows of dormitories and fraternity houses laughed and uttered facetious and disrespectful remarks, which Major Foote characterised as disloyal. He said he did not think they represented any but a small minority in the university and that they were the sort of persons who never did anything worth while for their university or country.

Criticised an Editorial.

The Spectator also printed an editorial deprecating the outbreak of the students, and it was this editorial which called forth a letter from Werner. He was a graduate of Muhlenberg University and took his Master's degree at Penn State, where he was an instructor in English. He has been on leave of absence, taking post-graduate work at Columbia.

In his letter, which The Spectator did not publish, Werner said that "such an editorial as that published by The Spectator would tend to make 100 per cent. Columbia robots," the word used in the play "R U R" to describe the mechanical persons who overthrew humanity. He said a man would be an ass to uphold all the things which he was supposed to uphold, and added, "A man has a perfect right to applaud or jeer as he wishes at the passing show."

Just how the contents of that letter became known to others than the editors of The Spectator was not known yesterday at Columbia, but it is supposed that it reached some of the students who were most resentful of what they declared had been aspersions upon the loyalty of the institution. Werner himself thought yesterday that perhaps his captors had been members of the R. O. T. C.

He went to the theatre on Wednesday night, and when he returned to his room in Livingston Hall about 1 o'clock yesterday morning four masked young men sprang upon him as he entered his door. He struggled and called for help, but as the sophomores had had a party earlier in the evening those in the rooms near by thought that the noise was made by a returning sophomore and did not open their doors to see what was going on. Werner was bound hand and foot, gagged and taken out to an automobile, in which three other men were waiting.

They drove to the wood, which Werner thought was near Yonkers, and made him get out of the car. After standing him up against a tree they went off to have a consultation as to what they should do with him. The leader finally came back and asked him if he were against the army on the flag, or was unpatriotic in any of his thoughts or beliefs. Werner said he was not and told of his army record to prove it. The men finally agreed not to do anything to Werner and put him back into the car.

Encouraged by Policemen.

At this point, however, two policemen came along and, seeing the masks, wanted to know what was going on. The men tried to tell them that it was merely a fraternity initiation, but the police-

FULLER AND M'GEE IN JAIL FOR FAILURE TO GIVE UP PAPERS

Neither Can They Be Called for Trial on Any of the Sixteen Indictments for Bucketing.

FOLEY TO BE QUESTIONED

Edward M. Fuller and William F. McGee, partners in the brokerage firm of E. M. Fuller & Co., which failed last June for $5,000,000, were committed to Ludlow Street jail for an indefinite term yesterday afternoon, when Judge Henry W. Goddard of the Federal Court adjudged them in contempt of court for failing to turn over to the trustee in the Fuller bankruptcy proceeding certain documents they had obtained from the receiver.

They were taken to the jail shortly after 6 o'clock last evening after their appearance before Federal Judge Learned Hand on a writ of habeas corpus obtained by their lawyers, William J. Fallon and Eugene F. McGee, soon after Judge Goddard signed the order committing them. The writ of habeas corpus was signed by Judge Augustus N. Hand of the Federal Court, but he refused to hear argument on it for personal reasons. Eugene F. McGee of counsel for the bankrupt brokers explained that Judge Augustus Hand formerly had been a partner in the law firm of the counsel for the trustees.

It was said in the Federal Court after the men were led off to the jail by Deputy United States Marshal Michael Hartigan that the only means by which the bankrupt brokers could be released would be through the delivery of the papers to the court, through an action in the United States Supreme Court next Fall on a writ of certiorari to review Judge Goddard's action or through a Presidential pardon.

Cannot Be Called for Trial.

If they do not produce the papers and if legal moves of their counsel fail, the two brokers can be kept in jail for the rest of their lives, and under no circumstances can they be released on bail pending any proceeding. The incarceration of Fuller and McGee also means that they cannot be called for trial next month in General Sessions on any of the sixteen grand larceny and bucketing indictments returned against them last Summer after District Attorney Banton's investigation of the Fuller & Co. failure.

Fuller was to be tried for the fourth time next month on the indictment charging him with bucketing the order of Frederick L. Link of Westmoreland, Tenn. Nine days ago a jury at his third trial informed Judge Nott in General Sessions that they had been unable to agree on a verdict, and that they stood eight for conviction and four for acquittal. The jury in Fuller's first trial on this indictment also disagreed and the second trial was called off by Judge Johnstone in General Sessions when Assistant District Attorney Hugo Wintner told him that J. Harold Braid, the principal witness against Fuller, had disappeared. Braid, who was a member of the brokerage firm of Braid & Vogel, surrendered to District Attorney Banton before the third trial and was held in $2,000 bail as a material witness. Braid testified at the third trial that he entered into an agreement with Fuller and McGee to bucket some of Fuller & Co.'s orders and that Link's order was among them.

Referee Made Original Order.

It was while Braid was on the witness stand that Harold P. Coffin, Federal referee in the Fuller & Co. bankruptcy proceeding, issued an order to Samuel Strasbourger, the receiver, to turn over all the books and documents of the Fuller company to George C. Sprague, the trustee who had been elected by the 4,000 creditors of the brokerage firm. Books and documents of the Link transaction then were turned over to Assistant District Attorney Albert B. Unger by the trustee for use in Fuller's trial. Then it was

AMEND TRANSIT PLAN, ASK HYLAN TO O. K. IT

Commissioners Submit Two Routes Revised to Meet City's Program.

MAYOR SHIES AT OVERTURES

Says That Something May Be Accomplished, However, If There Is No "Catch."

Following the conciliatory letter of its Chairman, George McAneny, suggesting a conference on new subway construction, the Transit Commission sent for approval yesterday to the Board of Estimate two of the new subway routes proposed by the commission and declared by Mr. McAneny in his letter to be imperatively necessary.

These routes were the Brooklyn cross-town subway and the Washington Heights extension of the present Broadway subway in Manhattan. As now proposed by the commission, they differ little from the routes proposed by the commission to the board last year, having been adjusted in their details to conform substantially to the corresponding lines in the proposed schedule of construction presented to the Board of Estimate by Mayor Hylan. The commission pointed out that in the judgment of its engineers the building of these two lines would furnish a greater degree of subway relief than any others in the list of those projected for the immediate future.

The commission's action in again putting forward its new construction program with modifications to bring it nearer the Mayor's plan, together with the suggestion for a conference with the Board of Estimate on any point of difference, is expected to bring results.

Mayor Is Suspicious.

"I haven't had a chance to look into it," Mayor Hylan said, when first asked about Mr. McAneny's letter yesterday, "but, if they have submitted anything which will aid the city in carrying out its plan of municipal operation, the members of the Board of Estimate will give it every possible consideration."

Later in the day at the Sinking Fund Commission meeting, Murray Hulbert, President of the Board of Aldermen, declared that Mr. McAneny's proposal was the first indication of a desire on the part of the commission to "go ahead on constructive lines."

"That's why I'm suspicious," said Mayor Hylan. "I'm looking for a catch in it. There's probably a catch somewhere. If not, however, we may be able to go ahead and accomplish something."

The Mayor and the other members of the Board of Estimate indicated that they intended to consider the suggestion carefully before agreeing to Mr. McAneny's suggestion for a conference.

Mayor Hylan said he wished first to ascertain whether the recapture feature of his own plan was acceptable to the commission. "If McAneny is veering away from that, we won't get very far," the Mayor said. "McAneny was responsible for putting the recapture clause in the dual subway contracts and now we propose to see if he is trying to abandon it.

"I am having an investigation made of the proposals to see if their plan fits in with our recapture plan. If it does not we won't have anything to do with it. A very competent man is looking into the proposition submitted to us by the commission, and until his examination is completed our decision must wait."

At the offices of the commission it was said that Mr. McAneny's proposal enabled a start at subway building to be made at once, leaving the questions of recapture and municipal operation to be decided later. The commission's plan is that the two specific lines proposed by the commission, the Brooklyn cross-town and the Washington Heights lines,

MACHOLD IMPUGNS SMITH'S SINCERITY IN ALBANY PROGRAM

CAMPAIGN ISSUE IS RAISED

SEES TRANSIT PLOT ALSO

Speaker Says Smith and Hylan Put Clause in Bill to Raise 5-Cent Fare.

H. Edmund Machold, Speaker of the Assembly and an avowed Republican candidate for Governor, in two speeches here yesterday impugned the sincerity of Governor Smith, and indicated that this would be one of the issues in the campaign for the election of the Legislature next Fall.

In his first speech at the Women's National Republican Club, in West Thirty-ninth Street, Mr. Machold said that Governor Smith will know that his legislative program was doomed to defeat by the Republican Assembly. He then made the direct charge, based, he said, on information from several sources, that the Governor had told Democratic leaders who were uneasy over his advocacy of certain of the more radical measures proposed by the Governor, that there was no occasion for worry, that the Republican Assemblymen were certain to kill these bills.

Smith Challenges Machold.

Governor Smith's reply to Speaker Machold was a challenge to a public debate. When the Governor was informed last night by THE TIMES of the Speaker's attack, he said with heat:

"Speaker Machold is carried away by the plaudits at his own dinner the other night. He is talking loosely.

"I will meet him at any time and at any place, the Town Hall or Carnegie Hall or any other place in the State of New York that he designates, and on any date that he selects, in public and open debate.

"I am ready to answer his loose talk in the open. It won't cost him a cent and I'll let him have all the tickets. If he is sincere, here is his opportunity."

Speaker Machold, when informed last night of Governor Smith's challenge to a debate, refused to discuss the proposal, but declared that all he had charged against the Governor was "the truth."

In his second speech made at a meeting of the Republican County Committee in Bryant Hall last night, the Speaker accused Governor Smith and Mayor Hylan of conspiracy to "fool" the voters and "betog" the traction issue by concealing a provision in the default Smith-Hylan Transit bill designed to permit the city to raise the fare to this city above five cents, contrary to their previous pledges. He also accused the Governor of having completely reversed his attitude on State regulation of public utilities.

Political leaders in both parties were disposed last night to regard Speaker Machold's utterances as an indication of the Republican Party's program in the fight for control of the next Legislature; and also as a forerunner of Mr. Machold's own position in case he becomes the nominee for Governor next year.

Three hundred women attended the meeting at the Women's National Republican Club.

Speaker Machold made no reference in his speech to the passage of the bill to repeal the Mullan-Gage Prohibition Enforcement act, but after he had finished his address he answered several questions on this subject put to him by women in the audience.

In his speech Mr. Machold made no attempt to evade the fact that under his leadership the Assembly had killed many of the Democratic measures introduced in pursuance of what Governor Smith and other Democrats have characterised as "mandates" from the people promulgated on election day.

"We knew before the session began that after mature deliberation the Democrats had decided to introduce a program of extremely radical tenor, not for the purpose of getting it enacted, but to embarrass the Republican party and create or keep alive profitable issues for use in the coming campaign, when the present Administration expects to go to the people for a vote expressing a confidence which it does not enjoy now and did not enjoy during the legislative session," the Speaker said.

Challenges Governor's Sincerity.

"Governor Smith told the Democratic leaders, who were apprehensive regarding the practical application of some of the doctrines advanced by their party, that they need have no fear regarding the consequences, for while the Democratic Senate would pass the measures they would be killed in the Republican Assembly. That the Governor said this came to me not once but many times, not from one but from many sources. We merely took the Governor at his word in killing some of the measures he had proposed.

"As the Summer advances this phase of the situation will be explained in full and convincing detail, and I am looking forward with eager interest and curiosity to November, when we will learn how the people of this State will meet this challenge from the party in control of the Administration at Albany."

Speaker Machold told the women that if he had his way the Republican Party would advance in its coming campaign measures designed to [illegible] feeling women, or at least [illegible]

Two Killed, Many Hurt, in Quito Earthquake; Many Public Buildings and Homes Damaged

GUAYAQUIL, Ecuador, May 17 (Associated Press).—Two persons have been killed and many injured, and much damage to property has been done by a violent earthquake in Quito and the surrounding country, according to dispatches received from the capital.

Many buildings, including the Government Palace, the City Hall, the cathedral, the Archbishop's residence, the Astronomical Observatory, the Military Academy, the railway station and hundreds of residences have been damaged.

Quito is a city with a population of about 100,000. It repeatedly suffers from earthquakes. It is situated in a ravine east of the volcano Pichincha, at an elevation of 9,350 feet above sea level, and lies about 150 miles northeast of Guayaquil.

In the Plaza Mayor, one of several handsome squares of the city, are situated the cathedral, the City Hall and the palaces of the Archbishop and the President of the Republic. The city carries on a considerable business in the manufacture of cotton and woolen goods, blankets, carpets, leather, lace, jewelry and articles made of "Mexican onyx."

Blasts Link Two Parts of Queensboro Tube Between Grand Central Terminal and 8th Av.

Fifty persons, including representatives of the city and the Transit Commission, the contractors, newspaper men, photographers and officials of bonding companies, were in the tunnel under Forty-second Street, near Fifth Avenue, yesterday afternoon when two blasts of dynamite tore a hole through the thin wall of rock alongside the foundation of the Public Library that separated the two ends of the work on the extension of the Queensboro subway. The Interborough Rapid Transit Company and the Transit Commission willing, the extension probably will be open for traffic by Jan. 1 next, according to the contractors.

Queens is especially interested in the Queensboro extension, as it will mean that they will no longer have to use the shuttle between Times Square and Grand Central, and a large delegation was on hand from that borough. The delegation included members of the Queens Chamber of Commerce and D. A. Butler, managing editor of The Daily Star of Long Island City.

Others there were John F. Hinnott, Secretary to Mayor Hylan; George H. Pegram, Chief Engineer of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company; Robert Ridgeway, Chief Engineer of the Transit Commission; A. J. Powers and John J. Kennedy, heads of the Powers-Kennedy Construction Company, the contractors; Albert Carr, chief engineer of the contracting firm.

Work was started on the extension Aug. 1 last, when the first spadeful of earth was dug in Bryant Park, just behind the Public Library. Mr. Kennedy said that the company was about a year ahead of schedule on the contract. The opening of the extension for traffic as far as Fifth Avenue, he said, would probably depend on the interest taken by the people of Queens. It is estimated that this part of the extension would be completed by Jan. 1, 1924, if the present progress was maintained.

The route of the extension follows: From the Grand Central Station, under Forty-second Street and beneath the shuttle tunnel, west to Fifth Avenue, under Forty-first Street to Broadway; under the Broadway tunnel to Seventh Avenue, where the first station will be; then under Avenue tunnel, west to Forty-first Street and Eighth Avenue.

The address of Speaker Machold was frequently interrupted by applause from some three hundred women who had come to hear him speak. There was applause when he told his feminine audience that in his opinion the Republican Assembly had served the people of the State as well in stopping some of the legislation the Democrats proposed as it had through some of the constructive measures it passed.

The question of prohibition came up after the speaker had sat down at the end of his speech. Mrs. Arthur La Livermore of Westchester, Honorary President of the club, who wielded the gavel, then announced that their guest was prepared to answer questions. One woman asked the Speaker to talk about the passage of the Dunnigan-Cuvillier Act to repeal the Mullan-Gage Law.

Obey Dry Constitments.

"In my opinion," the Speaker said in response, "the proposed repeal of the Mullan-Gage Law bears no direct relation to prohibition. I have said it publicly in my own district, and I do not hesitate to repeat in the presence of this audience and representatives of the press that personally I am not very dry. That, however, should not and does not influence my attitude toward prohibition or the enforcement acts on the State and Federal statute books.

"My district favors prohibition, and this sentiment at home among my constituents as a matter of course should determine my actions as an individual member of the Assembly, representing a district.

"No matter what your personal view may be, the prohibition amendment is part of the United States Constitution. When I went to Albany I stood up in front of the Secretary of State, raised my right hand to heaven and swore that I would uphold the Constitution of the United States and of the State of New York and all statutes enacted to carry into effect the constitutional provisos. The Mullan-Gage law merely defines what this State is willing to do to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment, something we are in duty bound to do, whether we like it or not."

The woman who had propounded the query arose to say that the question had not been answered to her complete satisfaction.

"Would the repeal of the Mullan-Gage law necessarily mean that this State was against the Eighteenth Amendment and the Federal enforcement law?" she asked. "We have no State law to aid the Federal Government in enforcing the customs laws, for instance, and yet no one construes that as meaning that this State would tolerate violation of those laws. I wonder if we could not continue a loyal and law abiding State even without the Mullan-Gage law?"

The Speaker on the Repealer.

"My own notion," said Speaker Machold, "is that if the Governor should sign the repeal bill, he would indicate very plainly that he was opposed not only to the Volstead law but to the Eighteenth Amendment itself."

At this point Mrs. Douglas Robinson arose. Senator Theodore Douglas Robinson, her son, was one of two Republican Senators who voted for the repeal bill on the final day of the session. Senator Robinson during the campaign had told the people of his district that he was wet, even though he represented a dry constituency.

"Couldn't a Republican consistently vote for repeal of the Mullan-Gage law on the ground that it was a bad law which should give way to a better statute or as a protest against the method of enforcement?" she asked.

"The Republicans as a party were opposed to repeal and did not hold that the law was bad," replied the Speaker. "If the object of either party had been to get a better law the logical way to go about it would have been to propose amendments."

The women applauded again. This brought discussion of the Mullan-Gage law to an end.

CHARGES A PLOT TO RAISE FARES

Speaker Machold Says Smith and Hylan Conspired to Fool the People.

Addressing the Republican County Committee at Bryant Hall, last night, Speaker Machold of the Assembly charged Governor Smith and Mayor Hylan with conspiring to "fool" the voters and "befog the traction issue" by concealing a provision in the defunct Smith-Walker New York City transportation bill designed to permit the city authorities to supplant by a higher fare the 5 cent fare of which the Mayor and Governor both in successive campaigns had proclaimed themselves the special champions.

Speaker Machold emphasized the fact that Mayor Hylan when he ran for re-election two years ago and Governor Smith in the campaign last year had both made a similar clause embodied in the Miller Transit Commission Law the target for bitter attacks, even though the Transit Commission had carefully refrained from exercising this power. Then, said the Speaker, they included in the more recent measure which they jointly sponsored a provision almost word for word identical in its bestowal of power. Mr. Machold laid upon the Governor full responsibility for the failure of the Legislature to afford the city some transit relief.

The Speaker attributed to Governor Smith a proposal, made, Mr. Machold said, in the course of his conferences with the Republican leaders of the Assembly, to let the city operate transit lines at a loss and make up deficits from taxes.

Sees Threat of Higher Fare.

"Governor Smith," the Speaker said, "has definitely allied himself with Mayor Hylan in an endeavor to fool those who elected him and befog the traction issue by hiding the fact that he has asked for the very increase of fares he was chosen to oppose. He has asked for this increase in such a way that the taxpayers and rentpayers of the Greater City will be compelled to pay all of it; he has consented to a plan to turn all of the utility interests of the people of the city over to the mercies of Tammany Hall, and in his abrogation of the principle of State regulation he has completely reversed himself.

"The present Transit Commission, created in 1921 to supplant the old Public Service Commission for the First District and to meet the needs of the millions who ride on New York transit lines every day, by constructing more lines and ending transit delays, carefully safeguarded the 5-cent fare, though the commission was empowered to increase fares if thought necessary. Costs were mounting and lines going into the hands of receivers, and yet the commission never exercised its power of increase and instead strictly guarded the 5-cent rate.

"But a great hue and cry was raised by the Mayor in his campaign for re-election, and his large majority he regarded as a protest against the provision empowering any increase. Last fall the Governor was the beneficiary of this same protest against Governor Miller and what the Democrats in this city alleged to be his intent to increase fares. Governor Smith after his inauguration joined with the Mayor in his campaign of vilification of the Transit Commission and in his effort to prevent the transit construction proposed by it. He sponsored a bill which was the Tammany alternative for the plan of the commission. This is known as the Walker-Donahue bill, and in it he proposed as one of its most important provisions that a new transit commission to be appointed by the Mayor with power to increase the fares if deemed necessary. The wording was almost exactly the same as that which had caused all the baseless protest against the Transit Commission."

Two Clauses Compared.

At this point Speaker Machold read the exact language of the two clauses to which he had alluded. That embodied in the Transit Commission law gives the commission power to alter fares provided for in franchises or contracts between transit corporations and the city to enable them to operate, limiting its application, however, to lines—other than street surface lines—not to be included in the uniform city contracted system contemplated by the Transit Commission act. In the Smith-Hylan bill there was no such limitation, but it was provided that consent of the Board of Estimate would be required in instances where it was proposed to change rates, covered by franchises or other contractual undertakings.

"The wording of these two provisions you will perceive to be almost exactly the same," Speaker Machold went on, "yet one of them, never enacted, was protested against in a political campaign, and the other inserted by those who profited by that campaign.

"The Governor in the legislation proposed by him in the Senate and the Assembly and in the conferences with Republican leaders would have no limitation of the principle of municipal ownership and operation which would compel the City's lines to be self-sustaining. I pointed out that the city could borrow no more than 10 per cent. of the total valuation of its real estate, that it could not build the new subways so sorely needed at a cost of approximately a billion dollars unless it bonded itself for the purpose, that it could not bond itself unless it made its own lines self-sustaining, and that it could not make them self-sustaining sufficiently to meet the approval of the Appellate Court, except by a charge sufficient to cover costs including operation, payment on the sinking fund, an amount equal to that which would be paid to the city in taxes by a private corporation, and interest on indebtedness. To this the Governor retorted with the proposal that the city should still charge a five cent fare, but make up the deficit in municipal operation by a levy upon the tax and rent payers. His policy was rule or ruin.

"Tammany has elected a Mayor. Tammany methods are well known. I consider that whether or not a Tammany Mayor is elected, New York City is entitled to a maximum of home rule compatible with safety to the people of the State. I conceded that the City Administration should have the right of construction, the right of ownership, and the right of operation. I asked only that the people of the State should retain the right of regulation of capitalization and service and that the municipally constructed, owned and operated subways be run on a business-like and sensible basis.

Says Smith Reversed His Stand.

"Tammany demands apparently had dulled the Governor's memory of his own previous utterances on the subject of State regulation. During his first term there came before him a bill turning over to the city of Buffalo not only operation and ownership but regulation of its public utilities. This bill provided what he now asks for New York City. He promptly vetoed it and in doing so said:

> This measure thus in effect abrogates all authority or control now exercised under the laws of the State. Regulatory powers are taken from the Public Service Commission and are allowed to be a matter of contract between the railroad company and the city. To annul all such provisions of law which regulate such public utilities in so great and important an area is revolutionary and manifestly unwise and improper. And the idea of municipal ownership did not contemplate freedom from regulation by State authority. It would be wrong to abrogate entirely a sovereign power and regulatory control of public utilities and submit the same to the terms of an agreement between the municipality and the railroad company, made solely without the consent of the latter, even if such surrender were confined to the municipality with whom the contract was made. Where such abrogation is broadened out to include a large territory outside the municipality affected, it is quite clear that such a revolutionary and dangerous action should not be permitted.

When I see before me a measure containing a joker of this magnitude, which proposed in a breath to abrogate the result of the years of conservatism in establishing regulations governing public utilities corporations and to place all these safeguards as to fares, service, use of safety appliances, limitations of capitalization and other matters equally important within the purview of a negotiation and a subsequent contract beyond the control of the Legislature, I cannot give my approval to the measure.

Position on Public Utilities.

"On the day before his first term expired the Governor sent to Governor Brough of Arkansas a telegram in which he declared:

> The State of New York has been committed to the policy of regulating public utilities by commission since July, 1907. While comparatively few cases under this policy has worked very satisfactorily. At first there were some conflicts in jurisdiction between the commission and localities, but practically all of such defects in the law have been remedied by legislative amendment or by interpretation of the courts. I think I am justified in saying that the system has worked very satisfactorily in this State.

"Commenting on the formation of the Public Service Commission, he had said:

> At the time of its formation in 1907 there were many who believed that the function of constructing rapid transit railroads should be divorced from the function of regulating public utility corporations generally. In my opinion, experience had demonstrated that they were right. I make this recommendation after years of observation.

"And then after Alfred E. Smith had retired to private life and been reelected as a Tammany Governor, he made this declaration on the subject of State regulation:

> In the fifteen years that have passed since the organization of the two Public Service Commissions we have had fifty-four Commissioners, and the Public Service Commission has not yet succeeded in being much more than an object of political patronage. I think that I am within the truth when I say that the theory itself never commanded a great amount of public respect. It makes little difference upon what you predicate it. The people in cities are unable to understand why the State interfered with the things that they believe to be local to themselves.

Shift of Policy Charged.

"So you have the same Governor shifting his ground completely on the question of State regulation, just as he had opposed in the Constitutional Convention of 1915 all the measures for reorganization of the State Government which he now advocates as absolutely essential to the welfare of the State. Perhaps his sudden shift on the question of transit regulation by the State may be explained by his statement in his message last January that 'in a democracy the people want the kind of government that suits the majority and not the kind that squares with some principle that has in all probability outgrown its usefulness.'

"This recitation of the facts and the issues in the controversy between the Governor and the Tammany administration on the one hand and the Republican majority in the Assembly on the other will better enable you to arrive at my own conclusion after careful observation that the Governor and the Mayor are not seeking anything but a new species of bunk by which to further befuddle the people in order that they may lose sight of what is going on.

"By making every charge which has no foundation in fact they seem to believe that the people of the State will accept at face value all the charges and entirely overlook the facts. That is a crass attitude which the people will not vindicate. More and more as they see that the Governor is responsible for a rule or ruin policy at the conference table with representatives of the Republican majority in the Assembly they will see that they are again being fooled by him and that he is seeking only a partisan advantage in making the issue last longer as a demagogic cry."

Defends Up-State Legislators.

Speaker Machold said the Republican members in the Assembly, whether representing New York City or up-State districts, had stood together in opposing the carrying out of what he declared was this self-evident intent of the Governor. The up-State men, the Speaker said, studied the New York City transit problem earnestly.

"They never opposed the Walker-Donahue bill because it was sponsored by the Governor and Mayor Hylan," Mr. Machold said. "In fact they were willing to concede all in it that was good. They even went so far as to give municipal construction, ownership and operation. But they did want to maintain the same 5-cent fare which has been upheld by the present Transit Commission, and so they refused to accept the proposal of the Governor that the fare be increased by the indirect method of a levy on the taxpayers and rent payers to make up any deficit caused by inefficient operation. And they also refused to give their consent to that provision of the Walker-Donahue bill which extended the power to increase fares to the Board of Estimate and Apportionment."

LIQUOR REPEAL BILL HEARING ON MAY 31

SIX DAILY IS THE RATE

Downing, Walker, Jesse, Reiburn, Roseman, Antin and O'Connor Bills Included.

Governor Smith announced yesterday that he would give a public hearing on the Dunnigan-Cuvillier bill to repeal the Mullan-Gage law at noon, standard time, on May 31. The hearing will be held at the Executive Chamber in Albany and will be one of the last scheduled for the thirty-day bill period.

Dates for hearings on thirty-one legislative measures were fixed by the Governor after a conference with his legal adviser, James S. Parsons, which lasted until the early morning hours yesterday. There will be a succession of hearings during the next two weeks, at the rate of half a dozen a day, the last to be held on June 1.

Among important measures on which the Governor has agreed to hear arguments are the Downing bills, repealing the Lusk laws, which provide a loyalty test for public school teachers and regulation of private schools by the Board of Regents. This hearing will be held on Tuesday next week at noon.

In the afternoon on May 29 the Governor will hear arguments for and against the bill introduced by Senate leader James J. Walker, which provides a uniform rate of $1 for 1,000 cubic feet of gas to consumers of this city. On the same day he will give a hearing on the O'Brien bill prohibiting service charges by gas companies in this city for use of meters. On May 31 arguments will be heard on the Jesse bills, which provide modifications in the Tenement House law, to which there have been many objections, to facilitate the remodeling of old dwellings into three-family apartments. A hearing on some other housing measures also will be held that day. On Tuesday next week the Governor will hear advocates and opponents of the Rosenman bill, relative to defenses in actions growing out of unjust rent agreements.

Five hearings will be held on Wednesday, including one on the Walker and Sherman bills which were introduced to remedy a situation arising out of the invalidation of the law under which New York City has been collecting a two cent. tax on National bank shares and upon another measure proposing to exempt from taxation property belonging to and exclusively used by organizations of veterans of the war.

On Thursday there will be a hearing on the Reiburn bill extending the operation of the emergency tax laws until May 1 next year; and on the Antin bill which would modify the Tenement House law to provide for reduction in the height of ceilings and permit dining bays instead of dining rooms in tenement flats. The O'Connor bill amending the penal law so as to define pool selling as a misdemeanor instead of a felony and provide that penalty for violation shall not be more than one year imprisonment also will come up for a hearing on Thursday. The hearings on Thursday will complete next week's schedule of public hearings.

DECLARES HARDING CAN'T SWAY SMITH

Senator Dunnigan Calls President's Dry Letter 'Interference' and Says It Is Futile.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, May 17.—In a statement issued here tonight Senator John J. Dunnigan, Democrat, of the Bronx, declared that President Harding's "interference" in the wet-and-dry fight in this State over the Mullan-Gage repeal bill would have no effect on the action of Governor Smith in signing the Cuvillier bill, "because he knows what the people of the State want." Senator Dunnigan sponsored a measure in the Upper House to repeal the State dry law.

"Why does the Federal Government employ former saloon-keepers as prohibition agents and expect the people to respect the law, when the agents themselves are seen in many public places drunk?" asked Senator Dunnigan in his statement.

The Senator returned to Albany tonight after a trip throughout the Western and Central part of the State. He declared that everywhere he went he found the same sentiment: "Repeal the Mullan-Gage law." He declared that there was absolutely no doubt now, in view of the letter that President Harding had written to a "prohibition fanatic" in Newburgh, that Governor Smith would sign the Cuvillier repeal measure.

Senator Dunnigan's statement follows:

> President Harding's letter to the Newburgh prohibition fanatic who called upon him yesterday, in the event of Governor Smith approving the Mullan-Gage repealer, to 'suspend' the Governor and those of us in the Legislature who voted for the bill as 'traitors,' bears out the threat made by the drys on the night of final adjournment, when the bill was passed, that at the opportune time they would bring most powerful influences at Washington to bear upon Governor Smith to veto the bill.
> "Of course this is so ridiculous that it does not require an answer. Still it shows to what extremes these drys have gone in their losing fight when they ask the President to suspend from the Legislature because we had the courage to vote as our constituencies desired.
> "President Harding's interference will have no effect whatever upon the action of Governor Smith, because he knows what the people in this State want. This is purely a State matter, and not a national one. We will prove to the people of this country by the repeal of this law the insincerity of the Federal Administration in enforcing prohibition. We have not yet had prohibition in this State, and we never will have.
> "This is an attempt by advocating the continuance of the Mullan-Gage law, to force a divided responsibility between New York State and the nation, and using our State law as a cloak to shield the Federal authorities from being compelled to do their distasteful duty. They have no desire to enforce the Volstead act, or they would have done so long ago. Governor Smith's action in striking this rotten law from the books will prove every contention that I make.
> "Why does the Federal Government employ former saloonkeepers as prohibition agents and expect the people to respect the law when the agents themselves are seen in many public places drunk?
> "One more big industry has been added to the nation's business—bootlegging. This interest, the same as all other big business, is being carefully protected at Washington, and it is generally known that some of the biggest men in the country are engaged in it, and the only reason they are not known to the public is because none of the big bootleggers have as yet been sent to jail. I am not in the habit of making rash statements, but if they were convicted, there might be some wholesale squealing, which would shock the nation. Big business, of course, must not be interfered with, or campaign contributions will not be forthcoming.
> "If the Federal Government wanted to stop the heavy flow of liquor in this State, they could do so within a week. They know where the whisky is coming from and they know how to stop it at its source.
> The biggest joke of the year came when Prohibition Director Canfield, after diligent search all over the Atlantic seaboard, had to be steered out to the three-mile limit by the newspaper men and have the rum fleet pointed out to him. Canfield tried to deny the existence of rum-runners until the reporters proved it to him. Then he went to Washington and told President Harding and then some ostensible drastic orders were issued, and the hum continues to flow."

The Rev. O. R. Miller, State Superintendent of the New York Civic League, in a statement just issued declares that Governor Smith is under no moral or legal obligation to sign the repealer. He says that if the Governor vetoes the bill he has a good chance of being nominated for Vice President of the Democratic ticket next year.

"The Democratic Party of this State," says Mr. Miller, "in its platform last Fall did not promise to repeal the Mullan-Gage prohibition enforcement act. Neither did Governor Smith promise this in any of his campaign speeches or recommend it in any of his messages to the Legislature. The Democratic Party platform simply promised to try to bring back beer and light wines, and that party has carried out its pledges and petitioned Congress through a resolution of our Legislature to so amend the Volstead act as to allow the sale of beer and light wines. That is all they promised to do. Hence, Governor Smith is under no moral or legal obligation to sign this Mullan-Gage Repeal bill. We believe he prefers not to sign it because of its consequences upon his political future, if he can find a good excuse for vetoing it, and a tremendous protest against the bill from all over the State will be such an excuse."

SEES GAIN BY SMITH IF HE VETOES REPEAL

Anderson Says Such a 'Shrewd' Stroke Would Make Governor a National Figure.

BALTIMORE, May 17.—William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, speaking on the subject, "The Curly Corkscrew and Its Crooked Cronies," at the annual dinner of the Men's Brotherhood of the First Methodist Episcopal Church here tonight, said that New York was apparently in danger of temporarily dropping to the level of Maryland and Massachusetts on the question of a State Prohibition Enforcement law.

"It is better to have lawed and lost than never to have lawed at all," he continued. "If the repeal is approved and the State, through the Governor, take action from that will strengthen sentiment and replace the non-refillable whisky bottle with the 'non-pull-out-able' enforcement cork.

"If Governor Tammany Governor of New York by defying the clamor of his party should make a supreme gesture of regard for law by vetoing the repeal of dry enforcement in his own State he will place himself by that one act in the front rank of the national figures of his own party and put the wet Republican organization of New York State in a hole which is probably not furnished with a bottom.

"A Governor of the greatest State in the Union who is sincere enough in his respect for law, or even merely shrewd enough, to do a thing of this kind, with the delegates of the largest State behind him, may conceivably hold the balance of power in the National Democratic Convention with its two-thirds rule. And as a candidate for re-election as Governor he could win in a walk against any wet or damp Republican who could be nominated.

"Charging that corrupt Republican leadership enabled the passage of the repeal by not calling a caucus in the Assembly, Dr. Anderson added:

"It is believed by public utterance made by President Harding in his letter to Mr. Wesley Walt of Newburgh, N. Y., concerning the responsibility of the States and of public officials to sustain and enforce the law to uphold the Eighteenth Amendment."

"Every effort," said the resolution, "made by public officials also in accordance with this utterance will be supported by the league and the friends of law and order throughout the country."

GET 3 OF 8 WANTED AS LIQUOR PLOTTERS

Ex-Commission Merchant and Drug Man Appear and Tug Skipper Is Arrested.

Only two of the eight men wanted in connection with the alleged alcohol smuggling operations of the British steamer Yankton appeared yesterday before United State Commissioner Hitchcock. A third was arrested at New Haven and a fourth was reported to be in Europe, but would return immediately. Federal agents are making a search in other cities for the other four men.

The two who appeared were Jacob A. Kirsch, formerly a well known commission merchant and recently acquitted of a charge of conspiracy in connection with the unloading of alcohol from the steamer Javary, and Nathan Scharlin. Abraham Scharlin, a brother of Nathan Scharlin, also wanted in the case, was reported by Colonel Thomas E. Felder, counsel for the three men, as being in Europe. Colonel Felder said that a cable had been sent directing his immediate return to this country. The hearing was set for next Thursday. In the meantime the two defendants were released in $5,000 bail each.

Scharlin is staying at the Hotel Pennsylvania, but he told Commissioner Hitchcock that his residence was in Chicago. Colonel Felder said that Scharlin was connected with one of the largest drug concerns in the country. Information from Chicago Wednesday night was that both Scharlins had been connected with the J. B. Scheur Company, a patent medicine corporation in that city.

The tug Alexander, alleged to have transshipped liquor from the Yankton off Montauk Point, was seized yesterday at New Haven, according to Government officials. Charles T. Cox of Brooklyn, captain of the tug, was arrested. He is one of the eight men for whom warrants were issued Wednesday.

Three men arrested in a restaurant at 171 Eldridge Street early yesterday, were arraigned before Magistrate Jacob Ellperin in Essex Market Court, and held in $5,000 bail each for examination on May 22, on a charge of having posed as revenue agents and extorted $5 from Max Ginsburg, restaurant keeper at 219 Eldridge Street. The men said they were Samuel Cohen of 198 Henry Street, a pugilist; William Creiger of 712 Sixth Street and Max Orlander of 850 Third Street.

The restaurant owner alleged that they obtained $5 from him under threat of arrest for violation of the dry law. He said that the men had a bottle of alleged whisky with them and asserted they would swear they had seized it in the restaurant. A private detective's badge was found in one of Creiger's pockets.

Albert Johnson of 675 Fifty-eighth Street, Brooklyn, and Samuel Johnson of 116 Charles Street, Hoboken, were convicted in the Federal Court in Newark yesterday, in two of three counts charging violation of the Volstead act. The trial lasted exactly 1 hour and 45 minutes. A third defendant, Robert Alexander of 689 Eighth Avenue, Manhattan, failed to appear.

The charges against the trio grew out of the seizure of the tugboat John L. Crane and a cargo of 502 cases of whisky and other liquors by Federal authorities in Staten Island Sound, on the night of Feb. 2. The tugboat was surrounded by a fleet of smaller boats and a brisk business in selling done. The defense presented no witnesses.

ENDORSES HARDING'S LETTER.

Anti-Saloon League Executive Committee Voices "Hearty Approval."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The letter written by President Harding to Wesley Walt of Newburgh, in which Mr. Harding said that the Federal Government would enforce the prohibition laws, was endorsed to-day by the Executive Committee of the Anti-Saloon League, in a resolution which expressed "hearty approval of the public utterance made by President Harding in his letter to Mr. Wesley Walt of Newburgh, N. Y., concerning the responsibility of the States and of public officials to sustain and enforce the law to uphold the Eighteenth Amendment."

"Every effort," said the resolution, "made by public officials also in accordance with this utterance will be supported by the league and the friends of law and order throughout the country."

PREUS FAILS TO LAND SEAT IN THE SENATE

Governor's Plan to Resign and Take Nelson's Place Blocked —Now an Open Fight.

LA FOLLETTE SEES CHANCE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, leader of the radical bloc, hopes to increase his hold in the next Senate through the special election which, it is announced today, is to be held in Minnesota on July 16 to elect a successor to the late Senator Nelson. He has decided to make a tour of the State in the interest of a Progressive Republican, as he did last year, when through his efforts Shipstead, a Farmer-Labor candidate, was elected over Senator Kellogg.

The news that Governor Preus would not come to the Senate through resigning and being appointed by his successor in the executive office, brought dismay to the regular Republican leaders. They had hoped that the Governor would be able in this way to prevent a fight which they admit favors a radical rather than a conservative Republican. The refusal of the Lieutenant Governor to accede to the request of Governor Preus and appoint him to the Senate in case of the latter resigning his State office brought joy to the radical camp.

Senator La Follette will probably start his tour of the country in Minnesota and devote a week to the primary campaign in the interest of a radical. The primary election will be held on June 18.

The La Follette control of the legislative situation in the next Senate is gradually increasing. Before the death of Senators Nelson and Nicholson, the Republican majority was ten. Senator Nicholson's successor being a Democrat, Walter E. Edge, appointed Monday, the Republican majority is now seven. Even should the regulars elect a successor to Senator Nelson, La Follette's hold will be strong enough to prevent any party measures not acceptable to the radical group from passing the Senate unless they receive the support of about ten Democrats.

Of the Senators classed as Republicans, fully ten are known to be favorable to the La Follette legislative policies. Therefore, Mr. La Follette will actually hold the balance of power in the next Senate. In addition to La Follette the Republicans who are expected to support the measures advanced by him include Senators Norris, Brookhart, Frazer, Shipstead, Borbeck, Ladd, Johnson, Kenyon and Capper. The last three will not be subservient supporters, but are counted upon to vote for most of the things urged by the radical farm bloc.

In addition to these Republicans, Senators Wheeler and Dill, Democrats, are now members of the Legislative Service Group which is directed by Senator La Follette.

Preus Calls Minnesota Election.

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 17.—A special primary and special election were called today by Governor J. A. O. Preus to fill the vacancy caused by the death of United States Senator Knute Nelson.

The Governor fixed June 18 for the primary and July 16 for the election.

The calling of the election sets at rest reports that Governor Preus intended to resign in order to become United States Senator. It was not indicated today whether he would be a candidate in the primary.

ADAMS COLORADO SENATOR.

Governor Ignores Wilson and Others in Making Choice.

DENVER, Col., May 17 (Associated Press).—Alva B. Adams of Pueblo is Colorado's new United States Senator. He was appointed today by Governor William E. Sweet. Senator Adams is a Democrat. He will succeed Samuel D. Nicholson, Republican, who died in April.

The new Senator is ranked as conservative. He is an attorney. He was born in Colorado and is a son of Alva Adams, three times Governor of Colorado.

Governor Sweet ignored recommendations of ex-President Woodrow Wilson, William G. McAdoo and William J. Bryan in making the appointment. Huston Thompson, a member of the Federal Trade Commission, was urged by the former Presidents, while Mr. McAdoo and Mr. Bryan asked the Governor to appoint Morrison Shafroth, son of ex-Senator Shafroth.

Senator Adams will serve until after the election to be held in the Fall of 1924, when a Senator will be elected to complete Senator Nicholson's term, which expires in 1926.

The appointment was carried through by Governor Sweet despite last minute efforts of a group of Progressive Democrats who opposed Senator Adams.

Senator Adams was born at Del Norte, Col., Oct. 29, 1875. He was graduated from Yale University in 1896, and completed his law course at Columbia University in 1898. Returning to Pueblo, he has practiced law there since.

He was a delegate-at-large to the Democratic National Convention in 1916. During the World War he served as a Major in the Judge Advocate General's Department.

In a statement issued following his appointment today, Senator Adams said:

"I believe that a further test of private ownership of our railroads, with continued Government supervision, should be made before our system is changed.

"Some parts of the Esch-Cummins railroad bill I do not endorse. I favor the repeal of the clause creating the Railroad Labor Board. It has not worked well.

"I am in favor of law enforcement, and that applies to the Eighteenth Amendment. Bootleggers, of course, are a menace, but they are not so much of a menace as the saloon.

"I am in favor of an adequate and effective line of defense. We ought to be better prepared than we were in 1917.

"The international policies of Senator LaFollette and those who agree with him do not meet my approval.

"The preservation of peace is of far greater importance than the success of political parties, and if the President and his party can promote world peace I shall be glad to support their efforts. I hope the Senate will give its consent to the protocol establishing United States membership in the International Court of Justice."

Clubwomen Ask Veto of Repealer.

The Brooklyn Women's Constitutional Committee met yesterday at the Woman's Club, 114 Pierrepont Street, Brooklyn, and adopted resolutions calling on Governor Smith to veto the bill to repeal the Mullan-Gage act. The resolutions were approved by the Alliance of Women's Clubs at a meeting held at the same place. They assert that they represent the views of 50,000 clubwomen.

City, the Government would not press him on the matter, but would, on the other hand, very cheerfully resort to the Hoboken piers, which are already owned by the United States and are in shape for the reception of the great liner.

Shipping Board officials would not comment on the Mayor's action. Chairman Lasker was out of the city and Vice Chairman O'Connor refused to say anything on the subject. Neither would Admiral Benson, one of the Shipping Board Commissioners, who had been supervising the reconditioning of the Leviathan.

It was learned, however, from reliable sources, that the Government did not look favorably upon any suggestion to try to condemn Pier 86 if the Mayor persisted, and thus take it over for the huge vessel's use. Some members of the Administration were not sufficiently versed in law to be sure of the Government's right to undertake such action. They, however, agreed that even if the pier were condemned, it would have to be paid for at a large price, while just across the Hudson River piers are piers amply able to take care of the Leviathan and already in possession of the Government.

No official knowledge of Mayor Hylan's reported stand has reached Washington, and in the absence of this it is difficult to obtain an authoritative statement of what the Government would do if it received such information.

ALTER TRANSIT PLAN, ASK HYLAN'S O. K.

There was no desire on the part of the members of the commission to say anything that might start a fresh controversy with the Mayor and other members of the Board of Estimate. "There isn't any catch in it," was the comment of Commissioner LeRoy T. Harkness on the Mayor's remarks concerning Mr. McAneny's letter.

The commission has offered to go a substantial distance in meeting the Mayor's wishes in its new proposals for the Brooklyn crosstown and Washington Heights lines.

The commission's original plan for the extension of the Broadway subway north proposed that it should be extended north from Fifty-ninth Street in Central Park West, and that in the vicinity of 110th Street it should turn eastward into Seventh Avenue, continuing thence north to 155th Street, and thence west under Coogan's Bluff to St. Nicholas Avenue.

Under the amended plan, this line will turn westward into Manhattan Avenue and thence along St. Nicholas Avenue to 162d Street, beyond which later extensions may be made to Inwood and Riverdale.

The only substantial difference between this plan and that put forth by the Mayor is that the commission proposed that the line be located in Central Park West south of 110th Street, while the Mayor suggested the use of Amsterdam Avenue north of Seventy-second Street. However, in recent modifications submitted by the Mayor to the Board of Estimate his plan has been altered to conform much more closely to that of the commission, so that the two plans can now, according to the commission's engineers, be considered as substantially identical. The commission estimates the full cost of this line at $46,000,000.

The route of the Brooklyn crosstown line has been split into four sections, so that the Board of Estimate, if there are any remaining differences of opinion about it, may, if it so elects, leave the subject of connections with existing lines to be settled at a later date. The main route, from Newtown Creek southerly to Fulton Street, Brooklyn, has been revised to agree with the corresponding route in the Mayor's plan. The Mayor's route, however, went only as far as its northern end as the Steinway tunnel line, Long Island City, which is operated by the Interborough. The commission felt that to provide the full facilities demanded the crosstown line should also connect with the existing rapid transit lines at the Queensboro Plaza.

Traces Brooklyn Line.

"The Jackson Avenue, Newtown Creek and Manhattan Avenue route; Manhattan Avenue, Roebling Street and Bedford Avenue route; Bedford Avenue, Fulton Street and Livingston Street route, and the Bedford Avenue-Brighton Beach Railroad connection.

"That first named begins at the Queensboro Plaza, where a connection can be made with the existing jointly operated Interborough and B. R. T. routes, and extends thence southerly and southwesterly along Jackson Avenue, private property, Jackson Avenue, Vernon Avenue, across Newtown Creek and into Manhattan Avenue, Brooklyn, to a point near Clay Street.

"The second begins at a point in Manhattan Avenue at or near Clay Street, thence runs southerly in Manhattan Avenue, beneath McCarren Park, under Roebling Street, private property and Roebling Street and to the Williamsburg Bridge Plaza, thence via Roebling Street once more, across private property and into Bedford Avenue, continuing in Bedford Avenue to a point near Halsey Street or Hancock Street.

"Provision for the traffic problem in lower Fulton Street, in the vicinity of Flatbush Avenue, is made in the third section of the crosstown route, which begins at the termination of the second section, between Hancock and Halsey Streets, continuing southwesterly under and across private property, Spencer Place and private property to a point in Fulton Street at or near Franklin Avenue. Thence the line turns to the west in Fulton Street and continues west to a point near Fort Greene Place, where it continues along, across and under Lafayette Avenue, private property, intervening streets and Livingston Street to a point in the latter street about 300 feet west of Flatbush Avenue.

"This section will also have a three-track branch, starting at or near Fulton Street and Fort Greene Place, to provide a connection with the Fourth Avenue subway at or near Ashland Place, Brooklyn. Two tracks of this branch are to continue under Fulton Street to or near Ashland Place, while the third is to extend under Lafayette Avenue and under and across private property, Ashland Place and private property to a point in Fulton Street at or near Rockwell Place.

"The fourth section, which need not be constructed if not desired, provides the connection from the crosstown subway to the existing Brighton Beach line of the B. R. T. system. This will leave the main crosstown stem at or near Hancock Street and Bedford Avenue and thence extend southerly and under and across private property, Fulton Street, private property, Brevoort Place, private property, Franklin Avenue, private property and Atlantic Avenue to the open cut right of way of the Brighton Beach line. It will continue under this right of way and rise to a point where a connection can be made with the Brighton Beach route, or with another city-owned line that may be determined upon, at or near Eastern Parkway. If this section is constructed and linked up with the Brighton line and the crosstown line joined up at its northern end with the existing lines in Queens, the 'Ocean to Sound' route, long contemplated in rapid transit plans, will become an actuality. This result can also be attained without the necessity of linking with the Brighton Beach line, if that be determined, by building the independent line parallel with the Brighton line to Sheepshead Bay and the ocean. From the intersection of Fulton Street and Bedford Avenue, westward in Fulton Street, the crosstown route, as now proposed by the commission, will make possible the future removal of the elevated road in Fulton Street through the congested business section of Brooklyn and permit the construction of the badly needed Ashland Place connection."

Advantages in New Lines.

The commission expressed belief that a two-track line, which could be built for $40,000,000, would meet the need at present. If a four-track line was built, the estimated cost was $65,000,000. In discussing the advantages of the two lines the commission said:

"The crosstown line will prove of immense value in the potential transfer privileges it offers. At the northerly end it would connect with the recapturable lines stretching north to Astoria and eastward to Corona and Flushing, and westward into Manhattan, while at North Seventh Street it will cross the route of the Fourteenth Street-Eastern line. At the Williamsburg Bridge Plaza it passes directly beneath the location of the new Williamsburg Bridge Plaza station of the Williamsburg Bridge-Broadway route. This location was determined upon only a few days ago by the commission, the proposed layout of the crosstown line being one of the moving reasons for putting the station upon the Plaza. The stations of the two lines will be interconnected with stairways and passageways.

"At Myrtle Avenue and at Lexington Avenue the new line will run beneath two elevated lines, stations upon which, one block distant, can be relocated to form more direct transfer points. It will also be only one block distant, in Bedford Avenue, from the Franklin Avenue station of the Fulton Street elevated line. In the event that the section providing for a connection with the existing Brighton Beach line or with a new city-owned line be not now built, this station also can doubtless be shifted to the vicinity of Bedford Avenue and Fulton Street.

"The connection at Ashland and Rockwell Places, in Fulton Street, with the Fourth Avenue subway would provide another connection with a line fully recapturable by the city.

"The Washington Heights extension of the Broadway subway, which will give vastly needed relief to one of the most rapidly growing sections of the city, will also, as pointed out, make possible the greater utilization of a highly expensive and at present half-used trunk line. The present express tracks of the Broadway subway cannot be used to full capacity north of Times Square, merely because the traffic does not exist to results them. While the Broadway subway is adequately supplied with feeders on its Brooklyn end, it is without such facilities in Manhattan.

"By carrying this line over to Central Park West and arranging for a central station in the vicinity of Central Park West and Sixty-first or Sixty-fourth Street,

TALK OF CUNO MOVE DISTURBS FRENCH

They Fear Any New Reparation Offer Might Please London and Rome but Disappoint Paris.

DREAD SPLIT AMONG ALLIES

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 17.—Reports from Berlin that Chancellor Cuno is preparing to make a new reparations offer are received here with considerable distrust.

It is obvious that any new offer contemplated will be in reply to the invitations of Lord Curzon and Premier Mussolini to Cuno to try again, and the French are now afraid that such an attempt by the German Chancellor will be so directed as to appear reasonable to Great Britain and Italy, while not satisfying the French and Belgian demands, and so may cause a split between the Allies.

This possibility is one which the French regard with great misgiving, but the determination to maintain the French position in the event of a new offer being either insufficient or unaccompanied by those guarantees which they deem absolutely necessary is as strong as ever. Even M. Loucheur, head of the Liberal Party, whose ideas for settlement of the reparations question have always approached more nearly those of the British statesmen than have those of M. Poincaré, declared in a speech last night that France must remain in the Ruhr until she had been paid. When the operation began, he said, he was opposed to it, not because he didn't think that measures of coercion would have to be used toward Germany, but because he was still hoping to obtain the cooperation of Great Britain in whatever measures were taken.

"But now," he said, "every Frenchman, of every political party, ought to be behind the flag which is unfuried in the Ruhr. France is not asking the impossible. The plan submitted by the Government last January afforded a reasonable solution. But the question of reparations and that of interallied debts must be dealt with at the same time."

France was willing to cancel all debts of her Allies, and from conversation he had with Premier Bonar Law and Stanley Baldwin, M. Loucheur said he was able to state that Great Britain was willing to do the same.

Loucheur Wants Our Gold.

On the other hand, said M. Loucheur, America had proved a great disillusion. Some one, he said, "must intervene in order that Germany might have a chance to meet her obligations by means of an international loan. But America, in holding back, is running the risk of a great crisis. Gold is of value only in proportion as it is used to advantage, and America has only one course open to her: To lend at once that of which she has too much. If she does not, she will ruin herself."

Speaking of the Ruhr occupation, the former treaty negotiator said it was only a means, not an end in itself. It had not yielded much, but it showed the determination of France to be paid. The occupation of the Ruhr was a guarantee, and should never be abandoned until Germany had fulfilled her engagements.

With the question of reparations the question of guarantees was closely linked, but yet apart. The compact of guarantees between Britain, America and France had never been ratified, and there must be something to take its place. No one in France, he affirmed, ever dreamed of annexing the left bank of the Rhine. "We don't want Rhineland Deputies in the Chamber, always leading protests; we don't want 10,000,000 Germans in our country," he asserted, adding: "But we don't want the left bank of the Rhine to remain under Prussian domination, because that means militarism and a spirit of perpetual vengeance. The Rhineland provinces must become independent, though attached economically and politically to Germany."

All that France wanted, he said, was a guarantee that no military preparations could be made along the Rhine. She wanted the railroads to be placed under some form of international control, which would see to it that while merchandise was carried freely, no munitions of war could be brought near the French frontier.

He knew that he wouldn't have international opinion with him when he asked that an army corps should be kept in the bridgeheads. That was, however, the only real security France could have which would enable her to work within her confines at peace and with quiet of mind. Until some such guarantee of security had been obtained every Frenchman must be prepared for the occupation of the Ruhr to continue.

Ruhr Not Held for Security

PARIS, May 17 (Associated Press).—The military occupation of the Ruhr by French troops is not necessary to the security of France, Premier Poincaré informed the members today. The occupation of the Ruhr, he added, is essentially an operation designed to coerce Germany into paying reparations. He reiterated that the Ruhr would be gradually evacuated in proportion to the payment of German reparations. The occupation of the left bank of the Rhine was considered by the Government as sufficient military security.

Incidentally, M. Poincaré, in reviewing the four months' occupation and asking the commissions to approve credits for continuation of the operation, informed the deputies that the receipts from the Ruhr since January 11 had covered the strictly military expenses which the occupation entailed. The cost of the Ruhr troops to the treasury, after deducting the amount which it would have been necessary to provide for these soldiers had they remained in France, amounted to 61,000,000 francs, and the expenditures for civilians 2,650,000 francs.

The receipts from customs, licenses, forests and fines amounted to 36,000,000 francs, and receipts from seizures of coal and coke to 36,680,000 francs, thus creating an approximate equilibrium between expenses and receipts.

The Premier pointed out that effective coal and coke transportation out of the Ruhr began only on March 15 last.

The figures furnished by the Premier are for the period from Jan. 11 to May 1, and do not include the operating expenses of the railroads and other advances of a purely operative character, which, it is reported, will amount to nearly 100,000,000 francs.

France is prepared to prolong the occupation as long as needful to obtain results. While the operation had not yet proved remunerative, it had at least covered the military expenses and would make coercion easier and more efficacious.

In response to a query by Deputy Vincent Auriol, the Premier declared that the French Government was resolved to insist upon the final reparation figures as fixed by the London accord, and that before it would agree to a reduction of the German debt an equal amount must be eliminated from the interallied debts as compensation.

Deputy Paul Reynaud then inquired as to whether the Ruhr occupation was linked with the question of the security of France, and the Premier replied in the negative, assuring the Deputies that occupation of the left bank of the Rhine was security enough.

CUNO MAY ANSWER NOTES NEXT WEEK

But Berlin Is Confident That He Will Not Increase the Thirty Billion Offer.

By CYRIL BROWN.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, May 17.—The Cuno Government intimates that its answer to the Curzon and Mussolini notes may be sent next week, though this is uncertain. It is relatively certain, however, according to the present official state of mind, that any new reparation offer will not raise the basic figure of 30,000,000 gold marks, but that its main emphasis will be placed on an elaboration of the so-called guarantees for foreign reparation loans.

To this end conversations are taking place between Chancellor Cuno and leaders of German industry and finance, as well as political leaders. The result may safely be forecast as a compromise which will satisfy nobody, including the Allies.

The Social Democratic Party is exploiting the Cuno Government's dilemma by launching a revolutionary land reform program. Before the adjournment of the Reichstag the Social Democrats introduced the draft of a new "ground reform law under the slogan "land for the people," tantamount to a far-reaching expropriation of land. The kernel of the proposed law is that "private owners of more than 750 hectares of arable land or more than 100 hectares of forest land must give over the excess to the Reich, subject to compensation at the rate of assessment for the capital tax." It is proposed that the German Reich, the Federal States and municipalities shall enjoy prior rights in acquiring such expropriated land. Farm laborores on expropriated land are to enjoy first privileges to acquire small parcels as settlers.

Cleavage Over Reparations.

The Reichstag adjourned today over the Whitsuntide holidays, after a week of futile debate on the foreign policy in connection with the reparation notes.

Chancellor Cuno received the Social Democrats' leader, Dr. Mueller, this morning, and pleaded with him to refrain from discussing the Curzon and Mussolini notes and the reparation problem in the Reichstag today, but without avail. For tactical political reasons the Social Democrats, through Dr. Mueller as spokesman, went on record as favoring a new, more precise and improved proposal for Germany to "go the limit" in paying reparations, the payments to be guaranteed and effected from Germany's "gold values," industries and agriculture.

The German Nationalists, however, through their spokesman, Dr. Hergt, came out strongly, and even violently, against making any further reparation proposals.

Chancellor Cuno, who was present in the Reichstag, kept his seat and said nothing. Foreign Minister Rosenberg, in a brief statement, said the Government could say nothing, as the notes were being carefully studied, and it would be against Germany's best interests to say anything inclusive of what the Government might propose to do.

A spokesman for the Government Coalition Parties expressed confidence in the Cuno Government, and agreed that present discussion of the reparations problem in the Reichstag would be premature. Then the Reichstag adjourned for the holidays, the question of reparations not an inch nearer solution.

At the same time the powerful National Association of German Industries, meeting yesterday and this morning, made representations of a significant character to the Chancellor to the effect that the "offers contained in the last German note were already too high."

There has now developed sharp political division on the reparations question, foreshadowing a struggle with Chancellor Cuno as more or less the storm centre. The bulk of the small propertied classes are opposed to bearing the brunt of reparation payments and hence oppose increasing the thirty billion mark offer. On the other hand, the Social Democrats, in order to save the Rhineland and Ruhr, are enthusiastic for having the propertied classes mulcted to the limit for reparations.

This new line of cleavage is very noticeable in the German People's Party. Its leader, Dr. Stresemann, has come out openly in favor of the thesis that all Germans who can must pay for all they are worth, and that the whole German economic, industrial, agricultural, business and financial world must make the heaviest concrete cash and property sacrifices, as reparation payments to the limit provide the only possible way of securing Germany's independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity.

BERLIN REPORTS GOLD BEING SHIPPED HERE

After Paying Belgium 58,500,000 Gold Marks, 60,000,000 Are Said to Be En Route Here.

BERLIN, May 17.—The fourth payment by Germany to meet the Treasury bills advanced to Belgium for settlement of Belgium's claims during the last half of 1922 was made by the Government yesterday. This installment amounted to 58,500,000 gold marks.

Noting this payment, the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung to-day says:

"In connection with the foregoing we learn in official quarters that a shipment of 60,000,000 gold marks already is en route to America."

The newspaper does not explain this connection, but it adds that the sum will be accounted for in the next statement of the Reichsbank.

The three previous payments on the Treasury bills given to Belgium were, respectively, 47,400,000 gold marks, 48,600,000 gold marks, and 47,400,000 gold marks. The final installment of 60,000,000 gold marks is due on June 15.

New York bankers who have maintained relations with not only the private banking institutions of Germany but also the Reichsbank in the past three or four years, said yesterday that they had received no notice of the reported 60,000,000 gold marks in transit from Germany to this country, for an unannounced reason. In consideration, however, of the present efforts of Germany to bolster her exchange, local bankers said such a shipment might have been made, in which case they would shortly receive instructions from Berlin as to the disposition of the marks on their arrival.

Germany has been a heavy buyer of cotton, wool, copper and rats in the New York and other American markets during the past fortnight, but for the past four or five years Germany has maintained heavy balances in the United States, sometimes exceeding $100,000,000, and for this reason the reported shipment of 60,000,000 more gold marks would present more or less of a problem to the bankers here.

The suggestion was made by one international banker, who has handled many German payments to American producers this year, that the consignment of mark currency might be for the account of an exchange transaction between London and Holland, wherein dollar balances were to be called upon to settle the bill for exchanges which had already been bought by the Reichsbank.

LORD CURZON FIRM WITH SOVIET ENVOY

He Is Understood to Have Told Krassin He Stands on Demands in Note.

ULTIMATUM STILL IN FORCE

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 17.—Leonid Krassin, Soviet Commissar for Foreign Trade, visited Lord Curzon at the Foreign Office this morning and had an interview lasting for two hours. Lord Curzon had with him Ronald McNeill, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs; Sir Eyre Crowe, Permanent Under Secretary, and other experts.

The nature of the conversation has not been divulged officially, but the correspondent of THE NEW YORK TIMES understands from trustworthy authority that Lord Curzon took and maintained the line of "no compromise." He informed M. Krassin that the British Government declined to discuss any proposal that did not comply fully with the demands of the British note. It was for the Soviet Government to say "yes" or "no," and if M. Krassin desired to communicate with Moscow he might have a few extra days in which to do so. In short, Lord Curzon merely reiterated in summary Ronald McNeill's speech in the House of Commons to which M. Krassin was an interested listener.

Meanwhile M. Krassin is attempting to win more adherents to the Russian cause. He has induced his British sympathizers to approach two eminent ex-Ministers who are known to have tried to persuade the Government to agree to a regular conference on all matters in dispute. They have refused emphatically to be parties to any pressure upon the Ministry.

Attempts to gain more friends for Russia in the House of Commons are being made in other directions, with no success. Ramsay Macdonald has been inundated with letters pointing out that the Soviet Government's repudiation of its just debts will prevent the resumption of trade, whether the agreement is canceled or not, and suggesting that he place this view before M. Krassin.

Before the House of Commons adjourned today until May 28 there was a resumption of debate on the Government's attitude toward Russia. Ronald McNeill in a general reply to the Government's critic took the line that the Government's policy toward Russia was fully explained on Tuesday. Then, to make it clear that the Government was not weakening in its attitude, the Under-Secretary added:

"If the Russian Government complies with the reasonable demands of the British note the British Government will be satisfied. If the demands are not complied with, subject to small extensions of time, as the House has already been warned, Mr. Hodgson will leave Moscow."

The Under Secretary's statement rather startled the House and Ramsay MacDonald told Mr. McNeill he had misled the Opposition. He asked whether the House could be informed of what passed at M. Krassin's interview with Lord Curzon.

Mr. McNeill, warmly protesting against the imputation that he had misled the House, replied that there was an honorable understanding that nothing should be said about the Foreign Office interview.

Charles Roberts intervened with a reminder to the Government that it had given a pledge that there should be no rupture with Russia until Parliament had been consulted.

Stanley Baldwin, Acting Premier, who had been sent for, arose and declared that Mr. Roberts was mistaken. The pledge given, he said, did not relate to a possible rupture, but was that "the action of the Government would be submitted to the House if they were forced to take action." Then, in a tone remarkably different from that of Mr. McNeill, he assured the House that the Government was adopting a conciliatory attitude, that he hoped that the British demands would be fairly and reasonably met, and that "a rupture might not be essential." At the same time, he said, the Government absolutely reserves its power of action, and it could not be tied merely because the House was not sitting.

LONDON, May 17 (Associated Press).—Discussion arose in the House of Commons today between the Government spokesmen and the Laborites as to the actual significance of the long conference between the Foreign Secretary and M. Krassin. The Laborites made evident their fear that, in the course of the Whitsuntide recess the Government might take some step against Russia without Parliamentary consent.

Replying to questions, the Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Ronald McNeill, contended that the British ultimatum to Moscow still stood, and that all that had been done was to give time to M. Krassin in which to communicate with his Government.

Finally an appeal was made to Stanley Baldwin as leader of the House and acting Premier. Mr. Baldwin supported Mr. McNeill's view and declared that, should it become obvious that no agreement was possible with the Soviet, the Government could not be tied in its action by the fact that Parliament was not sitting. At the same time he was hopeful of a favorable issue. On being closely pressed by Mr. Macdonald, he admitted that this did not necessarily mean acceptance of the British ultimatum word for word and comma for comma, but general satisfaction of the British demands.

BRYAN IS BEATEN IN MODERATOR RACE

this time he felt it his duty to nominate Dr. Wishart.

The Rev. Dr. Minot C. Morgan of Detroit in seconding the nomination of Dr. Walker said:

"He will not raise any issue between Christianity and evolution. I desire that you will not elect one who will repel the student mind."

The opening religious service was held this morning in the first Baptist Church. It began with a celebration of the Lord's Supper, with the Rev. Dr. Calvin C. Hays of Johnstown, Pa., the retiring Moderator, presiding. He was assisted by the Rev. Dr. Leeds Seymour Mudge of Philadelphia, stated clerk of the Assembly; the Rev. Dr. Matthew P. Smith, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of this city, and the Rev. Dr. Frederick S. Taylor, pastor of the First Baptist Church, who is President of the Northern Baptist Convention. Dr. Hayes preached his sermon as retiring Moderator.

Hays Urges Relief for Ministers.

This evening Will H. Hays, head of the motion picture industry, who is a lay commissioner from the Presbytery of Indiana, made a speech at a mass meeting held under the auspices of the Board of Ministerial Relief and Sustenance, to launch a campaign for a fund of $15,000,000 to be added to the Ministers' Pension Fund.

He declared that the material compensation of ministers was less on the average than that of an alien ditch digger, that the situation was "an economic and moral crime." He made a plea for a general readjustment of the salaries of ministers. He said in part:

"Religion is the one essential industry in the world. We discuss and cry from high and low places for this and that readjustment. We spin theories and political economies; we cry for fuller freedom and more rigorous regulation, and in all the reaching for this or that, we have managed and will manage to lift yet higher and higher, but the reconstruction and readjustment of our people made necessary by the advance of civilization, the right use of our increased prosperity, power and influence in the world can only be insured if the spirit of Christianity is incarnated in our people through the work and the preaching of the Church; and our new and necessary social adjustments must be in line with its teachings or they will not endure. And yet while we plead for labor's remuneration and capital's proper consideration and for the thousand and one more or less necessary things, we ignore the continued pauperization of the preacher.

"There are many outstanding problems ahead that wise men will recognize and find ways to solve. Responsible citizens cannot avoid a personal responsibility for their solution. We quickly must find the ways and means of making automatically certain the impossibility of conflicts between great basic economic and industrial forces such as was almost precipitated in the strikes of last year, or our democracy is a failure. That can be done. We have to find the solution of other problems of successful representative government, and we will. And we simply must, not as a matter of charity in any sense, not even as a matter of justice, essential as justice is, but as a matter of sheer common sense and good judgment, if we would have the world's essential industry endure, if we would have the Church of Jesus Christ preserved as the holding thread in our moral, social and commercial fabric and the one impelling element of causation in our progress, if we are to progress—we simply must take a hold of this matter of the underpaid preacher and adjust it.

"The first phase of the whole problem and the one for immediate consideration is the provision of an adequate pension for our own Presbyterian ministers. You have adopted for your slogan 'a pension for every Presbyterian minister, and from every Presbyterian Church a full share of the cost.'

"We could not exist as a nation if we did not have among us, working early and late, interpreters of God, reminding us in days of prosperity, as in days of adversity, that, in the last analysis, the eternal things are the only things that count.

"And what do we do for those who furnish the leaven for our individual lives and for our national life? We give them hand-to-mouth living. We give them what amounts in many cases to grinding poverty. We give them exhausting labor without making adequate provision for them when the labor shall have exhausted them. We hang the dread of old age like a millstone about their necks. We provide for our own old age; we speak with scorn of those who fail so to provide, who become a public charge, who allow their dependents to become a public charge after their death. But those who fulfill what is, at its best, the highest function in a community which any man can fulfill, we give to those a pittance without hope of provision for the future!

"We ask them to lead us to the kingdom of heaven; in our joys and perplexities and griefs we ask them to interpret to us the laws of eternal life; but we say to them, 'you shall not only show us the light, you shall not only serve us and our children day in and day out, but you shall know poverty and want; your wife shall work from early morning till late at night; she shall have no help; she shall wash her own dishes, sew her own clothes and her children's clothes or be dependent on the generosity of your parishioners for their cast-off garments. And all the while she too shall serve the parish. She shall be a leader among the women, at her husband's right hand, the first in good works. Together you shall receive, keep you and your family clothed and fed, about $30 a week—scarcely more than the wage of the garbage collector, one-half the wage of a carpenter, one-third the wage of a mason. For the building of the walls of the temple, one-third the wage of the bricklayers on an apartment house!

"The 10,000 Presbyterian clergymen receive an average salary of $34.67 per week."

SCHURMAN WARNS PEKING OFFICIALS

which has not been paid for eighteen months, threatens revolt with consequent looting. The bandits are becoming more nervous, fearing treachery on the part of the troops after the delivery of the hostages, with a possible raid for their rescue while the conference sits.

This explains the removal on Tuesday of the captives further into the narrowing valley, where it will be more difficult for the national troops to attack. Nearly 300 bandit chieftains at a conference Tuesday said they would not deliver the prisoners until they had received assurance more positive than those offered. The rescue mission is becoming more doubtful of its success.

Another Captive Out on Parole.

PEKING, May 17 (Associated Press).—The Frenchman, V. Barube, among the captives held by the bandits, has been released on parole and arrived at Tsaochwang with further demands from the captors for the removal of the troops. It is expected he will return to the bandit headquarters today in accordance with the promise he made on leaving.

SHANGHAI, May 17 (Associated Press).—The bandits will not kill their foreign captives, but will hold them many weeks in the opinion of General Ho Feng-yu, Chinese military commander of the district in which the brigands' stronghold is located, according to direct advices received here today by the Associated Press. General Ho's statement follows:

"My troops had the bandits surrounded shortly after their raid on the Shanghai-Peking Express. If foreign officials had not interfered, I would have told the outlaws if a single foreigner were injured I would cut off the heads of every one of the brigands, down to the last man of the thousands that compose their bands.

"They know me, and they know I would keep my word. Consequently, I am sure they would have released their foreign captives.

"However, the foreign officials obliged me to withdraw my troops and the bandits have escaped back into the mountains, whither it is almost impossible to follow them."

HUGHES IS CRITICAL OF PEKING OFFICIALS

State Department Announcement Says They Will Undoubtedly Try to Shift Blame to Powers.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Hopes that the Americans and others held captive by Chinese train bandits near Linching may now soon be released were raised in official circles today when the State Department was advised that the Legation at Peking had been notified by Consul Davis and Major Philoon that the bandits would be ready to negotiate with the Chinese authorities at noon today. Yang I-teh, a Chinese Government official, was to leave this morning for the bandit stronghold to negotiate for the release of the prisoners.

After a scrutiny of its confidential advices the State Department, in its statement today, became decidedly critical of the Chinese authorities, stating that the "Chinese Government will undoubtedly do everything possible to shift the blame on the foreigners for everything that goes wrong, and on account of this the diplomatic body has steadfastly refused to take any part in the negotiations with the bandits, which the Chinese Government might use as an excuse to shirk or shift its own obvious responsibility."

The Portuguese Minister, who is dean of the diplomatic body at Peking, handed a sharp note yesterday to the Acting Minister of Foreign Affairs. The note read:

"In view of the assurances received from the representatives of the Chinese Government before the meeting of May 14, the Diplomatic Corps believed that it could count upon the immediate release of the prisoners held captive by the brigands of Shantung. The Diplomatic Corps has been astonished to ascertain that these prisoners have not been freed and that the negotiations entered upon with a view to their release appear to be interrupted for reasons which have not yet been explained.

"The Diplomatic Corps again emphasizes the responsibility which devolves upon the Chinese Government in this regard and waits with impatience for it to take without further delay efficacious measures for the liberation of the prisoners. It reserves the right to fix at a later date the nature and scope of the sanctions which the delay in the settlement of this deplorable affair entail and which will be destined to prevent its recurrence.

"The dean of the Diplomatic Corps is directed to recall the undertaking of the Chinese Government regarding the investigation entrusted to the International Commission now convened at Tsao Chang and requests to be informed of the instructions sent to the representatives of the Chinese Government. The Diplomatic Corps is greatly surprised to learn that on May 14 the representative of the Foreign Office alleged that he had not received their instructions."

The vigorous tone of this communication with the threat of future action by the powers with a view to preventing recurrence of such outrages, it is believed here, may have had much to do with the announcements that negotiations were about to be undertaken for the release of the prisoners. The commission referred to in the concluding paragraph of the memorandum is understood to be the Commission of Foreign Officers, which the diplomatic body informed the Chinese Government last week had been appointed to investigate steps to be taken by the Chinese Government for the greater protection of railways and particularly the lives and property of foreigners traveling on these roads.

Subsequent to the receipt of its latest advices, the State Department late this afternoon issued a supplementary statement as follows:

"The department has been informed by the legation in Peking that a telegram has been received by the legation from Consul John K. Davis and Major Philoon at Linching to the effect that the bandits have stated that they will be ready to negotiate with the Chinese authorities at noon May 17. Consul Davis and Major Philoon have been informed by the Minister of Communications and Yang I-teh that the latter will depart on the morning of the 17th in order to negotiate.

"The legation at Peking has further informed the department that up to May 16 the siege of Paotzeku had apparently not yet been raised, as the bandits had again sent out a messenger demanding the withdrawal of the troops. The bandits have all along made the withdrawal of the troops a prerequisite to negotiations for the release of the foreign captives.

"It is probable, although not certain, that the unwillingness of General Ho, who is not a Chili Party man, to withdraw his troops, has caused the delay and confusion in this matter. General Ho's troops had almost succeeded in starving out the brigands on Paotzeku when the train was wrecked by another brigand band, the captured the foreigners probably for the purpose of using them to trade for the release of their besieged comrades. There is much talk that the enemies of the Chili Party staged the outrage in order to embarrass the present Cabinet.

"Apparently the terms of the brigands have not yet been formulated. Nevertheless, they are understood to be the raising of the Paotzeku siege and the taking of all the bandits into the Chinese Army. Apparently the bandits have not yet demanded a cash ransom. The Minister of Communications, Admiral Wu Yu-lin, has been at Linching since last week and has made several reports, all of which, however, have been rather indefinite.

"The Minister of Communications admits that he is not sure what the brigands' terms are, but nevertheless blames the magnitude of them on foreign interference. The Chinese Government will undoubtedly try to shift the blame on the foreigners for anything that goes wrong, and on account of this the diplomatic body has steadfastly refused to take any part in the negotiations with the bandits, which the Chinese Government might use as an excuse to shirk or shift its own obvious responsibility."

FIND FRANCE INFRINGED AN AIRPLANE INVENTION

Courts Condemn Government and Three Manufacturers to Pay $500,000.

PARIS, May 17 (Associated Press).—Breguet, Caudron and Farman, three of France's leading airplane manufacturers, codefendants with the State in suits brought by Robert Esnault-Pelterie for infringement of patents, were ordered by the French civil courts to-day to pay to the plaintiff damages aggregating 7,500,000 francs (about $500,000).

The suits grew out of the use in the defendants' airplanes of Esnault-Pelterie's invention for steering and stabilizing, known in the vernacular of the airdromes as the "broomstick," or "joystick." The actions have been before the courts since 1907.

The Government was brought into the case because of its alleged failure to protect the inventor's patents, registered with the Ministry of Commerce, and because the Ministry of War purchased from the defendant builders during the war a great number of machines equipped with the invention. The Court ruled that the Government abetted the infringements by insisting upon the use of the "broomstick," and even supplying it to those manufacturers working for the Government.

Breguet and the Government were jointly assessed 3,000,000 francs, Caudron and the Government jointly 2,500,000 francs, and Farman and the Government jointly 250,000 francs. In addition the Government alone was directed to pay damages of 1,750,000 francs.

GREEKS AND TURKS ON VERGE OF BREAK

Venizelos and Ismet Pasha Fail to Reconcile Reparations Differences.

CONFERENCE GETS PROBLEM

Greek Spokesman Asks Financial Commission to Consider Them—Snarl Worries Allies.

LAUSANNE, May 17 (Associated Press).—The great festival of Bairam, when the followers of Mohammed relax and rejoice after their thirty days of fasting, brought no repose or gaiety to Ismet Pasha today, nor luck to the Near East conference.

The situation between Turkey and Greece tonight over the problem of reparations is grave, and the conference presumably is imperilled because all direct efforts today by Ismet Pasha and Eleutherios Venivelos to settle this dangerous issue out of court failed absolutely. The Angora and Athens leaders, after a fruitless discussion, agreed to disagree and submit the issue to the conference in an attempt to find a solution.

Out of respect for the Turks' religion, the Allies proposed that no formal session of the conference be held today, but the Greco-Turkish reparations dispute is so serious that both Venizelos and Ismet felt justified in utilizing the festival by striving to reach an accord. M. Venizelos took the initiative, suggesting a meeting with the noted Turkish General, perhaps with the idea that the Bairam festival would exercise a softening influence on the controversy.

Both the Greek leader and Ismet used gentle words, but neither succeeded in piercing the other's armor of resistance. Ismet insisted that Turkey could pay no reparations whatsoever to Greece, but expected to receive an equitable sum for damages caused by the Greek armies in Asia Minor, when, he asserted, they burned towns and villages during their retreat and laid waste the whole countryside.

Turkey, he declared, could not abandoon the principle of reparations by Greece, but in a spirit of conciliatioon stood ready to leave the fixing of the actual amount to arbitrators.

M. Venizeloos pleaded Greece's cause with fine eloquence. He painted a picture of Greece struggling to succor over a million refugees who had been driven out of Turkey, and attempted to show with figures that the Hellenic nation was in such a serious financial condition that all payment of reparations was out of the question. On the contrary, he contended, Greece should receive reparations from Turkey because of the economic disaster caused to the Greeks when they fled from the Turks, abandoning homes and fortunes.

If Turkey was justified in asking damages, Greece was equally justified, and perhaps the two accounts could be balanced. What M. Venizelos wanted was a clean slate on the reparation account, both Turkey and Greece calling it square.

Ismet Pasha could not see this at all, and the conference adjourned. M. Venizelos subsequently visited General Pelle, who is President of the Financial Commission of the conference, and requested him to bring up the reparations question at the next meeting of the commission.

The Allies are greatly worried over the developments, as they had hoped their good offices would lead to a direct settlement between Greece and Turkey. They will continue their efforts at mediation, but everybody tonight conceded that there was danger of Greece breaking away from the conference and resorting to arms unless some satisfactory compromise was reached.

Turkey wants 4,500,000,000 gold francs reparations, and Greece says she wants 5,000,000,000 gold francs from Turkey.

A Polish delegation headed by Baron Modzslewsky, Poland's Minister to Switzerland, has arrived here to negotiate the establishment of diplomatic and consular relations with Turkey. The Angora delegates to the Near East Conference recently refused the allied request that Poland, together with Portugal, Czechoslovakia, and Belgium, be permitted to sign the Lausanne treaty. The Turks took the position that those nations had not been specifically invited to the conference.

MRS. DAVIDSON WANTS JURY IN DIVORCE SUIT

Broker's Wife Announces Corespondent Will Aid Her in Rehearing of Case.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., May 17.—Mrs. Laura Noyes Davidson, formerly prominently identified with the social colony at Hastings-on-the-Hudson, announced today through her attorney, Charles E. Long of White Plains, that she was going to demand a jury trial of the divorce action brought against her by her husband, Robert C. Davidson, New York broker and onetime Mayor of Baltimore.

It was only last week that Mrs. Davidson obtained a decision from Supreme Court Justice Seeger setting aside an interlocutory decree of divorce in her husband's favor and granting her a rehearing before the referee, who heard the evidence in secret. She alleged in affidawits filed by Lawyer Long that she had not received the right to appear personally before the referee and put in her defense to th action.

Mrs. Davidson, who is a sister of Clara Noyes of the American Red Cross, also stated that the corespondent named in the action, who is said to be a prominent business man of Dobbs Ferry, had decided to join her in demanding a jury trial and would aid in her defense.

"The story of detectives who sat in an auto parked outside of a house occupied by Mrs. Davidson at Tarrytown," said Lawyer Long, "and swore that they saw Mrs. Davidson come out of a room in her night robe is false. We will prove by diagrams that it was impossible to see through a window in the house from where the car was stationed. There is also no truth that when the alleged corespondent left that house at midnight Mrs. Davidson leaned out of a window and said 'Good night, sweetheart.'"

"I shall prove at the trial," said Mrs. Davidson, "that my husband tried to compromise me so he could get a divorce. There was a separation agreement between us which expired in May of this year and my husband brought this divorce suit before its termination so that I couldn't go back to him and he would have to support me. There will be a sensation when I produce my evidence to show the wrong he perpetrated on me by getting this divorce on perjured testimony."

DEPORTEES RETURN TO ENGLISH HOMES

Irish Republicans Cheer on Entering London, Obviously Glad to Be Back Again.

SOME SCORE TREATMENT

But Others Declare the Free Staters Used Them as Well as Could Be Expected.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 17.—Forty men and women internes returned today to London from Dublin, the remainder having dispersed to their homes from Holyhead. About 1,000 of their sympathizers were on the platform to welcome them. Only one railway policeman was on duty, the returned deportees being treated as ordinary passengers and not being interfered with in any way.

They were a cheerful and voluble lot of martyrs, most of them smiling, and all obviously glad to be back in England. Two or three of them carried accordeons, and they raised a cheer as the train drew in. As the doors were opened their relatives and friends threw themselves on them, kissing them and shaking their hands, but there was no organized demonstration.

Many of the released deportees willingly posed for cameramen, one producing a green, white and yellow flag, which he began to wave. He hurriedly furled his banner, however, when a companion reminded him it was also that of the Free State.

One woman informed THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent that she had no complaint to make.

"I have been treated with respect on the whole," she said, "though there were many inconveniences, of course. But I suppose these were unavoidable."

Councilior Purcell, Labor member of the Woolwich Town Council, told quite a different story.

"The Free State soldiers and guards showed bitter antagonism toward us from the beginning," he said. "Soon after we reached Mountjoy there was a little trouble. One of our men was tied up by his hands and left in that position for two hours. We were kept three in a cell. The sanitary arrangements were bad. The lighting was worse.

"I was suffering from lumbago, but was made to use a hard bed. It was very cold. I asked for extra blankets, which were refused. Our correspondence was detained and interfered with. We were allowed to resolve letters only on Tuesday—even business letters were detained. If parcels of food were sent to us the contents were pilfered. I asked to be taken to a doctor, but had to wait for two days before I saw him.

"The Governor of the prison refused to see us. I telegraphed a protest to the British Home Secretary, which was ignored.

"The Free State guards frequently fired their rifles at the walls of the cells and were often half drunk. Any complaints we made to them were received with threats of shooting.

"We were permitted recreation and books and were also allowed to associate with each other. If it had not been for the latter, life would have been intolerable."

Another man interviewed declined to confirm Purcell's harrowing story.

"Things were not altogether bad," he said. "We did not live in a bower of roses, but our guards were Irish like ourselves, and if we got ill treatment Irishmen alone were responsible.

"What are you going to do now?" he was asked.

"I am going back to my old work," he replied.

"English employers?" he was next asked, but he turned away without making a reply.

HOLYHEAD, Wales, May 17.—The hundred or more persons who were rounded up in England in the Irish raids last March and deported to Dublin for internment arrived here this morning. Their return is the result of the recent successful application of Art O'Brien, one of the deportees, for a writ of habeas corpus.

The Government of the Irish Free State furnished a strong military escort from the jail to the steamer. Except for singing and cheering there was no demonstration.

MOVES TO CLEAR BRIDGMAN.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 17.—An indemnity bill to protect Home Secretary Bridgman against action by Art O'Brien and other Irish deportees was introduced into the House of Commons today by Stanley Baldwin. It is short and is confined to the one purpose of safeguarding Bridgman and the other officials.

A rumor that it would contain a provision to permit the Government in certain circumstances to make arrests without proceeding to the trial of those detained proved baseless. But even a simple measure like the Government's bill is to be opposed strongly. Both the Asquithian Liberals and the Labor Party will move its rejection and George Lansbury will try to get an amendment in it to provide compensation for the Irish internees, who have now been released.

Bridgman announced in the House today that a suit by Gerald O'Hara had been filed against him, asking damages for false imprisonment and illegal arrest.

Captain Wedgwood Benn expressed the anxiety of the Liberal Party lest the Government should seek to increase its power to interfere without due course of law with the liberty of a subject and asked for more information as to the action the Government is instituting and into the need of retaining some extraordinary powers of arrest.

Stanley Baldwin replied that the Court of Appeals decision in the O'Brien case had obviously made the legal position very doubtful. The Government accepted the Court of Appeals decision but it desired to make very careful inquiries into the position it had left.

Benn protested against considering an indemnity for the Home Secretary until the House knew whether or not the Government was about to ask for enlarged powers of arrest, and this point is likely to be pressed strongly from the Liberal and Labor benches.

Counsel for Art O'Brien made application this morning to the Judge in his chambers for his release on bail. It was refused and it will probably be renewed tomorrow in open court.

Warren (R. I.) Textile Strike Ends.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., May 17.—The 1,350 operatives at the Warren Manufacturing Company plant at Warren will return to work tomorrow morning, after five days' idleness occasioned by a walkout of the Loomfixers' Union Monday. Of the three non-union men whose employment occasioned the difficulty, one has been admitted to the union, one has found employment elsewhere and the third has declared his intention to retire.

8-Hour Shifts in Youngstown Mills.

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio., May 17.—Eight-hour shifts in one of the continuous processes of the steel industry, the making of steel in open-hearth furnaces, have been introduced in some of the independent mills of this district. The change affects four classes of workmen—first, second and third helpers and charging crane operators. The number of men affected is about 300. No change has been made in wage or tonnage rates.

EX-CONVICT TAUGHT GANG HOW TO ROB

Newark Prisoner Says Leader Felt That They Needed Special Instruction.

HE AND TEN OTHERS HELD

Says Policeman Bederski Abandoned One Burglary to Report for Duty.

An ex-convict, it was revealed yesterday, was imported to Newark by Patrolman Peter Bederski and his robber gang to teach them the tricks of the trade. This was divulged by Leonard G. Hetschel, one of the gang held on a charge of murder growing out of the shooting last Friday morning of Bederski while the policeman and his confederates were robbing a furniture store.

Hetschel also is said to have told of an instance in which Bederski abruptly terminated "a job" because he was due in several minutes to report for duty. An hour later he was on his beat. The beat included the building he had begun to rob. He reported to his desk in the morning that all was well.

Hetschel made a complete statement of the gang's activities after he and others had been arraigned and held in bail on various charges.

It was also revealed that one of the prisoners, William Mustock, has for years been a chanceman, or substitute policeman, in Orange. He is the fourth policeman in the case. The others were Bederski, Theodore Schaeffer and Adam Dresch. Schaeffer has confessed to his part in upward of forty burglaries. Dresch, dismissed from the Newark force two years ago, escaped at the time Bederski was shot.

All eleven prisoners were arraigned yesterday. Hetschel, Schaeffer, Louis Glinckstaub and John Glucksman were held by Judge Grice without bail on a charge of murder. One of them is believed to have fired the shot that killed Bederski. Harold Farse, William Ralph and Mehlin Everitt were held without bail on charges of burglary to await Grand Jury action. William Mustock and Antonio Masucci were held in $1,500 bail each on grand larceny charges. Fred Schaeffer, brother of the policeman, and Joseph Casey were held in $2,000 and $500 respectively as material witnesses.

Hetschel, according to the authorities, said that John McKenna, a burglar now awaiting sentence, was brought to Newark by Patrolman Bederski because the gang felt it needed instruction from one thoroughly versed in house-breaking and entering business buildings. Bederski knew of McKenna for he had seen him under arrest.

McKenna's first practical demonstration was given with Bederski as his student. The venture was not a success, for a woman leaning from a window saw them jimmying a door and gave the alarm. McKenna was captured in a burglary in which Bederski escaped.

In telling of the visit to the jail to confer with Bederski late Thursday night, the authorities said, Hetschel quoted Dresch as saying to Bederski:

"You had better give McKenna a hundred. He needs money. If he opened his mouth he could do a lot of harm. You know you had to run like the dickens to get out of your street clothes and into your uniform the night he was caught and you got away."

To this Bederski is said to have replied: "I won't bother with him. It's his word against mine. I'm a cop. He's a crook. I'll send him a ten-spot."

Hetschel gave a side-light on bootleg double-crossing by the gang. "We got word," he said, "that $15,000 worth of liquor had been stolen. We went to the real owners of it and told them we'd get it back for a fifty-fifty split. They turned us down. Later we looked up the stolen booze and found the real owners of it carting it away. Dresch said we were in on it and the owners said there was nothing doing. Dresch said if they didn't come through they would be reported to the police. So they gave us seventy-one cans, five gallons to a can."

NEW FINGERPRINT PLAN.

Copenhagen Official Instructing a Class of Visiting Police Chiefs.

The Sub-Director of the Police Department of Copenhagen, Denmark, is giving instructions in a new fingerprint system to a class of visiting Police Chiefs at Police Headquarters this week. The new system is known as the "The Distant Identification System and the One Finger System."

At the convention of the Police Chiefs in this city two weeks ago, it was decided to install the new system in all cities, as a means of facilitating capture of international criminals. Heretofore the prints of all fingers were taken, but the new system calls for the print of only one finger. Each curve in the finger is numbered and is then put into a code. Officials who are studying the system say it will save much time in apprehending criminals.

Zonite!

The Greatest of all Antiseptics

What It Is

ZONITE is a concentrated, stabilized and perfected form of the Carrel-Dakin Solution. The Carrel-Dakin Solution is an antiseptic developed during the World War by two eminent scientists. War hospital records show that it reduced amputations and deaths from infection over seventy per cent and saved the lives of hundreds of thousands of desperately wounded men. It has been adopted and is in daily use by the medical profession and in hospitals throughout the civilized world.

By standard laboratory tests Zonite has more than three times the germicidal strength of pure carbolic acid. It has about seventy-five times the germicidal strength of peroxide of hydrogen and forty times the germicidal strength of any solution of carbolic acid, iodine, bichloride of mercury, etc., that can be applied with safety to the human body.

In addition to its high germicidal efficiency, Zonite is non-poisonous, non-irritating, non-caustic and healing. It can be used freely and frequently on the delicate membranes and tissues of the human body without harm.

What It Does

For Preventing Contagious Diseases

Until the discovery of this form of antiseptic, it was impossible to introduce freely into the mouth and nose any antiseptic solution at sufficient strength to destroy disease germs effectively. It is in the prevention of germ diseases, therefore, that Zonite finds one of its greatest fields of usefulness. During epidemics of colds, grippe, scarlet fever, diphtheria, measles, whooping cough, sore throat and other respiratory diseases, when every sneeze and draft scatters millions of germs, Zonite should be used frequently as a throat spray and nasal douche.

For Cuts and Wounds

Zonite should be promptly applied to a fresh cut or wound to destroy the germs which cause blood poisoning and other similar forms of infection. In addition to acting as a disinfectant, it will shorten the process of healing and greatly reduce the usual pain and inflammation.

As a Mouth Wash

A solution of one teaspoonful Zonite added to one-quarter glass of water used night and morning as a mouth wash will destroy breath odors and act as an excellent preventive against pyorrhea. Dental authorities have stated that the daily use of Zonite in this manner, together with regular dental inspection, reduces the likelihood of contracting this disease to a minimum.

Sore Throat

Nearly all the ailments of the throat are due to bacterial infection. Prompt relief, therefore, can not be obtained without the use of an effective germicide. One part Zonite to five parts water as a gargle or throat spray usually clears up and controls throat infections. In severe cases, especially when ulcerations are present, the throat should be swabbed with pure Zonite and your physician called. Begin treatment promptly when symptoms first appear.

For Burns, Scalds and Blisters

Zonite is especially valuable in the treatment of burns, scalds and blisters. It prevents infection, aids in removing charred or dead tissue, helps to reduce inflammation, and accelerates healing. It also lessens scars and disfigurations that are apt to follow wounds of this character.

For Personal Hygiene

Zonite is the ideal antiseptic for personal hygiene. Poisonous caustic compounds, such as bichloride of mercury, phenol and cresol solutions, etc., are tremendously harmful when used regularly for douche medication. Any physician will verify this statement. Write for the Zonite booklet on personal hygiene for women.

For Dandruff

Dandruff (seborrhea sicca) and many other scalp irritations are due to bacterial infection. Zonite has proved remarkably effective in removing these annoying conditions. It kills the micro-organisms, dissolves and removes the scaling incrustations and exercises a stimulating and tonic effect on the scalp tissues and hair follicles.

For Catarrh

Zonite affords a most efficient local treatment for this condition. Used as a nasal spray it quickly loosens the hardened incrustations of mucous matter, clears up the nasal passages and soothes and heals congested membranes. Note—Atomizer fittings in which Zonite is used must be of hard rubber.

Rash, Skin Eruptions

There are numerous kinds of skin eruptions classed as eczema. Many of these yield readily to the application of Zonite. A few trials will demonstrate whether or not the antiseptic will be of service. Chronic skin troubles and skin troubles induced by system disorders should receive the attention of a physician.

For Old Sores

Zonite is remarkably effective in healing old sores and slow healing wounds. Used in a strong solution it will aid in dissolving dead tissue and removing proud flesh. By killing the germs, it stops the discharge of pus, rendering the sore clean and healthy. A milder solution used daily will aid in rapid healing.

Poison Ivy

In cases of poison ivy and similar plant poisoning, Zonite is perhaps the most effective remedial agent known to materia medica. It acts with extraordinary promptness in cleaning up the inflammation and restoring the skin to a normal condition.

For Insect Bites

As a relief from bee stings, mosquito bites, chiggers and many other insect bites, Zonite is particularly effective. If promptly used, the antiseptic will lessen the pain and reduce swelling and irritation.

Bad Breath (halitosis)

Breath odors are usually caused by a bacteriological condition of the mouth. Zonite is the one form of antiseptic with real germicidal power that can be used freely in the mouth. Its effect is far more thorough and far more lasting than pleasant tasting mouth washes heretofore used for this purpose.

For Body Odors

Objectionable body odors are caused by a germ (bacterium foetidum) which infects the sweat glands of the arm-pits, feet, etc. A scientific body deodorant must not only dispel the odor but destroy the germs which cause it. Deodorants which merely replace one odor with another or clog the pores are harmful and inefficient. Zonite kills the germs, destroys body odors promptly and effectively and leaves no odor of its own.

Rids the Home of Deadly Poisons

It is no longer necessary to keep the skull and crossbones type of antiseptic in the home. Zonite, while highly germicidal, can cause no fatal accident. It also supplants pleasant tasting mouth washes and gargles, heretofore in general use, that according to government reports, have no detectable germicidal power.

Zonite is a clear, colorless liquid that does not stain and leaves no odor. It is the last word of science on the subject of antiseptics. Ask your druggist for the Zonite "Handbook on Antisepsis," which describes fully the protection which the antiseptic brings to the home.

Modes of the Moment

The Pointless Two-headed Hat Pin

The hat pin's time honored efforts to be ornamental as well as useful have at last been crowned with success. In its present pointless but two-headed form it is primarily an ornament which also serves the useful purpose of holding the hat in place. The heads are of pearl and rhinestone.

The Stronghold of the Bead Is the Belt

Though beads have given up a great portion of the field of ornamentation to embroidery and the pleat, they have concentrated their power on the girdle and hold it as their own. The one illustrated is composed entirely—buckles and all—of oblong beads.

Many Bracelets Link Le Beau Monde with the Mode

Like the oriental maid who proclaims her wealth by the number of arm bands that encircle her wrist, the fashionable woman of today shows her cognizance of the mode by the number of bracelets that encircle her upper arm.

Embroidery vs. Pleats

An amicable compromise has been made in this three-piece silk suit by allotting to embroidery the entire jacquette coat and reserving pleats as the sole adornment of the dress. The result is a strikingly harmonious misses' costume which stresses both these fashionable features. 35.00

HARDING DEPLORES GROWTH OF FACTIONS

suspicions and the menace of destroying passions.

"Hamilton combated them all, with that boundless faith which is born of constructive genius, and made a supreme contribution to the formation and inauguration of the new republic which he believed to be destined as the exponent and exemplar of representative democracy.

"Many proclaimed him a monarchist and the foe of liberty. Others thought him an imperialist and the enemy of democracy, but he was none of these. It was from Hamilton's lips that came the finest utterance ever made concerning human liberty: 'The sacred rights of mankind are written as with a sunbeam, by the hand of Divinity itself, never to be erased or obscured by mortal power.'

"In all the criticism of him, and there was intensity of criticism and maddening bitterness of controversy in those days, his sincerity was never questioned. As a believer in the highest degree of liberty, he was eager for a nationality strong enough to guarantee the security of liberty.

"One wonders sometimes that this outstanding leader and conspicuous contributor should be so relatively inconspicuous in the historical recitals of our country, though coming into full appraisal and to lofty eminence in this generation, he was not a popular hero in his time. He gave less heed to what the contending elements in the new republic believed to be necessary for their sectional welfare, and riveted his through and gave of his logic and leadership to the essentials of a stable republic.

"He cared little for temporary popular favor, but he appraised common welfare above all else. He never sought to echo an ephemeral popular opinion, but appealed to that intelligent public opinion which must chart the way of an abiding democracy.

Says World Needs Leadership.

"The world needs that type of leadership today. Apply Hamilton's conception of financial integrity and the sanctity of obligation, to world conditions today, and let there be asserted a leadership which rises above prejudiced opinion, whether that prejudiced opinion had its beginning in war or is emphasized by geographic divisions, and humanity will turn to the rational and only way of restoration. There will be substitution of hope and resolution, where hatred and resentment are now hindering recovery. There will be less thought of yesterday, and more of tomorrow.

"Another phase of Hamilton's distinguished career may well inspire all grateful Americans. Talleyrand emphasized it in his American visit. Driving by Hamilton's modest law office late at night, to which the Secretary had retired at the early age of 38 and noting the night light indicating late hours of toil, Talleyrand remarked that, he was witnessing the eighth wonder of the world—a statesman of matchless talent and every opportunity to acquire wealth, retired from public service poor, striving professionally to earn a livelihood for his family.

"The fine example was then and is today less an exception than this sincere tribute from a great European statesman would seem to indicate. Hundreds of very capable and highly patriotic men are serving the Government today at the neglect of their private fortunes. We should be poorly equipped for the tasks of government if they did not do so.

"It is to be deplored that there are public men who make of public position the opportunity to enchance their personal fortunes, but it rivets our confidence to know that so many are serving and sacrificing in their service to promote our common weal. It ought to be understood, amid a too mistaken conception of the compensations of public service, that scores of men today hold highly important positions, not because they sought them, but because their services have been sought, and the consciousness of service to the nation and to their fellow countrymen is their chief compensation.

Honesty a Cure for Ills.

"But I choose to stress the rugged honesty of this patriot-statesman, because honesty will cure ten thousand ills of today. Honesty of leadership will spare us the popular misconceptions which are ever menacing to democracy. Honesty in statecraft will point the way to impregnable heights. Honesty among nations will dissolve their differences, so that new and lasting friendships may be bound by the ties of fraternity and mutual trust.

"Honesty in politics will reveal unerring public opinion, and honesty in public service everywhere will diminish public waste and extravagance. Honesty of manhood and womanhood will abolish the sources of discontent which threaten the world's civilization, and will bring us to conviction regarding the fundamentals of the social fabric, without which fundamentals there can be no human progress.

"Alexander Hamilton had the vision to see the expanding Republic. He was an American by adoption, but he fought his way to the loftiest plane of citizenship and accepted all its obligations. He was the youthful zealot for liberty and a most distinguished soldier of the Revolution. The transcending qualities of his statesmanship so obscured his military career that it is little noted, though standing alone his military services would command a place in history.

"He was literally a founder and builder. Washington had learned his qualities in war, and in Washington's trust he became the master builder. Aye, he was more than founder or builder. He was the prophet of American destiny.

Survival of Old Fallacies.

"With that insight and foresight which signaled his public service and made him understand why republics had failed and faded from popular recollection, he sought to guard against the dangers of his day and gave warning against the dangers to come. Human nature does not differ in one century from another, and the popular fallacies which Hamilton combated in his day have yet to be met in ours. Here was a revelation of the conscience of his statecraft.

"No threatened loss of popularity even deterred him. Believing for himself in a policy designed to promote the welfare of the new republic and to strength its security, he became its zealous advocate. He argued until he convinced and then committed. None ever wielded a more trenchant pen, no heart and mind ever directed a more eloquent tongue. An infinite courage sustained him, and in the national viewpoint he found his unfailing inspiration.

"It was his conviction that the Federal power could combat menaces with which the State could not successfully contend. He had a seemingly inspired fear of factionalism, fought it in the making, and warned us of today against its development.

Early Warning On Factions.

"In his clarion call for social and political integration under the Constitution, he gave this warning:

Among the numerous advantages promised by a well-constructed union, none deserves to be more accurately developed than its tendency to break and control the violence of faction. The friend of popular governments never finds himself so much alarmed for their character and fate as when he contemplates their propensity to this dangerous vice. He will not fail, therefore, to set due value on any plan which, without violating the principles to which he is attached, provides a proper cure for it.

The instability, injustice and confusion introduced in public councils have, in truth, been the mortal diseases under which popular governments have everywhere perished; as they continue to be the favorite and fruitful topics from which the adversaries to liberty derive their most specious declamations.

"Then he defined factions. I quote further:

By a faction I understand a number of citizens, whether amounting to a majority or a minority of the whole, who are united and actuated by some common impulse of passion, or of interest, adverse to the rights of other citizens, or to the permanent and aggregate interests of the community.

Group Antagonism Active.

"Can any student of our times in America, or the world, doubt for a moment that factionalism is developing as never before? We have our factions which seek to promote this or that interest, without regard to the relation-ship to others and without regard for the common weal. We have the factions of hatred and prejudice and violence. We have coalitions which would invade the Constitution, flagrant violators of the Constitution itself. We have our factions challenging both civil and religious liberty, and without them both made everlasting secure there can be no real human liberty. We have the fatal factionalism which contemplates obstruction to the execution of the laws.

"No nation will survive where this factionalism is endured. Hamilton warned us that 'however plausible combinations or associations may now and then answer popular ends, they are likely themselves to usurp the reins of government, destroying afterward the very engines which have lifted them to unjust dominion.'

"Washington uttered the same caution. It was Hamilton's conception that the Federal influence would crush out the factions, taking heed, of course, of whatever call to real justice had in any way inspired.

"False Cry of Class" Raised.

"If we will carry on, visualizing the nation of which he dreamed; if we will maintain the national viewpoint and emphasize the interwoven intimacy of all activities, interdependent, where none may permanently prosper without a prosperous whole; if we will throttle the false cry of class where none need exist in the beckoning of American opportunity; if we will be as hopefully American and as whole-heartedly American as they were in the immortal beginning, the future will be secure. These we must do, no matter what political sacrifices are made in the recommitment.

"Here stands, Mr. Secretary, the memorial to a great lover of liberty, a great patriot, a great soldier, a colossal statesman, a mighty American. Time has brought our appraisal of him out of the mists of misunderstanding and given us a measure of his true greatness.

"If I were to select one attribute above all others for the inspiration of the Americans of today and the morrow it would not be his brilliance of mind, or his gift of eloquence, or his matchless genius, or his prophetic vision; but I should commend his courage of patriotism, which put his devotion to the Republic's welfare before popular approval or personal fortune, and his unconditional gift of heart, mind and soul to the making of an imperishable temple of freedom in these United States."

Mellon Presides at Ceremony.

The statue which was unveiled is the gift of a New York woman, whose name is known only to the members of the Alexander Hamilton Memorial Association. The remainder of the expense of the memorial was borne by the Government and by private subscribers. The sculptor is James E. Fraser.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon was the master of ceremonies, and in a few words eulogized Hamilton as the greatest of all the men who have directed the finances of the Government.

The exercises, which were attended by about 5,000 persons, began with an invocation by the Rev. Dr. Hamilton, A great-great-granddaughter of the patriot, Miss Eleanor E. Hamilton of New York, unveiled the monument. Another direct descendant, the Rev. E. Laurens Hamilton of Indiana, a great-great-grandson, pronounced the benediction. The statue itself was presented to the Government by Jeremiah A. Van Orsdel, President of the Alexander Hamilton Memorial Association.

Just before Mr. Van Orsdel made the speech of presentation a sailor handed to Miss Hamilton a cord. The Marine Band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner," Miss Hamilton tugged at the cord for a moment, and then the great flag in which the monument was hidden dropped gracefully away.

Among those on the stand with the President, in addition to the officials of the Memorial Association and the Hamilton descendants, were Secretary of State and Mrs. Hughes, Secretary of the Navy Denby, Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Work, Senators Lodge of Massachusetts and Brandegee of Connecticut, ex-Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and George Harvey, the Ambassador to Great Britain.

$137,500 FOR CLUBHOUSE.

Republican Women Believe Drive for $150,000 May Be Exceeded.

Mrs. Pauline Sabin, President of the Woman's National Republican Club, made it known yesterday that with twenty-one districts reported at work in a drive to sell $150,000 worth of bonds to defray the cost of a new clubhouse, $137,000 had been realized from bond sales up to noon yesterday.

"It looks now as if our objective not only would be reached but exceeded," said Mrs. Sabin. She will go to Chicago, where the club has a large bloc of members, in the interest of the drive. She said that thirty-eight States were represented in the membership of the club, which by this time has reached 1,200.

The club expects to remodel the old residence of George C. Boldt at 6 and 8 East Thirty-eighth Street as their new clubhouse. At present several floors in the building at 38 West Thirty-ninth Street are being used.

The Season's Correct Straws

WE emphasize the word "correct"—because we believe that correctness, or the lack of it, is the overwhelmingly important feature of any straw hat.

Nothing will improve your appearance more than a good-looking straw—nothing can damage it more than a straw modelled on lines which are unnatural and incorrect.

The thousands of straws which are displayed in our ten hat shops were made expressly to our order.

They reflect the highest standard of New York taste. A man might pay twice as much for his straw as we ask for ours, but the extra expense would not bring him a hat more correct, more fashionable or more becoming.

The right width of brim—the right height of crown—materials and workmanship of the finest—and the prices are $3.50, $4.00 and $5.00.

DENIES ANNULMENT TO VETERAN'S WIFE

Court Sees No Basis for a Decree After Marriage With a Tubercular Man.

RESULT OF GAS IN WAR

Wife Charges That He Concealed His Illness From Her Before Their Wedding Day.

Supreme Court Justice Tierney handed down a decision yesterday denying to Mrs. Rose Lipschitz of 447 West End Avenue an annulment of her marriage to John Ellis Lipschitz, a World War veteran, who, the Court states, is in a sanitarium, a victim of progressive tuberculosis due to "inhaling a poison gas while serving his country in the late war." The wife, who is 20 years old, sued on the ground that when Lipschitz induced her to marry him, on June 19, 1922, he concealed from her the fact that he was a sufferer from tuberculosis.

He told me he was getting compensation from the Government because his lung was broken three times and that he couldn't dance with me when we went out for the same reason," testified Mrs. Lipschitz. "When he coughed he said it was because he had a cold."

The wife testified that when her husband became ill last September she asked him why he had not told her that he had tuberculosis before she married him, and that he replied, "I didn't have to."

She said she then asked, "Don't you think you have deceived me?" and he answered: "I didn't figure it that way. I was in love with you and wanted you, and that was the only way I could do it."

The husband did not defend the suit. While Mrs. Lipschitz was on the witness stand Justice Tierney asked her:

"Weren't you proud that you were marrying a lad who had been at the fighting front and was so loyal to his country as to lose his health?"

"I was proud of that, but don't you think he had a right to tell me of his sickness?" she answered.

"Yes, I think that would have been much better," said Justice Tierney.

The Court said in his opinion that, while the prospect that the couple would ever be able to live together seems remote the testimony in the case does not justify a decree of annulment on the ground of fraud and deception.

"MATINEE" BURGLAR BUSY.

Robs Yonkers Apartment at While Woman Is at Theatre.

A "matinee" burglar, operating while housewives go to the theatre during afternoons, entered the home of Mrs. Mary Robinson at 148 South Broadway, Yonkers, yesterday and took all the jewelry in the apartment. The loot obtained, after the intruder had jimmied a door, included a diamond lavaliier, gold watch, gold bracelet, two gold rings and a handbag.

Occupants of other apartments in the same building informed Patrolman Daly that they had seen two suspicious men watching the apartment-house on three different afternoons.

HEARING OF LERNER IS SET FOR MONDAY

Lawyer for Suspect in Wall Street Bomb Outrage Seeks Hearing at Once.

PROSECUTOR WANTS TIME

Magistrate Marks Case as Peremptory, Indicating no Further Delay Will Be Granted.

Noah Lerner, twenty-ninth person suspected to have been a participant in the Wall Street bomb outrage, was arraigned yesterday before Magistrate Charles H. Simms in the Homicide Court. He was arrested a week ago, and has been held without bail, due to information furnished to Assistant District Attorney Emery Weller by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Doyle, ex-colonists in "Big Bill" Hayward's Kuzbas Colony in Siberia.

Lerner was represented by Julius D. Rosenberg of 118 William Street, who asked that the suspect be given either immediate hearing or his liberty. Assistant District Attorney William Ryan opposed this, saying that he needed additional time to prepare the evidence against Lerner. Mr. Ryan declared that he had two witnesses he wanted to produce, but that he would not be able to get them into court before Monday.

The hearing was then adjourned to next Monday, Magistrate Simms marked the case "Peremptory," which means that no further delay will be granted to the prosecution.

According to the story told by the Doyles, they encountered Lerner in Kemarova, Russia, while they were trying to find out what Hayward offered that was better than their native town of Baton Rouge, La. Lerner, an expert electrician, was serving Soviet Russia without pay, being engaged in Kemarova in installing radio stations.

Lerner boarded with the Doyled and, they allege, boasted that he knew the driver of the red wagon that carried the bomb to Wall Street where it exploded, causing the deaths of thirty-seven men and women. Lerner has said in court and through his attorney that he knows nothing about the outrage.

He admitted that he had been on a wagon in the financial district on Sept. 16, 1920, but said that the wagon was merely bearing a load of barrels which were to be used to display Socialist posters in front of polling places. Lerner was interested in the plight of the Socialists who at the time had been recently ousted from the Legislature.

The New York Protestant Episcopal City Mission received $53,080, and $12,294 went to the Old Ladies' Home of Poughkeepsie. The Church Charity Fund received $26,061, and Vassar Hospital at Poughkeepsie got $22,000, while the Graham Home for Old Ladies received $12,060. She gave $9,580 each to Christ Church, the Society for the Relief of the Destitute Blind, and New York Skin and Cancer Hospital, and $5,000 to the Church Pension Fund. The American Society for the Control of Cancer and the Home for Old Men and Aged Couples got $4,970, and $2,546 each went to the New York Probation and Protective Association, Church Mission of Help, House of Rest for Consumptives, Servants of Relief for Incurable Cancer and Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital.

men wanted to be shown and the leader finally took off his mask and, taking the policeman aside, told them that Werner had showed himself disloyal to the flag and that they had intended to punish him.

"Go the limit, give him all that's coming to him," one of the policemen is said to have replied.

Werner said his captors had been decent up to this time, but with the encouragement given to them by the policemen they decided to attack him. They got into the car and drove to a point near Woodlawn Cemetery where it was lonely and dark enough to assure them of no interference. Then they made Werner bend over and belabored him with barrel staves until he was badly bruised and great welts were raised on his back. His wrists were also badly cut by this time from the rope with which he had been bound. He was thrown to the ground and left, after his hands had been untied. He returned to Columbia by the elevated and subway and got back about 3:30 o'clock.

Werner had been told that he must prepare a statement of his views for the group who had taken it upon themselves to punish him, and he wrote it yesterday afternoon. This was the statement:

"I believe in the Constitution of the United States, free speech, press and assembly. In my first letter I said: 'The Constitution of the United States and the ideals of an institution of learning should protect us in the right to have free speech, press and assembly.'

No Disrespect for Flag.

"I do not believe in disrespect for our flag or our army, or in disobedience to our laws. In my second letter I said: 'As for insult to army or flag, again I repeat such a case can be taken to court.' It should be taken to court.

"I believe in the right of any individual to express disapproval as well as approval of any case not covered by law. A majority has the right to act, and the minority has the right to protest.

"I do not personally know the writer of The Spectator editorial nor do I know Major Foote. Consequently I withdraw and apologize for all remarks in my letter about them, except the one remark. 'No self-respecting editor ever finds space enough to answer a letter which he lacks the space to publish.'

"I feel that I am owed an apology by these men for their ungentlemanly, cowardly and illegal conduct, and my apologies are conditional upon a similar written apology signed by that group.

"Whether there would be further action with regard to the incidents at the review or the attack could not be learned at the university yesterday. Werner said he was interested only in securing an apology for the manner in which he had been treated. His reference to "no self-respecting editor" was because his second letter had been answered in an editorial, without the letter being printed.

The following letter of apology for the abduction of Werner was sent to The Spectator last night:

To the Editor of Spectator:

Dear Sir:

Feeling that the action of forcefully removing W. L. Werner from his room was taken through motives entirely patriotic but without a due consideration of the ethics involved, we the undersigned desire to apologize to the University and to Mr. Werner.

FULLER AND M'GEE ARE SENT TO JAIL

discovered that certain check stubs, vouchers and ledger sheets needed to corroborate Link's charge had disappeared. Receiver Strasbourger revealed that they had been turned over to Arthur Garfield Hays of the law firm of Hays, St. John & Moore on the consent of Francis L. Kohlman and Carl J. Austrian, the counsel for the receiver and the trustee, several months after the brokerage firm was placed in involuntary bankruptcy.

Mr. Hays, it was revealed, had sent these documents to the law office of Fallon & McGee, but all trace was lost of them after that. On April 24 last Judge Julian W. Mack of the Federal Court confirmed Referee Coffin's order and ordered Fuller and McGee and their counsel in the bankruptcy and criminal proceedings to deliver the documents to Trustee Sprague. William J. Fallon of the brokers' counsel at this hearing submitted an affidavit to Judge Mack, signed by himself, in which he declared the papers had been delivered to the two brokers. He asserted in the affidavit that he had seen only some of the vouchers and that his clients had refused to give up the papers on the ground that they were their property and that if they were to be used against them at the criminal trials it would be in violation of their constitutional rights.

Chief Justice Taft Wrote Decision.

Fallon & McGee, the lawyers, then appealed to the United States Supreme Court to abrogate Judge Mack's order delivering the papers to the trustee, and, in a decision written by Chief Justice Taft the court not only upheld the action of Referee Coffin but declared that the papers were not the property of the brokers from the time they were placed in bankruptcy, and therefore their constitutional rights would not be invaded by the delivery of the papers to Trustee Sprague.

Fuller and McGee were allowed until the early part of this week to deliver the missing documents. When they failed to comply with Judge Mack's order, they were brought before Judge Winslow in the Federal Court on an order to show cause why they should not be held in contempt. Their counsel submitted affidavits from Fuller and McGee alleging that they did not have the missing papers in their possession. Judge Winslow then adjourned the proceeding for a hearing before Judge Goddard.

The hearing was held yesterday afternoon in Judge Goddard's chambers in the Woolworth Building, with lawyers on both sides present, and United States Marshal Hecht near at hand. Fuller and McGee, the best-dressed men in the chambers, calmly sat a few feet from their counsel exchanging jokes. Fallon, of their counsel, argued for the right of the brokers to withhold the papers, while Judge Goddard examined the papers that had been presented to the Court in the many legal evolutions since the beginning of the bankruptcy proceeding. Eventually Judge Goddard broke in: "I notice in your affidavit, Mr. Fallon, that you say that the papers are in the hands of your clients; is that true?"

Fallon Made Affidavit in Haste.

Fallon replied that he had made the affidavit hastily while he was busy with the trial of Fuller in General Sessions, and at the time it was his understanding that the papers were in the custody of the bankrupts. Mr. Kohlman of counsel for the trustee here interposed with the statement that the defendants had been previously represented as having the papers, but when the United States Court decided against them they came into court with the announcement that they did not have them. He added that Mr. Fallon's affidavit to Judge Mack was not based on information and belief but on certain knowledge, and that the affidavits of Fuller and Magee to the effect that they did not know the whereabouts of the papers were "merely to avoid the consequences of their own acts."

Fallon stated that the proceeding against his clients was not in good faith; that the missing papers were being sought for the use of the prosecution in the criminal trial and that they were of no importance in the bankruptcy officials' hunt for assets.

"Are you to determine if they have any value?" inquired Judge Goddard. Fallon admitted that that was a question for the Court to decide. William M. Chadbourne, counsel for the creditors, intervened with the remark.

"This seems to me much like these people are trying a bunco game on this court. It is a shell game. You touch one attorney, and the papers are somewhere else. A second attempt meets with a similar passing of the buck. It is time that this matter should be halted and the bankrupts be compelled to comply with Judge Mack's order or be held in contempt of court."

Judge Asks, "Where Are the Papers?"

Fallon renewed his argument about an agreement made between the bankrupts and Receiver Strasbourger, but Judge Goddard interrupted.

"This court is little concerned with technicalities of the situation," he said. "What I want to know is, where are those papers?"

Then, addressing Fallon, he asked, "Do you know?" When Fallon replied in the negative, Judge Goddard said: "Do the bankrupts know?"

"I don't know," answered Fallon. "I purposely did not ask them; I don't want to know."

"This is a proceeding calling on these men to show cause why they have not complied with Judge Mack's order to produce those papers," said Judge Goddard. "They have not explained satisfactorily why this has not been done, and they are adjudged in contempt."

"How long will my clients be committed to jail?" inquired Fallon.

"Until they comply with Judge Mack's order," was the reply.

Fuller and McGee immediately were taken into custody by United States Marshal Hecht and Deputy Marshal Harrigan. Fallon appealed to Judge Goddard not to send them to jail until he had appeared before another judge and obtained a writ of habeas corpus. The court consented and Deputy Marshal Harrigan then took the prisoners for a walk.

Fallon and his law partner, Eugene F. McGee, then hurried to the Federal Building across the street, where Judge Augustus Hand was trying a case in the Federal Court. Judge Hand signed the writ of habeas corpus, but refused to hear argument on the writ, and made it returnable before Judge Learned Hand. The latter had left his chambers in the Woolworth Building, but the brokers' lawyers got him on the telephone about at 5 o'clock the hearing on the writ began in his court adjoining his chambers.

Fallon argued for more than an hour that Fuller and McGee should be released because the missing documents really were their documents and they had a right to them. Shortly after 6 o'clock, when Fallon told him that he would like to submit briefs prepared by him in the "Nicky" Arnstein bankruptcy appeal to the Supreme Court, Judge Hand consented to adjourn the proceeding until noon today, but when Fallon asked that Fuller and McGee be paroled in his custody in the interim Judge Hand replied: "I shall not interfere with the order of Judge Goddard." The brokers then were taken to the jail. It was learned later that Fuller and McGee had expressed a preference for the Essex County Jail, in New Jersey, which has more pleasant surroundings, but Judge Goddard decreed otherwise.

After the departure of the brokers for the jail in Ludlow Street, counsel for Trustee Sprague intimated that Thomas F. Foley, Tammany leader of the First Assembly District, and who at one time was Sheriff, would be summoned in the bankruptcy proceedings to testify about a check for $10,000, alleged to have been found among the Fuller & Co. assets. It was understood that the lawyers would apply to Referee Coffin for an order to examine him in the early part of next week.

Foley Says He Lost Money.

Mr. Foley earlier in the day had denied a published report that he had received the check from the brokerage firm before the failure last June. He declared that the publication was due to the enmity of a man whom he "put in politics and would drive out of politics." He also added that he had lost some money through the failure of Fuller & Co.

Carl J. Austrian, one of the attorneys for Trustee Sprague, said that he had seen the check and that he was unable to decipher whether it was made out to "F. F. Foley" or "T. F. Foley." He added that there was nothing in the brokerage firm's books which definitely revealed ex-Sheriff Foley's connection with Fuller & Co., as alleged. It was explained that if the check had been sent, the recipient, under the law, would be considered a preferred creditor, and would have to turn back the $10,000 to the receiver. District Attorney Banton made the following comment on the Foley incident:

"I have never had a political leader of any of the parties come to me and ask me in any way to interfere with any investigation of a complaint or the prosecution of a case pending in this office. As long as I have been in charge of this office I have never had a politician approach me on any matter that was not in good conscience."

McManus Pleads Not Guilty.

Edward J. McManus, 48 years old, of 69 West Ninety-seventh Street made a tentative plea of not guilty when he was arraigned before Judge Nott in General Sessions on the indictment charging him with offering a bribe of $1,000 to one of the jurors in the last Fuller trial. His $15,000 bail was continued by the Court when his attorney asked for an adjournment of the proceeding until next Tuesday with a view to determining in the meantime whether a motion for an inspection of the Grand Jury minutes should be made.

"There should be a speedy trial of this case," interposed Assistant District Attorney Wintner. "We want no dilatory tactics by the defense. We do not want the Court flouted, as it has been in the past."

Eugene F. McGee of Fuller's counsel is expected to appear before Judge Nott today on his application to have Harold E. Beidleman, the juror who alleged that McManus offered the bribe through Beidleman's young woman secretary, adjudged in contempt of court for failing to inform Judge Nott about the alleged incident before the jury was discharged. McGee served a copy of the application on Mr. Banton on Wednesday.

BRIBE CASE AGAINST M'ALLISTER BEGINS

MRS. CASTRO THE ACCUSER

Others to Be Heard Next Thursday —Enright Libel Case to Come Up Tuesday.

Judge Thomas C. T. Crain, sitting in General Sessions in an inquiry into the police graft charges and counter charges, yesterday issued the second summons against Detective Robert McAllister that has resulted from the inquiry.

McAllister, who had already been charged with perjury in connection with his testimony regarding a liquor raid at the home of Charles P. Zittel, is now charged with bribery and violation of Section 1,826 of the Penal Code, as a result of a liquor raid at Mrs. Mary Castro's boarding house in Water Street.

Mrs. Castro and her husband, Joseph, who were the chief witnesses against McAllister at Commissioner Hirshfield's inquiry, reiterated before Judge Crain yesterday their stories to the effect that McAllister had accepted $500 to prevent Mrs. Castro's arrest. Following their testimony the hearing in the Castro case was adjourned until next Thursday at 2 P. M.

In the meantime Judge Crain will close the perjury case against McAllister with the receiving of briefs from the District Attorney and Joseph Shalleck, counsel for the defense. Zittel and the other witnesses in the case signed copies of the testimony, and the briefs will be accepted when the hearing is resumed at 10:30 next Tuesday morning.

Preliminary steps for the hearing of the charges of criminal libel brought by Commissioner Enright against Assemblyman Cuvillier and Magistrate Corrigan, as the result of the publication of a telegram from the Assemblyman containing charges of police bootleg graft, were taken when Harry A. Gordon, Commissioner Enright's lawyer, asked Judge Crain to issue summonses for the Assemblyman and the Magistrate.

Judge Crain said that Mr. Cuvillier had told him that he would appear voluntarily at Tuesday's hearing, and directed Mr. Gordon to communicate with Magistrate Corrigan's attorney, John D. Lindsay, to see if the Magistrate would not do likewise without the issuance of summonses. Mr. Pecora left the courtroom with Mr. Gordon, and returned to say that he had been assured by Mr. Lindsay that Magistrate Corrigan would waive the issuance of a summons and would be present in court on Tuesday.

The first step in the Castro case yesterday was an oral statement by Mrs. Castro. She said that on Dec. 7 McAllister and other policemen entered the boarding house which she formerly conducted at 247 Water Street. After breaking into a room and finding some liquor, she said, McAllister told her that he would not arrest her if she gave him $1,000. She said that she gave him $600, and that it was arranged that her brother, Thomas McGrath, should be locked up in her place.

"I think on that informal statement of facts," said Mr. Pecora, "that your Honor should hold and investigate and issue a summons."

After the summons had been issued Mr. Pecora served it upon McAllister. Mrs. Castro was then called as a witness and repeated her story in detail, as she had told it before Commissioner Hirshfield. Castro followed his wife as a witness and corroborated her testimony. The cross-examination was postponed until next Thursday.

MRS. HAYES INSISTS NOTE WAS SCHWAB'S

ENTERS PLEA OF NOT GUILTY

District Attorney Says Forgery Charge May Be Tried Within a Month.

Mrs. Myrtle Bowman Hayes, who pleaded not guilty yesterday to the forgery indictment against her, probably will face a jury within three weeks. Her defense, when charged with writing "C. M. Schwab" across a promissory note for $25,000, will be a denial that she forged the name.

Mrs. Hayes, who is 47, but looks much younger, was arraigned on the second degree forgery indictment before Judge Charles C. Nott in General Sessions. She displayed her usual self-possession and refused, on the advice of counsel, to say a word about the Schwab note. George Gordon Battle, her attorney of record, was not with her, but had an associate at the pleading.

Also with Mrs. Hayes was Abner Siegel, attorney and representative of the Fidelity & Surety Company, which provided her $10,000 bail. While Mr. Battle at his office again declined to indicate his client's defense, Mr. Siegel after the arraignment said:

"Mrs. Hayes will contend that the indorsement on the notes were actually signed by Mr. Schwab. She can prove this. She was a friend of Schwab for twenty-five years, and he backed her for twenty years in business propositions. Schwab actually paid money on some of these notes."

Reply by Schwab Attorney.

The statement made by the attorney was communicated to Mr. Schwab's counsel, Willard A. Mitchell, who said:

"A statement purporting to have been made by Abner Siegel, attorney for the surety company on the bond of Mrs. Myrtle Bowman Hayes, has been read to me by telephone, and I have been asked whether Mr. Schwab has any comment to make with reference to it.

"As Mr. Schwab has testified before the Grand Jury in the matter, after which an indictment was found, and he has served a sworn answer in the suit on Mr. Marks's note, denying the alleged indorsement, and as he will doubtless be required to testify further concerning these transactions, I have advised him that no further comment is necessary at this time."

At the conclusion of the brief court procedure, Mrs. Hayes smilingly chatted with reporters for a short time. She was modishly dressed—topically, one might say, for the silk sweater she wore reflected the Egypt of Tut-ankh-Amen. Her skirt was of blue serge on severe lines in harmony with a plainly trimmed blue straw hat, with a heavy blue veil drooping from it. The basic color of the Egyptian sweater was brown, and to match this rMs. Hayes's satin slippers were of brown suede and her stockings of the same hue.

Instructed Not To Talk.

"I see no necessity," she said, "for me to tell my story. The entire matter will be untangled without my saying a word. I am staying with friends in this city, but I will not tell you where. I have been instructed, in fact, by my counsel to remain silent on this matter. I really don't see the need of talking.

"As for the charges against me, I believe the whole matter will be straightened out in the civil courts. I don't know whether the affairs of the Chatham Apartment Hotel Company will go into bankruptcy courts. William C. Tobey, President of the company, has filed a petition in bankruptcy for himself. I repeat that I don't see why I should tell my story now. I will not say a word about the Schwab notes."

"Did you know Mrs. Cora Stetson Butler?" she was asked.

"About as well as I know you," she replied, smiling at one of the reporters. "I met her only two or three times."

About the story told by Charles B. Manville, a founder of H. W. Johns-Manville Company, the asbestos people?"

Departs in Friend's Car.

Mrs. Hayes then departed in the glossy green limousine with the smart looking chauffeur that had taken her down to the Criminal Courts Building. The car, she explained, was owned by the friends with whom she is staying.

The note for which Mrs. Hayes was indicted was said to be one of a series totaling something like $500,000. All of them, it has been said, came into being in the negotiations that were to have provided Brookline, Mass., with a $5,000,000 hotel. William C. Tobey, a general building expert who was then President of the Standard Concrete Steel Company, was nominated President. The $25,000 note bearing the alleged forgery of Schwab's name was passed to him and eventually found its way into the hands of Henry A. Marks, a lawyer.

When the time period of the note expired and Mrs. Hayes was not there to take it up, Mr. Marks called on Mr. Schwab as one of the guarantors to pay it. Mr. Schwab was away at the time, but when he heard about the note he came to town and called a conference at his office. The proceedings against Mrs. Hayes grew out of the conference. Mr. Schwab was a witness before the Grand Jury on May 10, and after his evidence had been put before the Grand Jury the indictment was voted.

After the arraignment yesterday and the continuation of Mrs. Hayes's $10,000 bail, no date was set for the trial. When District Attorney Banton was asked about this, he said that efforts would be made to bring the trial on at once. He predicted that it would be a short case and said that if the time of any one of the General Sessions Judges permitted, he would mark the case down for trial within three weeks.

WOMEN OPPOSE DRY REPEAL

Committee for Law Enforcement Urges Veto by Smith.

The Women's National Committee of One Hundred for Law Enforcement yesterday adopted a resolution which they sent to Governor Smith, protesting against the signing of the dry law repeal bill. The meeting was held at 25 Madison Avenue and Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of the Federated Missions Boards, an organization representing 3,000,000 women, presided and was elected Temporary Chairman. The resolution reads:

"Whereas the repeal of the Mullan-Gage law would be an act of disloyalty and would open wide the State of New York to the worst kind of lawlessness,

"Be it resolved, That we, the Women's National Committee of One Hundred for Law Enforcement, in a special meeting called in New York on May 17, 1923, urge Governor Smith to veto the Cuvillier bill."

Mrs. Peabody with two others went to the Biltmore Hotel to deliver the resolution to Governor Smith.

Among the women's organizations represented were the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the Parent-Teacher Association, National Congress of Mothers, Daughters of the American Revolution, Young Women's Christian Association, Federation of Women's Boards of Foreign Missions and the Council of Women for Home Missions.

Mrs. Howard Franklin White was chosen Chairman of the Executive Committee, which will meet early in June to elect permanent officers.

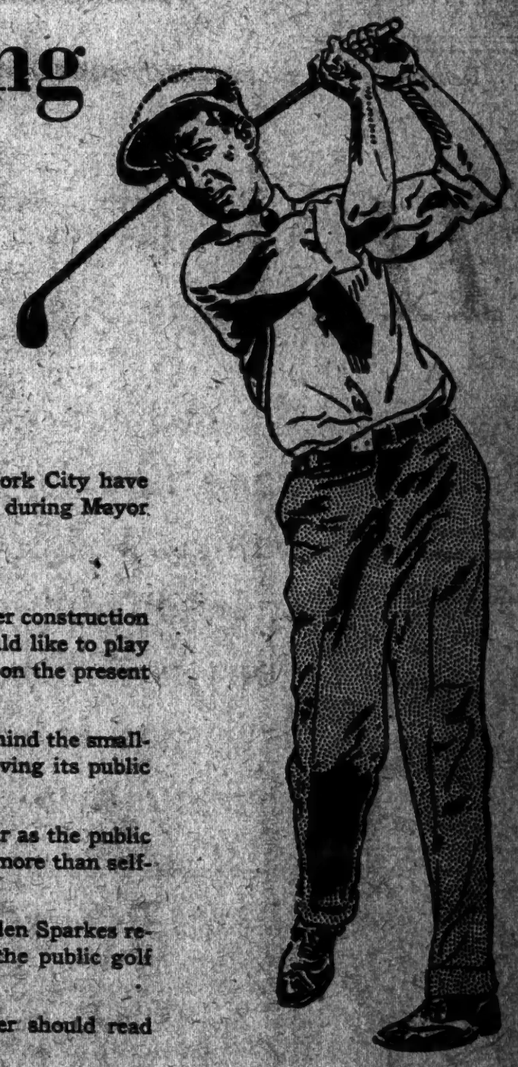
Mismanaging New York's Public Golf Links



The four public golf courses in New York City have earned a net profit of more than $150,000 during Mayor Hylan's administration.

How has this money been spent?

There is no evidence of new courses under construction to accommodate the thousands who would like to play the game, and the conditions prevailing on the present links are highly unsatisfactory.

The largest city in America trails far behind the smaller municipalities in the matter of improving its public playgrounnd facilities.

And there is small excuse, at least so far as the public golf courses are concerned, as they are more than self-supporting.

In a series of enlightening articles, Boyden Sparkes reveals conditions as he found them on the public golf courses of this city.

PLAN A NEW FIGHT FOR CLEAN BOOK ACT

TO DEMAND CENSORSHIP

Defeated Bill Was Mild, Justice Ford Says—New One to Be More Severe.

Plans to get a Clean Book bill through the Legislature in 1924 were formulated yesterday afternoon by members of the Clean Books League at a meeting in the chambers of Justice John Ford, their President, 51 Chambers Street. A resolution introduced by Mrs. Joseph Butler of the Daughters of the American Revolution provides for the appointment of "a law-drafting committee" to prepare the bill.

The new bill will be offered as a substitute for the one defeated after publishers launched a widespread movement against the proposed measure. The resolution of Mrs. Butler also provides for the appointment of a "committee on propaganda to arouse general public sentiment in support of legislation to be presented." The resolution says that a representative of the Clean Books League is to be appointed to reply to any published matter criticising the work of the league or the provisions of its proposed legislation.

The action of the league was taken following an address by Justice Ford, in which he predicted that eventually a decisive victory would be won. Justice Ford said later that the meeting did not discuss the letter of Theodore Dreiser, novelist, attacking the Clean Books League in the newspapers yesterday.

Justice Ford told the members of the Clean Books League that they had reason to congratulate themselves for what they had accomplished.

"Our bill was simplicity itself," he said. "Four sentences in the nature of a statutory construction clause and designed to restore the old law to its former effectiveness were proposed to be added without changing the substantive features of the ancient statute in the slightest degree.

"Our opponents called it censorship. They know better, for to hold otherwise would be to class them as dumbheads; it was studied misrepresentation. There was no hint of censorship in our bill nor the law we were trying to amend.

"This great moral uprising cannot be put down by misrepresentation. Our adversaries thought to kill it at its inception by jeers and ridicule. In the end they were scared to death for fear our bill was going through. If we had had a little more time to marshal the moral sentiment of the State it would have gone through.

"We are in splendid shape now to push ahead for victory in the next Legislature."

Justice Ford said that when the "hosts of decency" did march upon Albany next time "in their mighty wrath" they would not be "appeased by a little measure," but would "demand a censorship, indeed." He suggested that the censorship they would ask then would go as far in the other direction as the "purveyors of indecency" had gone in the production and circulation of "unspeakable vile fiction" in New York State and elsewhere. Among the forces which the league counts upon to aid in its fight are the Church, school and home, according to Justice Ford.

Good Advice to Brides and Grooms—about their Household China

"DO NOT COMPROMISE on an unworthy dinner service. Rather buy part of a good set, and add to it as you can."

Cheap and nameless china always appears as it is, while the beautiful wares of the world's great potters grow in interest and charm the longer you use them.

Since 1846, Ovington's have been china merchants whose displays of china-and-crystal have been among the largest and the best selected in the world.

You will find at Ovington's dinner patterns of excellent fabric and touched with graceful decoration. And in reserve for the set you buy, there are ample stocks for "fill-ins"—should you break a cup, it is a cup you have broken, and not your dinner service.

The price of an Ovington dinner service ranges from $40 to $1000.

IF the devastating hand of a careless housemaid bring ruin to a cup, can you be sure of replacing it? That is a very important question. At Ovington's the answer is always, "Yes."

Sheffield Farms Is prepared for your Summer Milk Needs

FOR fifty years past the thought dominating me at this time of the year has been the question of preparedness for successfully coping with the customers' milk requirements during the Summer months.

The first problem to be met arises from the fact that milk is the most perishable of all foods. That with lack of care it can in a few hours become unpalatable and as far as the children are concerned, unfit for food.

The second problem was how to have enough milk to go around during the hottest months because during those months every cow in the country cuts down her production, in many cases as much as 50%. The result of this on the local supply is such a drastic contraction that there have been times when the supply was seriously menaced.

But we are approaching this Summer in a better position than ever in the history of our business and I believe in a stronger position than any milk distributer ever enjoyed.

In the matter of handling our milk, we have perfected our equipment to a point where, I believe, those who know agree we have the best equipped and best organized milk handling machine in the world. I say this modestly, but I nevertheless think I am justified in saying it.

Our milk arrives in New York and reaches you in as good condition in Summer as in Winter, oceans of ice, rigid cleanliness and constant care have solved the problems of Summer transportation.

As to supply, we were never so fortunate before.

Our entire requirements come from the Sheffield Farms Producers' Association, an organization of independent dairy farmers whose first thought is to see that Sheffield Farms and Sheffield customers have plenty of milk of the kind that Sheffield customers want.

Here we have, for the first time in the history of the milk business, an actual friendly co-operation on the part of the producers, based on a perfect mutual understanding of the needs of everyone concerned. Regardless of the conditions in other milk fields, you can depend on these producers for whatever you may need.

In service we have expanded to an extent that makes it possible for you to get Sheffield Milk easier than any other commodity you buy. There are 1400 wagons out every day, and more coming as fast as we can build them. There are 225 Sheffield stores distributed about town so that you can find one or more in every neighborhood. There are 800 Atlantic and Pacific Tea stores selling Sheffield Milk, making up a distributing organization I believe to be without parallel.

So far as your milk needs are concerned you may approach the Summer without a care. We are prepared for them. If you are not taking Sheffield Milk now, we can serve you. A postal is all that is necessary. If you are an old customer I want to express our appreciation of your patronage and trust that we may always be able to please you. We are going to try very hard to do so.

We have the best group of dairymen in the world producing our milk. We have a distributing organization equal to any demands made on it.

With both of these essential factors of our business we have mutually satisfactory working arrangements that obviate delays or interruptions in service.

Sheffield Farms is prepared for your Summer milk needs. For just as many and just as fast as you come.

PRESS INFLUENCE WANING

Syndicate Service Affecting Newspapers' Success, He Says In Chicago Address.

CHICAGO, May 17 (Associated Press).—A distinct trend away from the sensationalism of the present daily press toward a more informative, dignified and restrained newspaper is seen by Willis J. Abbot of Boston, editor of The Christian Science Monitor, he said in an address before the Medill School of Journalism here tonight.

"The young journalist just entering upon his professional career should not accept the example of the so-called great dailies of today as indicative of what the newspaper of the future is going to be, said Mr. Abbot.

"Certainly a tendency toward more dignity and restraint will have to be developed and cultivated if newspaper editors wish to recover that public influence which it universally is admitted they now have lost," Mr. Abbot asserted, "and if we are to recover the voice of authority with which the successful editor of twenty-five years ago often spoke."

The development of the syndicated service is largely responsible for the decadence in the fortunes of the newspaper press as a whole, Mr. Abbot said, a decadence manifested in the steadily diminishing numbers of the papers that survive.

"While this service has enormously reduced the editorial expenditures of newspapers, it has cost originality and individualism. With all papers striving to be as alike as possible, it seems to me but natural that the real competition among newspapers will proceed from the business office rather than from the editorial rooms.

"I would welcome any influence which is brought to bear to make newspaper columns cleaner and more acceptable to clear-minded readers than they are today, whether that influence emanates from any agency, from a school of journalism, or from a church.

"I think the time is at hand when there will be in the mind of the educated journalist, such as a school of journalism should produce, a sharp demarcation between the varying types of journalism, and another distinction drawn between a circulation obtained by the legitimate methods of printing proper news, features and opinion, and circulation obtained by the devices of the charlatan, the sensationalist, or catch-penny gift distributions."

Mr. Abbot pointed out as an example the existing condition which confronts "the Associated Press" in its struggle between the sensational and the conservative elements in journalism.

"It is going to be interesting to watch the policy of this great newsgathering agency in the coming struggle between the sensational and the conservative elements," he said. "Already newspapers that are members of The Associated Press that have ambitions to shine with huge circulations however obtained, confronted by rivals who can spend more money on a special service, are calling upon The Associated Press to send more matter of the kind eliminated from its service.

"At the time of the recent murder of a model in New York, which filled the columns of the sensational press, the general manager of The Associated Press received telegrams from papers taking this service, complaining that they did not get as many of the horrifying details as were furnished to some of their rivals by their special correspondents in New York. Very properly this demand was not met.

"The power of suggestion possessed by the newspaper press is enormous. Capable and conscientious newspaper men argue that the exploitation of criminal news accomplishes a positive social service through its publication. Nobody can say positively how far this argument is well founded. But it is true and has been scientifically demonstrated that the systematic publishing of a series of criminal stories by the newspapers in a city invariably leads to an increase of crimes of precisely the sort that are described.

"A group of newspapers in any city can start a crime wave by declaring one exists, and usually can end one by forgetting all about it. Any physician will tell you that a similar pursuit of health news will extend into a dangerous epidemic a few sporadic cases of diseases which are thought to be rapidly communicable.

"Many newspaper editors believe that correspondence coming by mail has lost value, that anything that isn't worth telegraphing or cabling isn't worth printing, said Mr. Abbot. "I think that the American press has suffered greatly by this inclination to substitute the necessarily brief and often scrappy cable message for the carefully matured article. News is news until it is read.

WHAT Does Air-Bag Curing Do to a Tire?

Firestone Gum-Dipped Cords are cured under internal expansion on air-bags. Each cord is held straight and taut during vulcanization, giving perfect alignment, preventing creasing and avoiding the possibility of the cord fabric buckling.

Air-bag curing is a costlier process, but it adds carcass-strength and wear to the tire that increases mileage and cuts user costs.

The uniform dependability and wear of Firestone Cords, their nation-wide popularity among the more discriminating car owners, their never-waning reputation for Most Miles per Dollar—are significant facts for the tire-buyer who is still dissatisfied with the tire-service he gets.

Structural improvements, such as air-bag curing and double gum-dipping, have won thousands of new Firestone users, just as they have added thousands of miles to Firestone Cord service.

Firestone sales in six months have increased 194% over the same period one year ago!

Who are the seven greatest Americans?

THE EDITOR of The American Magazine asked that question of a famous teacher of history.

Suppose the question had been put to you. What seven names would be on your list? Note down your selections now, on the margin of this page—

AND then secure a copy of The American Magazine for June (on sale today) and read Dr. James Harvey Robinson's answer.

He is the author of "The Mind in the Making"—the wonderful book on thought which has now been a best seller for fifteen consecutive months.

As a professor of history for thirty years, Dr. Robinson has declared repeatedly that most of us do not dare to tell our children in school the things most important for them to know. He has had the courage to blaze new trails both in teaching history and writing it.

This article bristles with that sort of courage. It sweeps prejudices unceremoniously aside. It challenges the accepted standards of measuring men. It forces you to do some thinking on your own account.

Read this article. Decide for yourself what are the elements which entitle a human life to be accounted "great." The man who has settled that question has made his own life more effective.

And that is the service of The American Magazine—to make each month a definite contribution to more effective living.

PROHIBITION AND POLITICS.

President HARDING's letter to an ingenuous Newburgh Dry is notice that the campaign of 1924 has begun. His past and his coming conference with Governors on prohibition are other notices. The Republican Party is to pose as the only original and sincere friend of the Eighteenth Amendment and the enforcement of the Volstead act. In 1922 the Massachusetts people rejected, by a vote of nearly 2 to 1, the State Enforcement act passed by the Legislature. Mr. HARDING didn't deem it necessary to protest. It was too early; and Massachusetts is a Republican State, whose Governor vetoed the other day a bill for a referendum on the modification of the Volstead act. The veto was sustained and Republican inherent righteousness vindicated.

The case of Governor SMITH, Democrat, is, of course, different. Mr. HARDING writes that, "pending the approval" of the bill for the repeal of the Mullan-Gage law, "this matter is "hardly to be regarded as having "reached a stage where any Federal "authority is called upon for a de-"termination of national policies"; whereupon he makes a divagation into national policies about prohibition enforcement that is extremely curious, and might even be irritating, if the political purpose were not so plain. He seems to assume that a State which, like Maryland, for instance, declines to exercise its concurrent power under the Eighteenth Amendment is refusing to maintain the Constitution. Suppose that any or every State declines. The power of Congress given to it by the Eighteenth Amendment to enforce that amendment remains undiminished.

As the Supreme Court said in the prohibition cases, it "is in no wise de-"pendent on, or affected by, action "or inaction on the part of the sev-"eral States or any of them." The Constitution and the laws—the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead act—"are as much a part of the laws "of every State as its own local laws "and Constitution," as the court said forty years ago. In the absence of the Mullan-Gage law it would still be the duty of State and municipal officers to arrest and turn over to the Federal authorities persons whom they found violating the Volstead act and to report to those authorities evidence of its violation. Thus, between January, 1920, and April, 1921, when the State law went into effect, the police of this city arraigned in the Federal courts 2,400 persons charged with violation of the Volstead act. Remember, however, that in the first nine months of the State law they arrested more than 10,000.

The Federal Government had its prohibition officers here before the Mullan-Gage law was passed. It has had them here since it was passed. If it needs to have more of them here should Governor SMITH sign the repeal bill, then it must provide and pay for more. The peace officers will be bound under their general duty to aid in the enforcement of the Volstead act. They will simply be released from the special duty laid upon them by the Mullan-Gage law. The State has a perfect right to forbear the exercise of its concurrent power. It would still discharge "its proper duty," the non-fulfillment of which, in Mr. HARDING's opinion, elicits this romantic vaticination:

> I venture that, if by reason of the refusal or failure of any State to discharge its proper duty in such connection the Federal Government is at length compelled to enter upon the territory and jurisdiction of the State and to set up those police and judicial authorities which would be required, the most difficult and trying situations would inevitably arise.

This vision of some super-Force bill and Federal "minions" invading the sacred soil of recalcitrant States belongs to the curiosities of political "literature." The right of a State to refuse to pass or to repeal a State enforcement law is undeniable. Yet the repeal of the Mullan-Gage law was not asked for by the Democratic Party last year. There is no evidence that it was asked for by a majority of the people of the State. It barely squeezed through the Legislature.

Its frantic welcome by the more foolish Wets; the known hopes that it has raised among bootleggers and retail booze-sellers of an "open town" and a more "open" State; the fear among thoughtful men and women who seek a reasonable Federal prohibition law that the repeal and its results will cause a reaction: the fact, justified or not, that the repeal has been taken throughout the country as a blow at the Volstead act—these would be sufficient reasons for Governor SMITH's refusing to sign the bill.

SALARIES BY REFERENDUM.

If Governor SMITH signs a bill which was passed by both Senate and Assembly unanimously, the voters of this city will have placed in their hands at the election next November a separate ballot on which is to be printed the question: "Shall the wage "of first-grade patrolmen and first-"grade firemen of this city be "$2,500 per year?" This is "home rule" with a vengeance! The design of the bill is obviously to get around the objections which Mayor HYLAN has consistently urged to "mandatory" bills passed by the Legislature increasing the pay of policemen and firemen. If the question is put to the dear people of the flock which he shepherds, and if they approve the larger salary, how can he possibly be recalcitrant? In fact, he would be powerless even if he were opposed to the increase, since the bill provides that if a majority of the qualified electors voting on the question should be found to be in the affirmative, the Board of Estimate is to be required to provide the necessary funds. Everybody can see that the method proposed is wholly novel, not to say irregular, and ought not to have a place in an orderly City Government with control over its own appropriations for police and fire protection; yet it cannot be denied that the plan is ingeniously devised to overcome the Mayor's professed scruples, and to leave him in an awkward position if the vote goes as the policemen and firemen hope that it will.

Attempts to increase salaries by referendum are not always successful. The proposal to give the Judges of the Court of Appeals as high salaries as those of the members of the Supreme Court in this district was emphatically voted down in New York. But who would maintain that a mere Judge is as close to the great heart of the people as is a policeman? If the Governor signs the bill and the test is made, a powerful movement will undoubtedly get under way to induce the electors to approve the higher wage for the policemen and firemen of New York, who are supposed not to be altogether innocent in politics. And the decision when made will have very little to do with the merits of the case by itself. No doubt a very effective plea could be made for the increase, in these days of high and rising costs of living, but the argument on that head will be of little force compared with the appeal necessarily powerful in many quarters to do something for the good fellows on patrol and in the firehouses who do so much to make neighborhood life safer and distinctly more congenial.

FILLING THE SENATE.

On account of the progressive-radical bloc in the Senate, the filling of vacancies in that "august" body stirs general interest. It was expected that Governor PREUS of Minnesota would resign and accept from his successor, the Lieutenant Governor, an appointment as Senator to succeed the late KNUTE NELSON, until after the general election in November, 1924. Then a Senator to fill Mr. NELSON'S unexpired term, which would have ended March 4, 1925, and also a Senator for the six-year term, beginning with that date, will be elected. Apparently there was nothing in the State law to prevent the Governor's resignation and appointment; but a stir was made about the matter, presumably by radical Republicans, and the Governor said he would resign and accept only if the State Supreme Court held that the Acting Governor could lawfully appoint in the circumstances.

The punctilio seems rather queer. Whether no agreement could be made on the manner in which the subject should come before the court, or an immediate decision was not practicable, we do not know. The Governor has now called a special primary and election, in June and July, respectively, so that the people, or the Republican people, may choose Mr. NELSON'S successor. It is to be hoped that Governor PREUS will be elected. He was long Senator NELSON'S secretary, is much the same type of man and has much of the same public esteem. He is conservative, but not bigoted. His popularity was shown last Fall when he was chosen Governor, though the farm-labor radical, Dr. SHIPSTEAD, was elected Senator.

The death of Senator NICHOLSON of Colorado last month lost the Republicans in the Senate one vote, as Governor SWEET is a Democrat. There was a touching and general desire to bestow advice upon the Governor. The Colorado women's clubs wanted a woman appointed. Mr. WILSON, Mr. BRYAN, Mr. MCADOO kindly suggested candidates. Governor General LEONARD WOOD telegraphed from the Philippines a commendation of the military record of Mr. BRYAN'S and Mr. MCADOO'S nominee, though Mr. MCADOO generously approved Mr. WILSON'S nominee also. Governor SWEET received politely all these recommendations, but he has appointed, naturally, his own candidate, ALVA B. ADAMS, son of a former Governor of Colorado, a Yale graduate, a lawyer, who believes in private ownership of railroads, in preparedness, in the World Court, and can't stomach "the "international policies of Senator LA "FOLLETTE and those who agree with "him." To their general line of domestic policies he also seems opposed, though he favors some changes in the Esch-Cummings Transportation act.

So, out of the "progressive" West comes another conservative Senator. He will be welcome, though a Senator doesn't have to be more than rationally progressive to seem a monument of economic, social and political old-fogyism by the side of vagary-collectors like Mr. LA FOLLETTE and Mr. BROOKHART.

PORTO RICAN ASPIRATIONS.

At a banquet to Secretary WEEKS at San Juan on May 2 the Porto Ricans had an opportunity to tell him what they desire. As their spokesman they presented the eloquent leader of their Republican party, Senator TOUS SORO. He was not only eloquent but clever. In the preparation of his speech he must have had the assistance of shrewd politicians. He pleaded for a territorial organization as a step toward Statehood. He wisely refrained from raising the question of independence. Senator SORO began by quoting from President HARDING'S address at the unveiling of the Bolivar statue in Central Park, "We see in our Latin-American "States the best agency to aid the "Americas to understand each other," and he asked pointedly how Porto Rico could bring about an understanding between the Americas "if we cannot "come to an understanding between "ourselves." Senator SORO reminded the American guests that citizenship had been bestowed upon the Porto Ricans in 1917, but that territorial government was still withheld. He went on:

> Governor TOWNER, in his inaugural address, told us that we are an integral part of the nation, and prior to that, speaking in the name of the nation, he called us "flesh of our flesh and bone of our bone," and we would like to believe the man who presided over the Committee of the House of Representatives of the United States entrusted with our affairs, because his words are in accord with our sentiments and our aspirations.

However "the flesh of our flesh and bone of our bone" figure of speech should signify a program of self-government without more delay, Senator SORO thought. Why not a Christmas present of the kind of government Alaska enjoyed as a first step? And then, with what he called "Castilian frankness," the Porto Rican orator made this gesture:

> Speaking for my party, I can say that, if we believed that being separated from the continent by the sea and the difference in race should constitute an insuperable barrier to the recognition of our sovereignty within the Union, we would aspire to secure it outside the Union, following the example of emancipated peoples of our tongue.

Senator SORO served notice that when the Porto Rican delegation went to the convention of the Republican Party next year it would ask for a Statehood plank, such as the Democrats had put in their platform at San Francisco in 1920. "To Porto Rico," he said, "you have given citizenship, "but against all logic you have not "promised us anything."

Secretary WEEKS was expected to say something pleasing to his hosts, and he did, in a statistical way. There had been a tremendous development in Porto Rican trade: exports had increased seventeen times in a period of twenty years and imports ten and a half times. Illiteracy had been reduced from 80 to 50 per cent., the death rate from 42 to 22 per cent. The good work must go on. Capital must be attracted to develop industries, so that the appropriations for schools and sanitation would be adequate. "You "should strain every nerve to improve "your condition" (of literacy), urged Mr. WEEKS. And then came what his native audience was waiting to hear:

> I do not intend to imply any promise of Statehood. I have no authority to make such a promise, but certainly Statehood cannot be considered favorably until there is a larger percentage of literacy in Porto Rico.

Secretary WEEKS did not touch upon territorial organization, the Christmas present that Senator SORO had solicited. The Porto Ricans, by the way, claim a greater percentage of literacy than 50. It is rising every year. They are certainly entitled to a statement about a standard necessary to insure them more self-government. Shall it be 60, 70 per cent., or what? The Porto Rican leaders had expected something better from Secretary WEEKS. But the editor of El Tiempo was not cast down. Judge TOWNER was the man to cultivate, he told his readers the following day: "We "say to the Old Guard: Be patient, "we have a friend at the palace."

MR. BRYAN AND THE PRESBYTERIANS.

Mr. BRYAN could hardly have expected to be elected Moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly. A layman is very seldom chosen for that office. Besides, Mr. BRYAN has the habit of trying three times before succeeding. Yet as a member of the Assembly and as one who feels himself charged with a high mission in having gone to Indianapolis, he is certain to make himself heard and to exercise a potent influence in the deliberations.

The Assembly always has a good deal of routine ecclesiastical matter to attend to, but this year questions of faith and doctrine are sure to have unusual prominence. Overtures on these latter subjects have gone up to the Assembly from several Presbyteries. To them Mr. BRYAN can point as expressing a general sentiment calling for action by the Assembly. The effort will plainly be to secure a deliverance by this highest tribunal of the Presbyterian Church on the questions which Mr. Bryan has been debating up and down the land. He will doubtless desire to place the Church on record in regard to what he thinks of the teaching of "science falsely so called"; in particular, he will demand some utterance from this ecclesiastical body, in line with action which he has secured from certain Legislatures, against the whole theory of evolution, at least as applied to man. The result will inevitably be a line-up of the more liberal-minded against the conservatives, though not now as in times past on a question strictly theological. At present, it is star-eyed science that has wandered as far as Indianapolis to produce a division in the Presbyterian ranks.

Subsidiary to this general discussion, though in some respects more important than it, is the question what the Presbyterian General Assembly will do in the case of Dr. FOSDICK of New York. Technically and directly, it is not able to call him to account for his alleged heresies. He himself is a Baptist, and though preaching in a Presbyterian church is not subject to Presbyterian jurisdiction. But the officers of the particular church which employs him as a "stated supply" are so subject and might be dealt with through the Presbytery of New York. The report is that this latter body has already taken steps to look into the matter. If that be true, it should have the effect of estopping any immediate action by the Assembly. The Assembly could not well direct the Presbytery to do what it had already set about. If the Presbytery reports that it has taken the first steps in an inquiry, but has not yet reached conclusions, the natural result will be simply to have the case referred back where it belongs. But there can hardly fail to be, from Mr. BRYAN or from some other source, a resounding appeal to the Church to stand firm in the faith once delivered to the saints, and to frown upon the work of a preacher who, while he draws great multitudes to listen to his fervid and elevating sermons, is yet suspected of not subscribing whole-heartedly to every clause in the Westminster Catechism.

OUR RHINE ARMY CLAIMS.

Whatever the reason for the failure last year of our Government to obtain its share of Germany's payments on account of the costs of the armies of occupation, the complications which have since arisen will hardly increase European good-will toward the United States. The facts in their simplest form are that it was agreed by the terms of the armistice that Germany should pay the cost of the upkeep of the armies of occupation; and in the Versailles Treaty it was stipulated that these costs should be "a first "charge upon all the assets and rev-"enues of the German Empire and its "constituent States." This particular clause was also included in the separate peace treaty between this country and Germany.

In accordance with this agreement, Germany a year ago made payments of about 700,000,000 gold marks for the account of the occupation costs. This was distributed among the Allies, but nothing was given to the United States. Secretary HUGHES thereupon sent a note of protest reviewing the facts in the case and clearly stating America's legal right to her share of the payments. But as the money had already been distributed, America had to be content with polite regrets instead of money. Mr. HUGHES explained at the time, and his actions since then have borne out his words, that it was not his intention to represent the United States as a grasping creditor. He merely served notice of a claim, and was prepared to collect in such a manner as to cause the least inconvenience to the Allies.

To effect a settlement, ELIOT WADSWORTH, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, went to France representing the American Government. To his suggestion that the Allies reimburse the United States out of their own chests it was answered that national budgets were too small to permit this. The Allies suggested, instead, that the United States accept reimbursement out of future payments from Germany. The United States, willing to be helpful, reluctantly agreed to this. The Allies then suggested that America receive its payments in cash alone, evidently with the expectation that the bulk of Germany's payments would be made in kind. To this also the United States agreed, in order to oblige the Allies. The United States finally accepted the principle that payments should be made over a period of twelve years, with only small advances during the first four years. Thereupon the Allies raised the question of priority and objected to letting the United States have first claim upon the German payments. In the meantime they tried to persuade the American Government to reimburse itself through some of the seized German property in this country. The latest proposal is that if Germany pays any of the private American claims arising out of the war, the Allies shall have the right to abrogate the agreement regarding army costs.

The Allies are, of course, anxious not to have the German payments to their Governments cut down. It is hard for them, therefore, not to try every scheme by which the United States might be induced to shoulder the occupation costs. But Secretary HUGHES stands firm on the legally correct contention that America is entitled to her share, and is determined to obtain it. He is willing to make a generous settlement, but is not willing to make an illusory one. It would have been simpler to settle the matter when Germany made her first payments last year.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Something New in Egypt.

A dispatch to THE TIMES from Cairo told yesterday about the reaction of the Egyptians to the privilege or right, now for the first time in all their centuries of history, to take part in the government of their country and to elect at least a part of their rulers and lawmakers.

Some of them have welcomed the change from the autocratic to the constitutional system of running a country with much enthusiasm, and all who are glad seem to be trying to get themselves elected to office. With the first election day still some way off, there already are 4,000 candidates for 400 places in the new Legislature, and more are declaring themselves daily. Probably the whole "intelligentsia" of Egypt will be "in the field" before it is too late, and though they are novices in the political game, they are proving themselves adepts in one of its oldest devices—that of declaring their rivals to be fiends in hardly human forms, exponents of all the vices and guilty of all the crimes.

That is one side of the story. The other is the behavior of the common people—the mass of the newly enfranchised. They are not enthusiastic. They hardly know what all the commotion is about, and in the notification to register, preparatory to voting, they strongly are inclined to see an effort to facilitate drafting them into the army or in some other way to give the Government a firmer hold over them for the purposes of the exploitation to which for so many centuries their masters have subjected them. Great numbers of them, therefore, are refusing or failing to be enrolled, and the result is that the victories to be won at the polls will express but dubiously the sacred "will of the people."

Their One Chance to Learn.

It would be easy from this picture of Egypt before its first election day to argue that the Egyptians are not capable of self-government and would be better protected and more prosperous under foreign domination or even a native despot if he happened to be a benevolent one.

In all probability that is true, and it is not less probable that for a while, and perhaps for a long while, their self-government will be a good deal of a mess and a muddle. Therein it will not be wholly unlike self-government in nations that have had long experience along that line, for none of them has made a perfect, or even a notably brilliant, success of it as yet.

It is not everything, however, to be safe and prosperous, and it has well been said that good government never is a satisfactory substitute for self-government. Certainly the Egyptians never would learn to govern themselves while others were governing them, though never so wisely, and history teaches every schoolboy—who reads it—that the benevolent despot is a creature hardly less a product of the imagination than the unicorn.

The Egyptians will, or at least may, learn as they go along from their mistakes and their failures, just as the rest of us have done—to whatever extent we have learned anything—and in due time they may cease to be, as now, either amusing or pathetic, according to the observer's temperament.

It cannot be said that their training for constitutionalism or democracy has been bad, for they have had none at all. Possibly that is an advantage, for they have nothing to unlearn, and lots of room in their heads for new ideas. That is more than can be said of many other peoples.

Legislatures Coercing Historians.

Dr. WILLIAM ALLAN NEILSON, President of Smith College, addressing the English-speaking Union, lamented with good reason the present tendency of legislators to tell historians how they should and must write their books. This, as Dr. NEILSON said, is simply an effort to compel a return to the days when every historian was a propagandist—the defender of a national cause or party or the assailant of one.

Only in recent years have honest efforts to record historic facts without regard to the effect on national pride or prejudice been at all frequent, but progress in this direction has been real, as is illustrated by the present almost general recognition that a British writer has produced by far the best and the fairest history of the American Revolution.

The foolish legislators do not want best and fairest histories. What they want is the perpetuation of national myths—that their children should be taught that America always was right, Americans always noble and just, and that our heroes were without any trace of human weakness.

Fortunately they can control—as yet—only the textbooks used in our public schools; and though that is serious enough, no great amount of real harm will be done, for while children easily are deceived, they as easily can forget, and they have a good deal of common sense.

They will be puzzled, however, if they discover, for instance, that one account of our Civil War is taught in the North and quite another in the South, as will be the case if the misguided Legislatures have their way.

Violating Dinner Precedents.

WICKHAM STEED, editor of The London Times in the Northcliffe régime, is quoted as having told the members of the Pilgrims' Society that the less talk there was about "American cousins," "hands across the sea" and "blood thicker than water," the better it would be for all concerned. He advised them to get out of their heads the notion that Americans are "slightly different—and slightly spoiled —Englishmen," and to substitute for it the fact that Americans are foreigners. Continuing, he said:

> I do not think that America let us down after the war. It was a miracle that America came in at all. America has not wiped out our debt; she regards the transaction as a commercial one, and she and we both like people who pay their debts.

All this will be most painful to sentimentalists, and, if heeded, it would necessitate the learning of an almost entirely new set of stock phrases for use at dinners of a nature more or less international. But Mr. STEED was over here long enough to learn at least a little about us, and his conclusions, while shocking in their novelty, when coming from a friend, are so chiefly, or wholly, because they contain a large element of truth.

Great Britain and the United States are as distinctly separate countries as are any other two countries, and the people of each really are "foreigners" to those of the other. That doesn't mean that they are or need be enemies.

PROTECTING THE PALISADES

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Dr. Dickinson's article in the Sunday TIMES gives expression to a thought that recently has been in the minds of many people who want the beauty of the Palisades preserved and who say taxes supposed to be devoted to that purpose. It is not surprising that the roads being built along the Palisades are subject of criticism, because they are being built under the direction of a group of men who will not accept advice from those who have made of the particular work their life study and profession. Among the Commissioners in charge are well-known representatives of the world of law and finance and every other profession except the essential one—landscape architecture.

Landscape work is an alluring field of recreation for men of wealth—in it there is fun, health and social prestige to be gained. It is an excellent pastime when exercised on one's own private estate with one's own private funds; but have the Palisades parks ceased to be a public playground and become a private plaything?

Much of the money has been and is being spent in constructing driveways across the very face of the scenic features which the law was created to preserve. True enough, the untouched grandeur of the scenery is so sufficient as to swallow up evidences of much of the artificial development, until it has gone too far to call a halt. The Palisades are a magnificent scenic formation, held sacred to every American and lover of the beautiful. The masses of rock, as nature created them, rise in vertical ridges like members of a Gothic pile, in a way that is an inspiration in architecture and in art. At one place against this wall of natural rough brownstone there has been constructed a smooth white bridge of cement. The intent as evidenced in work done all the way up the river seems to be to do "something" at the very places where nature has completed the work and should be left untouched.

Some of the most famous landscape architects in the world have offered their services free to safeguard these parks, but to no avail. It is time the Commissioners of the Palisades parks, and likewise the Governors of the two States, realize that experimentation in landscape architecture on public lands with public funds is a precarious adventure, unless guided by the highest standard of expert professional advice.

Foreign-Born Manners.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In your editorial on the panic in the recent subway accident, you say: "The conduct of some men was not such as we expect from Americans." Those men, even though they had citizens' papers in their pockets, were not Americans. I have had to travel on the subway and surface cars this Winter. After every Italian, Greek, Russian, German and Armenian is in the cars, an American woman can enter, but she won't get a seat. I am in deep mourning, elderly and not strong. Does any young, husky foreigner notice that or care?

I have often wondered what would happen should there be a panic. Now we know. One is jostled very often in the street by the same kind of young men—not Americans. I rejoice in the opportunity these strong, ambitious foreigners have in our country, but one American woman is very tired of them and their manners.

Bricks and Humanity.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is known that for every building in course of construction there is a man to watch the bricks, iron, &c., during the night so that no one shall steal anything.

Then why not likewise, for the sake of human life, have a watchman in every house during the night to protect the lives of those in the building in case of fire?

RUN AWAY, LITTLE DREAM!

Run away, Little Dream!
Don't you see I'm busy?
Go and play, Little Dream,
Till my work is done!
With a task and a scheme
My hands and head are dizzy;
Don't delay, Little Dream—
Run, run, run!

Run away, Little Dream!
Go—why—is he gone?
Nay, nay, Little Dream—
Oh, I was a bear!
Light my heart with the gleam
Of your smile so glowing!
Stay, stay, Little Dream—
There, there, there!

GARBAGE DISPOSAL.

Economic and Other Advantages of the Incinerator System.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Now that the ash and garbage dumps are to be removed from Riverside Drive, before it is too late a complete and comprehensible zone incinerator plan should be designed for all three boroughs. In accordance with the rapidly growing population it would be wise and far-seeing to provide sufficient space next to each destructor for the erection of a sewage disposal plant, so that the purified grease could then be added as fuel to the destructor and thus increase the power generated. New York should adopt the latest, most modern sanitary and economic zone incinerator plants. The area set aside for each zone should be considered only in accordance with the output of ashes and garbage. If possible these zone plants should be placed along the river-front, the grounds surrounding the destructor and buildings planted with trees and shrubs.

The latest approved sanitary method is a mixed collection of ashes and garbage, because the moisture in the garbage absorbs the lye and potash in the ashes, thus preserving it for a reasonable time from decaying and keeps it odorless. It also prevents cats, rats, mice, roaches and flies from feeding upon it, and therefore eliminates their breeding and feeding places. This will no doubt prove the most effective means of cleaning up the slums and a great prevention to the spreading of disease in the congested districts by flies and vermin. Aside from this sanitary precaution a great economic advantage will be gained by the incineration of the ashes, because the 35 per cent. heat units contained in the ashes should undoubtedly be utilized first to increase the power generated, then the residue of both ashes and garbage can be used for concreting or filling-in purposes, for road-making, flagging or pipes. In each zone another great sanitary and economic advantage should be utilized, namely, all dead animals and the 25,000,000 pounds of food condemned annually likewise to be incinerated and thus further increase the power generated.

In each borough the tremendous output of ashes and garbage and other waste materials would run, light and heat all offices, workshops, garages and other buildings required by the Department of Street Cleaning in each zone. The excess power generated turned into electricity would not only supply with batteries the ash and garbage trucks but all municipally owned autos and trucks in each particular zone plant, and thereby make each destructor self-maintaining.

By adopting the suggested sanitary and economic zone incinerator plan ten to twelve destructors could handle the entire output of waste materials from all three boroughs. It is, therefore, an easy matter for the taxpayers to judge and, let us hope, to decide how greatly the expense of the Street Cleaning Department can be reduced by adopting this scientific, sanitary and economic method.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I congratulate you on your editorial of May 15 on reciprocity with Canada, particularly on the last sentence? Having had several trips to Canada to lecture on the subject of potato production, I know well many of their growers and their scientists who work on potato production in Canada. My long experience traveling in many of our States gives me the same knowledge of the feelings of potato producers on this side of the line. I am buying seed potatoes from the far north of Canada, and am glad of the duty I pay on seed, for it also protects my far greater product.

American potato growers, like other American farmers, are very sick of the Wilson-Trotsky-Hoover-Lenin principle that food producers exist only for the benefit of city residents. Canada manufactures little, but has a heavy agricultural surplus to export. Any reciprocity treaty with Canada can only mean heavy competition for American farmers, for the benefit of city residents. As the producer of 8,500 bushels of potatoes last year I fail to see why Canadian potatoes should be admitted free of duty to compete with mine, when the articles I buy of city manufacture are still enhanced in price by tariff duties.

Bolshevism in Russia has already been forced to admit its total failure. Bolshevism in the United States is still a very powerful force, when our President does not scruple to appeal to its principles to gain a temporary popularity. I refer to sugar. According to the principles of Bolshevism, as declared by Wilson and Hoover, any loss from a fall in the price of sugar, potatoes or any other American farm product must be borne by the producer or distributor. Any rise in price ought to be presented to the ultimate consumer on the principle, "Heads, I win; tails, you lose."

Out-of-Date Maps.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Why cannot we improve popular geographical standards in our country? To travel intelligently in the United States it is still necessary to purchase a German guide-book, and the maps of New York City peddled on our streets for the use of incoming tourists would be a disgrace to any European city of one-hundredth our size. Not long ago I tried to obtain a clearly drawn outline map of Manhattan for the use of certain church organizations, and I found after careful investigation that nothing of the sort existed.

Recently the Danish colony in New York has been disturbed by what purports to be a "1923 Atlas of the World" issued by one of our most reputable publishing houses. That part of Slesvig which has been returned to Denmark is still printed in German colors. On another page the cartographer shows the rare intelligence of conceding Greenland to Denmark. Denmark is printed in yellow, Danish Slesvig in brown, with the legend, "Sovereignty to be determined by plebiscite." The map is issued in 1923 and North Slesvig was ceded to Denmark by plebiscite in 1920. Of course the Danes see subtle German propaganda in all this, but I see in it only crass American carelessness.

Shut-In Society's Work.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

There is a quiet little society which reaches people that no other society knows of. It is called "The Shut-In Society." An exchange for its work is maintained at 129 East Thirty-fourth Street. Here one can see what a man who can use only one thumb and forefinger can accomplish, or a girl with spinal trouble who can sit up only twenty minutes at a time can do.

Then we are the only society which lends wheel chairs. One woman wrote us: "It is "years since I have been out of doors. Won't "you help me to get a chair?" One boy who lay with his face to the wall, all interest in life gone, now sits up in a wheel chair, is bright and cheerful and will visit the park in good weather. Many of our women members do their housework by use of these chairs.

Wheel chairs make good memorials, as a brass plate can be placed on the back of the chair. Like most other things their price has doubled, and we have to pay $40 for the least expensive chair.

We have many other little services we perform for our members. Every one is remembered at Christmas, Easter and on their birthdays, and many cheerful letters and much literature is circulated.

MEXICAN CONGRESS UPHOLDS OBREGON

OFFSET OF CLAIMS SOUGHT

Mexico Expected to Ask Damages for Invasion—Governors May Be Blamed for Confiscation.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, May 17.—The conference of American and Mexican commissioners on recognition was resumed at 10 o'clock this morning and the session, which lasted three hours, was devoted to exchange of impressions and examination of data while the delegates awaited President Obregon's answer to the demand that American rights be respected before Mexico can take her place in the family of nations. During the trip of the delegates to the pyramids yesterday Obregon went over the minutes of the first two meetings.

It is understood that the expected answer of the Mexican Government that no American property has been confiscated will be refuted by documents from Washington. The question of damages, it is said, has not yet been taken up.

Confidential sources state the belief that the Mexican Government will make the explanation that, although the Federal law does not warrant confiscation, several State laws, over which the Federal Government has no control, still permit governors to take property without payment.

The efforts of Obregon to overrule these Governors have so far been directed through Supreme Court decisions, but, looking under the surface, it is seen that the majority of these Governors who have obstructed the work of the Federal Government are practically at the end of their terms. Several elections are coming in the next two months, and it is assured that the winning candidates will seek the efforts of the Federal Government.

The action of Congress in giving President Obregon a vote of confidence today is taken as a sign that COngress is solidly back of Obregon in any measures that he may take in the controversy. The resolution was carried by a vote of 131 to 9. The President sent a message thanking the Chamber.

When the question of payments for American property comes up, Mexican claims will also be presented for damages through the taking of Vera Cruz with killing of both civilians and soldiers; the possession of this city for many months by the establishment of American Government, though military, on Mexican soil without declaration of war; the Pershing expedition into Mexico without declaration of war, and the continued occupation of Chamessal, which is now part of the City of El Paso.

The amount of damages asked by Mexico is expected to equal the claims claimed by American citizens for their property, and the Mexicans are said to hope both Governments can wipe their respective claims off the slate.

A group of missionaries who are working to establish Protestant churches in Mexico have presented to Commissioners Charles B. Warren a signed petition asking the immediate formal, unconditional recognition of Mexico.

TO HONOR GREELY PARTY.

Tablet Will Be Erected at Cape Sabine to 18 Men Who Died There.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—National Geographic Society Trustees have authorized a tablet at Camp Clay, Cape Sabine, in the Arctic, in memory of the eighteen men of the Greely expedition who died there in 1884. Major Gen. A. W. Greely, retired, dean of living Arctic explorers and leader of the party, now lives in Washington. The tablet is one of a series the Geographic Society will place as memorials to Americans who have made history in polar explorations.

Memorials to Rear Admiral Peary, discoverer of the North Pole and to Rear Admiral Charles Wilkes, discoverer of the Antarctic Continent, have already been erected in Arlington National Cemetery here.

The tablet to the Greely party will be carried by Donald B. MacMillan when he starts north in June for further explorations of the Arctic, and it will be placed in position by him on the rock cliff facing the camp.

WOMEN VOTE FOR MERGER.

League Decides to Join Forces With With Citizens' Union.

The members of the Women's Municipal League at a meeting at the Hotel Plaza yesterday voted to merge with the Citizens Union. The merger had been under consideration for some time, and was foreshadowed at the recent annual meeting of the league, when it was decided to hold a special meeting to vote on this question.

Mrs. Charles Mallory Williams, President of the league, said that the purpose of the league and the union is to bring about a wider and more intelligent interest in public affairs and better government for New York City, were the same, and that it had seemed best to have men and women working together for the same objective.

NANCY HOYT FAILS TO MARRY FIANCE

BRITISH OFFICER LEAVES

Miss Hoyt the Sister of Mrs. Elinor Hichborn, Whose Elopement Startled Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Washington society has been provided with a new sensation by Miss Nancy Hoyt, whose sister, Mrs. Elinor Hoyt Hichborn Wylie, had been the centre of a series of matrimonial sensations since 1916.

"Indefinite postponement" of Miss Hoyt's marriage to Lieutenant F. Wiseman-Clarke of the British Navy was announced yesterday a few hours before the time set for the wedding, and after many of the guests had assembled from distant cities for the ceremony. At the Hoyt home it was said the postponement was due to Miss Hoyt's illness. Immediately after the announcement, however, the prospective bridegroom and his parents left for New York, with the apparent intention of sailing for England.

Mrs. Wylie, sister of Miss Hoyt, first startled society in 1916 by eloping with Horace Wylie, from whom she recently received a divorce. At the time of the elopment she was the wife of Philip S. Hichborn, a member of another prominent Washington family, and soon after her departure he committed suicide.

Miss Hoyt is a daughter of the late Henry A. Hoyt, Solicitor General during President Taft's Administration. She is a sister of Morton Hoyt, who married Miss Eugenia Bankhead, granddaughter of the Alabama Senator, and from he was separated three months ago. Another brother, Henry M. Hoyt, an artist, committed suicide in 1920.

MRS. SANDS TO WED CAPT. WILLIAM WATERS

Her Daughter's Troth to Capt. Nungesser, French Ace, Told at Same Time in Paris.

From Paris came yesterday announcement of the engagement of Mrs. Nellie Sands, mother of Miss Alice De Lamar of this city, to Captain William Waters, an American residing in Paris. At the same time, the engagement was announced of Mrs. Sands's daughter by her second husband, Miss Consuelo Hatmaker, who is to marry Captain Charles Nungesser, the French ace of aces, who had forty-four German planes to his credit during the war.

Miss De Lamar is to sail shortly for Paris, and it is expected that the double wedding of her mother and half-sister will take place soon after her arrival.

Captain Nungesser, Miss Hatmaker's fiancé is 31 years old and his bride-to-be is 21. He is at present engaged in developing commercial aviation. During the war the German Government placed a price of 500,000 gold marks on his head. He received thirty-nine decorations, including the American Distinguished Service Cross. AMBASSADOR SWAM IN LAVENDER GLOVES

Jusserand and Roosevelt Had Undressed on Bank of Rock Creek.

Dr. Henry van Dyke ridiculed Thomas A. Edison before the Authors' Club last night because of the inventor's recent "expert testimony" in which he expressed the view that motion pictures could be employed more effectively than books in education. Dr. van Dyke was a speaker at the dinner in honor of the French Ambassador, Jules J. Jusserand.

The former Ambassador to Turkey, Oscar S. Straus, told a story of how Ambassador Jusserand went to the White House on one occasion to pay his respects to President Roosevelt. The President was about to go for a swim, and the French Ambassador, wearing a high hat, cutaway coat and lavender gloves, according to Mr. Straus, went along with the President of the United States to take a plunge in Rock Creek, in keeping with diplomatic courtesy.

The President and M. Jusserand put their clothes on the bank, said Mr. Straus, and the President noticed that Ambassador Jusserand was wearing his lavender gloves.

"'Aren't you going to take them off?' he asked, to which M. Jusserand replied:

"'No, M. President, I shall keep them on because we might meet some ladies on the other side.'

Dr. van Dyke said he would like to know how the "movies" were going to teach any one to think clearly and reason soundly" as is the case with a book. He referred to the achievements of M. Jusserand in the field of literature, and said he doubted whether motion pictures would enable the Ambassador or any one else to answer one of Mr. Edison's questionnaires.

"If you will pardon me for using such an expression," said Dr. van Dyke with a show of vehemence, "I'll say it's all poppycock. Language is essential to thought. You cannot think without language. Now, M. Jusserand has two great accomplishments. First, he can express his thoughts in language, and second, he can keep silent in admirable French, and how he can keep silent is evidenced by the fact that he has not told anything about the situation in the Ruhr."

Dr. van Dyke indorsed the move of the French into the Ruhr and said it had to be done for the salvation of France.

The Authors' Club presented to Ambassador Jusserand a special copy, No. 100 of the limited edition of Liber Scriptorum, the second book of the Authors' Club, containing poems, essays, stories and other contributions by 150 members of the club. Don C. Seitz presided at the dinner.

HOLD GARDEN PARTY IN ZOOLOGICAL PARK

NEW WILD LIFE PAINTINGS

The Annual Garden Party of the New York Zoological Society was held at the Zoological Park yesterday, under perfect weather conditions.

Unique specimens of birds and animals gathered by the Galapagos Islands expedition, financed by Harrison Williams and in charge of William Beebe, were exhibited on the lawn near the Administration Building, where the garden party was held. There was a flightless cormorant in one cage, and in another some rare penguins. In an old boat, and in the boxes in which they had traveled, were shown interesting and ugly specimens of giant lizards, land and marine, the iguana. The Galapagos party, which included the Zoo's Tropical Research Station Staff, returned last Wednesday.

A luncheon and a meeting of the society's Board of Managers preceded the garden party. Mr. Williams was elected a member of the board, to succeed the late Watson B. Dickerman.

In the Administration Building was an exhibition of fifty water colors of animal life observed on the Galapagos Island, by Miss Isabel Cooper, and landscape and marine views of Galapagos Island area, by Harry Hoffman, another member of the expedition. A new painting of the silver tip grizzly bear recently done for the society by Carl Runcius, was also on exhibition in the gallery of wild animal paintings.

A pretty little black spider monkey from Galapagos Island, which was tied by a ribbon in the Administration Building, broke loose in the excitement of the party. Until a cage could be procured the monkey was the centre of attraction for the guests. Mr. Beebe held the frightened little primate, which curled its long tail around him.

Speaking of Galapagos Island, Mr. Beebe said: "It was a garden of Eden. The animals had never been frightened and were perfectly tame. If we wished to see eggs in a nest we lifted the mother bird, looked in and put her back again. A seal cub would be taken from the water, played with for a time and thrown back to swim, not at all alarmed, to its mother. And that place has previously only been visited by pirates and buccaneers, and I am strong for them."

Animal pictures by Raymond L. Ditmars were shown in the basement of the Heads and Horns Building. The guests visited the pygmy baby hippopotamus born four weeks ago in the Zoo, and a new royal Bengal tiger from India.

The guests were received by the Board of Managers and members of the Ladies Auxiliary, among whom were Mrs. Henry Fairfield Osborne, Chairman; Mrs. George F. Baker Jr., Mrs. Walter Maynard, Mrs. Reginald Pincke, Mrs. Arthur Fowler, Mrs. Lorenzo Daniels, Mrs. William Woodward, Mrs. Pierpont Morgan, Mrs. Percy R. Pyne, Mrs. William Osborn Field, Mrs. DeForest Grant and Miss Pauline Robinson.

Mrs. Finley J. Shepard, who rarely misses attending the garden party with her children, was unable to be there yesterday on account of the death of her brother, George J. Gould.

Among the members of the Board attending the luncheons were President Henry Fairfield Osborn, Madison Grant, Frank K. Sturgis, W. W. Niles, Henry D. Whiton, Cornelius Agnew, William B. Osgood Field, Dr. Lewis Rutherford Morris, Edwin Thorne, W. Redmond Cross, Irving K. Taylor, T. Coleman du Pont, Henry Fairfield Osborn Jr., Frederic C. Walcott, Robert S. Brewster, Dr. W. T. Hornaday, Dr. C. H. Townsend, Dr. W. Reid Blair and Park Commissioner Gallatin.

To obtain sufficient endowment to afford an income to preserve in wild places animals whose existence is threatened, and to do more research work, the New York Zoological Society has started a drive for membership to increase its endowment fund by $2,000,000.

CITY COLLEGE GETS STRASBOURG FLAG

QUOTES WORDS OF 'TIGER'

Asserts Shooting of Germans in Ruhr Was Done Solely in Self-Defense.

With appropriate exercises, in the presence of Ambassador Jusserand of France and other French notables, the banner of the University of Strasburg yesterday was given a place beside the flags of other great universities in the Great Hall of the College of the City of New York.

There are still two flagless flagstaffs in the large auditorium, America's entry into the World War led to the removal of the emblems of the Universities of Berlin and of Heidelberg. Those of Prague and Cracow were also taken down when Austria-Hungary became an enemy nation, but they have since been replaced.

A martial tone in the ceremonies contrasted with the pleadings of speakers for amity between nations. The Reserve Officers' Training Corps of the College engaged in a competitive drill in the Lewisohn Stadium after the flag raising.

Ambassador Jusserand, the principal speaker, declared that France would like to be a friend of Germany, but, in view of present circumstances, finds that impossible.

"In this wonderful college you have desired that the banner of the University of Berlin be replaced by that of Strasbourg," said the French Ambassador. "That is a legitimate thing to do, because the ideals and aims of Strasbourg are like yours, and those of Berlin are not. We hope that the aims of Berlin—the aims of the Prussians—will be changed. We hate to have to hate any one. We are bad haters. We want to be friends, but we want to be friends with another kind of people.

"We want them to understand that the man whom they admired so much, and before whom they knelt down, was unworthy of their admiration and that he led them to disaster."

Speaking of France's occupation of the Ruhr, Ambassador Jusserand said that the shooting of Germans by French soldiers was solely in self-defense. Eleven Frenchmen, he said, were surrounded "by a howling multitude."

"In spite of what has been said," he continued, "France has not imitated the example of Germany. Our ideals are not those of Bismarck, but rather the ideals of Louis Pasteur, whose humaneness has won him the tributes which the people of the whole world has just paid him. Pasteur attended the University of Strasbourg and was a teacher there from 1849 to 1854."

The French Ambassador said that, despite the political vicissitudes of Alsace-Lorraine, the people have always remained true to France. He gave the historical details of the French and German occupations of the country, adding with emphasis: "It is now French, and we are confident it will remain French forever."

Ambassador Jusserand repeated a conversation with former Premier Clemenceau. The Ambassador asked Clemenceau, he said, what impression he carried home with him from America. The "Tiger" thought for only a moment and replied: "I am impressed with the amount of heart that Americans have." The speaker said that Clemenceau had voiced the opinion of all France.

The scarlet and blue banner of Strasbourg was presented to the college by Albert Blum, President of the Association Générale des Alsaciens-en America. Eugene Meyer, a native of Strasbourg, unfurled the flag.

In his speech of acceptance Dr. Sidney E. Mezes, President of the college, referred to Goethe and Pasteur as some of those who attended Strasbourg and spoke of the friendship between France and America.

Professor Emanuel de Margerie, wearing a yellow and ermine robe, spoke in behalf of the University of Strasbourg, which he represents. William Haff, President of Le Cercle Jusserand, also spoke. "The Marseillaise," which was composed in the university city, was sung by Leon Rothier of the Metropolitan Opera Company. The Chairman was Thomas W. Churchill, President of the Board of Trustees of the college.

20,000 EX-SOLDIERS SAID TO BE IN JAILS

Dr. Lorenz Traces Many of Their Offenses to Injury or Unemployment.

WISCONSIN TOTALS HIGH

25 Per Cent. of Those in Prisons of That State Found to Be Feeble Minded.

TYPHUS HAVOC IN RUSSIA

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Outstanding today from seventeen distinct meetings at which there were forty speakers, all dealing with aspects of the activities of the national conference of social work here, were two addresses. One was by Dr. W. F. Lorenz, Director of the Wisconsin Psychiatric Institute, who said that 20,000 ex-service men were in penal institutions in 1922, largely as a result of unemployment and physical and mental injuries due to the war. The other was by Dr. Ludwik Raichman, Executive Officer of the Health Division of the League of Nations, who said that 30,000,000 to 40,000,000 cases of typhus had developed in Russia since the beginning of the epidemic in 1918, and that between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 deaths had resulted from that cause.

According to Dr. Lorenz, experts who studied the ex-service men in Wisconsin prisons found that:

"Twenty-six per cent. of the men examined were suffering from physical disabilities of service origin.

"Four per cent. of them were suffering from mental disabilities, also of service origin.

"Fifty-five per cent. of them were mentally abnormal.

"Twenty-five per cent. of them were definitely feeble-minded, often with an intelligence lower than that of a five-year-old child.

"Thirty per cent. of them had committed offenses while under the stress of the hardship of unemployment immediately following their discharge from the service."

Crime Traced to Incapacity.

Saying that "physical, mental and economic incapacity were the elements that had resulted in the ex-service men being imprisoned, Dr. Lorenz begged that the mentally abnormal and feeble-minded be placed in suitable institutions and that vocational training be installed in prisons where able-bodied and mentally healthy veterans were confined, so that they could be rehabilitated.

"One man in Wisconsin," said Dr. Lorenz, "was definitely insane while in the service. He was discharged and turned loose. Within ten days he committed a murder and was sent up.

"Another man has been in penal institutions ever since he was fourteen. He has been out of them since that age for only two periods of time. One of these periods was six months long. The other was the period during which he served in the army. He is now in jail. He is definitely feeble-minded and absolutely irresponsible.

"Some ex-service men in jail are severely punished for infractions of prison discipline when, in fact, they are totally irresponsible because of epilepsy."

No less than 97 per cent. of the ex-service men in Wisconsin jails made no effort to escape the consequences of their but alleged offenses, when headed guilty when arrested, Dr. Lorenz said.

"Most of them did not know that they might be entitled to compensation from the Government for their disabilities," he added. "Most of them, likewise, knew nothing of the Government's rehabilitation program and efforts."

It was said this afternoon that an investigation of ex-service men in penal institutions has already been undertaken in connection with the American Legion.

Saving Lives in This City.

The expectation of life at birth, which is now fifty-five years in the United States among white persons alone, will probably be increased five years inside of two decades, Dr. Harman Biggs, Health Commissioner of New York State, predicted to the conference tonight.

So many improvements will be instituted through periodical medical examinations and preventive measures, he said, that the lives of 15,000 persons in New York State alone will be saved. As compared with 1896, the economic saving in New York City, through checking disease and death, was estimated at $250,000,000 in 1920.

"The striking progress made in the saving of life in New York City in twenty-five years," he said, "is shown by the comparison of the number of deaths which occurred in 1920 from certain specific causes with the deaths which would have occurred from these same causes if the death rate prevailing in 1896, twenty-five years earlier, had obtained. These include the deaths from the ordinarily communicable diseases and certain other important diseases.

"The deaths which actually occurred in 1920 from these causes number 36,400, but if the death rates of 1896 from these same causes had prevailed in 1920, the deaths would have been 89,660, the decrease in 1920 over 1896 equaling 53,260. Of important causes of death (aside from automobile accidents) only two show a marked increase—those are cancer and diseases of the heart, which, together, show an increase of 6,158."

John C. Gebhardt, director of the Department of Social Welfare of the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, described how the death rate of babies and small children has been diminished during the last five years by the work of the Mulberry health centre.

TO FIGHT PARKWAY TROLLEY

Bronx Residents to Appear Before Estimate Board Today.

Many Bronx residents and other individuals and organization interested in the city parks will appear before the Board of Estimate today to protest against the proposed installation of a trackless trolley system on the Bronx and Pelham Parkway between White Plains Road and Eastern Boulevard. An appropriation of $175,000 for the system was requested by Commissioner Grover A. Whalen of the Department of Plant and Structures, and was recommended by the Committee of the Whole of the board.

Park Commissioner Joseph P. Hennesy of the Bronx is one of those who have declared against the installation of the system. The Bronx Board of Trade and the Parks and Playgrounds Association will also be represented in opposition to the appropriation. Spokesmen for these organizations assert that the erection of trolley poles, which has already been started, will mar the beauty of one of the most attractive automobile driveways in the city and that the trolleys will be dangerous to the 1,500 children who camp on sites within the system borders.

Calcium Carbide Imports Restricted.

WASHINGTON, May 17. — Assistant Secretary Moss of the Treasury Department put into effect today provisions of the tariff anti-dumping act with respect to importation into the United States of calcium carbide. Investigation had disclosed that importations of calcium carbide from Quebec threatened to injure the industry in this country, the announcement stated.

Plank Reaching St. John, N. B., Tells of Vessel Lost in 1918

MONTREAL, May 17.—A bit of plank, tossed by the Atlantic for five years, drifted into St. John, N. B., the home port of the schooner E. E. Armstrong today bearing a message which was believed to clear up the mystery of the Armstrong's disappearance in 1918.

"Lost ship and crew," said the message carved on the bit of driftwood. "Captain Burns (me) survives."

Captain Burns was the commander of the missing schooner, last heard from near the Barbados. He probably did not survive long, as he was never heard from after the vessel dropped from the high seas.

Brooklyn Man Comes From Behind a Surface Car and Is Run Down.

BOY DIES AFTER BEING HIT

Mrs. Jennie Trowbridge Receives Broken Hip as Her Car Collides With Taxi.

John Rooney of 246 Fifth Avenue, Brooklyn, was killed when he stepped from behind a trolley car at Fifth Avenue and Carroll Street, Brooklyn, into the path of an automobile driven by William J. Carr of 536 Second Street. Carr was held pending investigation.

While playing along the curb at 100 Stanton Street yesterday afternoon Morris Maroff, 8, of 167 Orchard Street, was struck by an automobile owned and driven by Barney Safter, of 37 West 114th Street, according to the police. The boy was taken to Gouveneur Hospital, where he died five hours later of concussion of the brain.

Mrs. Jennie Trowbridge, 52 years old, of 57 East Thirty-fourth Street, was seriously injured when her limousine was overturned at Fifty-seventh Street and Park Avenue in a crash with a taxicab going west on Fifty-seventh Street. Mrs. Trowbridge was taken to Presbyterian Hospital suffering from a fractured hip and cuts of the face and hands.

The driver of the taxicab, Louis Crane of 1,670 Boston Road, Bronx, was held by Magistrate Douras in Centreville Court in $3,000 bail for examination May 22 on a charge of felonious assault.

Traffic Policeman Edward Pollock, on duty at Jamaica Avenue and Park Street, Richmond Hill, saved himself from injury yesterday by clinging to the top of the radiator of an automobile which struck him while he was directing traffic. He was carried twenty feet and received contusions of the left arm and left leg. He was treated in St. Mary's Hospital, Jamaica. The driver, Mrs. Celina Spenger, of 8,732 Ninety-eighth Street, Woodhaven, was charged with assault, making an improper turn and failure to signal.

Patrolman Charles Cosgrove of Montclair was held yesterday in Newark City Court in $4,000 bail on a charge of manslaughter. His automobile a few days ago killed Mrs. Mary Mullaney of 324 Fourth Avenue, Irvington. The accident happened in Bloomfield.

The Bureau of Public Safety of the Police Department announced yesterday it would call the attention of the Secretary of State to the case of Harry Berman of 1,000 Madison Avenue, who Wednesday ran down and killed Nicholas Martini, four years old, with a two-ton truck at First Avenue and 102d Street. Berman is blind in the left eye, according to the police, and they will request that more stringent regulations be made to bar defective drivers. Berman has been charged with homicide.

UNITED STATES LEADS IN MOST NAVAL CRAFT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 17.—While still possessing the most aircraft carriers and light cruisers, the British Navy is completely outnumbered by the United States in submarines, destroyers and cruisers, according to a white paper issued today. At present the United States is also the dominant battleship power, but eight ships are to be scrapped under the Washington treaty and five more are shown as being dismantled.

The present battleship strength is: United States 31, Britain 18, Italy 12, Japan 11, France 9, Germany 8 and Russia 4. Japan is to scrap five under the treaty, leaving her effective strength at 6. The Italian Minister of Marine has power to dispose of three ships.

Britain and Japan are the only powers having battle cruisers, there being four in the British Navy and seven in the Japanese, including three which are to be scrapped. Four battle cruisers under construction for the United States are to be scrapped and two for the Japanese Navy are to be converted into aircraft carriers.

No cruiser is at present in course of construction. America possesses the greatest strength, ten in all, France ranking next with six. There are three cruisers in the Italian Navy and two in the British. Britain is supreme in the matter of light cruisers, for including the belonging to the Dominions, there are forty-eight in the British Navy and four more are being built.

Only three countries at present include aircraft carriers in their navies, the British possessing four and the United States and Japan one each, two of these vessels being built each for the British and American Navies while France is constructing one.

Great superiority in torpedo boat destroyers is held by the United States, the British being outnumbered by nearly two to one. The figures are Britain 184, United States 318. Only two navies include torpedo boats. Italy possesses seventy-while four more are being built and Germany has fifteen. The United States is shown to possess the greatest number of submarines of any of the powers, while a considerable addition is still being made.

DANTE BUST UNVEILED.

The Gift of Italian Students to New York University.

A bust of Dante, the immortal Italian poet, was presented to New York University yesterday by Congressman F. H. La Guardia on behalf of the Italian students of the university, who had raised the funds necessary for its design by Maestro Onorio Ruotolo.

The bust was unveiled in a niche above the entrance to Language Hall. Chancellor Elmer Ellsworth Brown accepted the gift for the institution. Judge John J. Freschi of the class of 1898 of the New York University Law School, and Dr. Robert Underwood Johnson, former Ambassador to Italy, were the other speakers. The Student Committee which raised the money for the gift which Chancellor Brown described as the first that a group of students of the university whose ancestry came from one European country had ever given to the college" also took part in the ceremonies.

RHINE COSTS PARLEY MAY BE BROKEN OFF

FRENCH COMMENT CAUSTIC

Writer in the Liberte Says That France Might Learn Something From Our Tenacity.

PARIS, May 17 (Associated Press).—Possibility of a definite breakdown of the negotiations here between the Allies and the United States over the payment of the cost of the American Army of Occupation in the Rhineland was declared today to hinge on the decision of the allied Governments as to whether the text of the proposed accord should stand. The text, which has been referred to the allied Chancelleries for a definite decision, includes the section framed by the allied negotiators providing for cancellation of the agreement if the United States takes steps to collect damages direct from Germany. Whether the committee meets again was said to depend on the decision of the governments.

Sir John Bradbury, the British representative who is understood to be the most stubborn contender for the allied point of view, went to London immediately after the last meeting of the committee, supposedly to lay before his Government the belief that unless this proviso was eliminated there was bound to be a rupture owing to the American objection to it.

Strong hopes are expressed in French official circles that a rupture will be avoided. It is clearly understood by the French Government that the American negotiator, Eliot Wadsworth, will go home without further negotiation if the Allies refuse to accept the view of the United States. According to information from the best of authority there is a strong desire to avoid a rupture, and while it is admitted as a supposition that whether a break occurs or not depends upon what decision the British representative brings back with him from London.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, May 17.—For the most part, French newspapers have refrained from discussing the mission of Eliot Wadsworth, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, to collect from the Allies payment for the cost of the American Army which once occupied the Rhineland. But today Jacques Bainville, in the Liberté, breaks the silence in this manner:

"There are some human happenings of which Shinwell but veiled comedy isn't apparent, either instantaneously or to every one.

"It is thus almost unbelievable, but true, that at this moment, when the difficulty of getting any payments out of Germany is greater than it has ever been, at this moment when we are in the Ruhr in order to obtain some scraps of reparations, at this moment when from London, from Rome and even from Tokio, pressure is being brought to bear on Chancellor Cuno to propose a figure of reparations with real guarantees—it is almost unbelievable, but true, that this is the moment which the American Government has chosen to demand preferential repayment of the cost of her Army of Occupation—and even more, to get fractious because the business isn't going along quick enough.

"This is what has been going on for nearly a year and during that time the Americans have at least given us an example in tenacity. They want their billion, they want it energetically, and they stride across every other consideration in order to get it. It matters nothing to them that they are victims of egoism and imperialism. Let us take our hate off to this passion for her national interest. It is the right way for people to win respect and service.

"The American Government doesn't even halt to consider one other, small but very essential question: 'Where is that billion? From what, from whom, is it to be collected? Will the Allies have to provide it from the little total of reparations which they have received up to now?'

"The United States replies that that is not their concern. And because the Allies in their negotiations with Mr. Wadsworth have introduced a restrictive clause which would provide for the possibility of a direct accord being made between the United States and Germany, the American State Department is quite cross. It doesn't want any restrictions of any kind. It wants its rights and all its rights.

"Even if there isn't any money? Yes, even if there isn't any money. No concern for the economic restoration of the world embarrasses these creditors. The American Government, captive to its public opinion, couldn't, even if it wished, pass the sponge over the debts which Europe owes—both friends and enemies. But now is it going to set about getting paid? That is what we are curious to know. Perhaps we could learn something for our own advantage about how we ought to set about getting Germany to pay us."

HELD FOR KILLING HUSBAND

Mother of 13 Reported as Saying She Shot Him to End Cruelty.

Mrs. Mary Lanigan, mother of thirteen children, of 116 Johnson Street, Brooklyn, who was held yesterday in the Adams Street Court on the charge of murdering her husband in his shop at 261 Bridge Street on Wednesday night, asserted that she had shot him to put an end to continued cruelty to herself and the children, the police said. Her son, William, 13 years old, was held as a witness.

In a statement to the police Mrs. Lanigan said her husband had squandered $6,200, which had been paid to her son Richard, 25 years old, by a railway company for the loss of his leg.

Mrs. Lanigan said she had sent her daughter to her father on Wednesday afternoon to appeal to him for some support for the family, and that the girl had returned crying, saying her father had beaten her and thrown her out of the shop. When the mother and her son went to the shop, it is alleged, Lanigan beat his wife, and she seized a revolver in a drawer and fired in self-protection. According to Mrs. Lanigan, the slaying was on the thirtieth anniversary of her wedding.

TELLS OF $50,000 ROBBERY.

Mrs. Lillian Meyers Identifies Man on Trial as One of Her Assailants.

Mrs. Lillian Meyers of 300 West Forty-ninth Street related to Judge Alfred J. Talley and a jury in General Sessions yesterday the details of a robbery in her home on July 15. She said she was bound and gagged and thrown across a day bed, while two men opened a safe and took jewelry worth $50,000.

Mrs. Meyers was a witness at the trial of Charles F. Curtis, whom she identified as one of the burglars. Curtis was rounded up with other suspects following the $300,000 jewel robbery in January, of which Mrs. Hugo C. P. Schoellkopf was the victim.

"Two men came to my door and said they had been sent up with a package for my husband, who was not at home at the time," Mrs. Meyers testified. "Then they pressed a revolver against my side and stripped from my finger my seven-carat diamond ring and my wedding ring, which they later returned to me. After that they asked for the combination of the safe, threatening to kill me if I did not give it to them. I tried to comply, but I was too nervous."

Abraham Goodman, Curtis's lawyer, produced another man who bore a marked resemblance to Curtis, in an attempt to show that it was easy to make a mistake in identity. This man's name was not made public. The case will be continued today.

British Air Minister Tours Europe in Plane To Study the Problems of Civil Aviation

LONDON, May 17 (Associated Press).—For the first time in history, a British Minister is undertaking a continental tour of instruction wholly by air. Sir Samuel Hoare, Air Minister, with his wife, who has never flown before, and General Brancker, Director of Civil Aviation, left London today on a ten days' flying tour abroad.

Sir Samuel, who was largely responsible for the Government's recent decision greatly to increase the strength of the British air forces, will spend the Whitsuntide recess in familiarizing himself with the problem of civil aviation. To this end he will inspect different air routes and discuss air questions with foreign Air Ministers.

Sir Samuel and his party left England as ordinary passengers in an airplane of the Croyden to Rotterdam service. The next part of the trip tomorrow will be by the Dutch air line to Brussels and thence the party will proceed to Cologne and from Cologne to Paris.

During the trip Sir Samuel will gain practical experience in traveling in a half dozen different types of machines used on the various air lines.

SEEK POISON TRACES IN CREIGHTON BODIES

CHEMISTS BEGIN ANALYSIS

Young Mrs. Creighton Wants to Keep Her New Baby Boy at Newark Hospital Until Trial.

Essex County physician George L. Warren said yesterday that the absence of external evidence that Walter J. and Mrs. Annie Creighton were poisoned to death does not mean that they were not killed. On the basis of his statement Prosecutor John O. Bigelow told reporters that the State was encouraged in its case against the Creightons' son, John, and his wife, Mary. They are accused of murdering Mrs. Creighton's brother, Charles R. Avery, with arsenic, to obtain his life insurance of $1,000. The bodies of the elder Creightons, who died a few years ago, were exhumed by court order from Fairmount Cemetery, Newark, Tuesday, to determine if they, too, had been poisoned.

"Everything will depend on the chemical analysis now being made," said Dr. Warren. "We removed in each case the kidneys, stomach, liver, spleen, brains and heart. We found that neither died of the causes given in the death certificates. We found no evidence of death by natural cause in our preliminary autopsy. There were no signs of any serious organic disease. This is important in view of the fact they both died comparatively young, at forty-seven years old each.

"The autopsy was of a nature that would not reveal poison without a chemical analysis. There was no redness or inflammation of the stomach in either case as with young Avery, who was poisoned by arsenic. But because of the length of time the elder Creightons have been dead the superficial symptoms of poisoning would have disappeared by this time. If there was any poison in their systems it will be revealed by the toxicologists."

Dr. Albert E. Edel, County Toxicologist, began yesterday to analyze the organs removed. At the same time a similar examination was begun by experts retained in behalf of the defendants. James W. McCarthy, counsel for the prisoners, made light of the autopsy report, saying that even though poison were found by the chemists it could not be connected with the deaths.

In Newark City Hospital Mrs. Creighton forgot her troubles in her happiness at the birth early yesterday morning of a nine-pound boy whom she will name after his father. She has asked her attorney to try to induce the authorities to let her remain at the hospital until her trial, June 18, or to permit her to have the baby in the cell with her. Though no decision in the latter respect has been made it is believed the authorities are averse to letting the child go to the jail. Action on this point will be taken on advice of hospital physicians.

BANTON WON'T DROP 'POISON PEN' CHARGE

Says Allan A. Ryan, Whose Wife Was Attacked, Will Stand by Him.

District Attorney Banton yesterday completed reading 147 poison pen letters attributed by him to George Maxwell, President of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. The Prosecutor denied a story that pressure had been brought to bear on him to call off the inquiry "because it would do no good public service."

"I have not been conscious of any pressure," he said. "In fact, when we started the inquiry, I made certain that Allan A. Ryan, whose wife was viciously attacked in some of the letters, would stand by the prosecution to the end.

"I have in mind that when Maxwell was investigated four years ago the inquiry had to stop because those attacked shrank from the notoriety that would follow in the trial, and the result was that the charges were dropped because in those circumstances no substantiation could be obtained.

No word was received yesterday as to when Maxwell would sail for America. His attorney, Nathan Burkan, repeated that he did not expect Maxwell until July, but that he would call him back at any time his presence is demanded by the District Attorney.

"This talk about extradition is merely part of the atmosphere being created by Ryan against Maxwell," said Burkan.

"The whole thing is a fight between Ryan and Maxwell growing out of a quarrel when Maxwell threatened Ryan with criminal libel because of the things Ryan had said about him," he alleged.

Banton said that he was not concerned with motives or quarrels, but was concerned only with the fact that scurrilous letters were written and that Maxwell is accused of being their author.

HOLD FOOTBALL STAR IN THE MOUNT CASE

JAILED DESPITE DENIALS

Northwestern Athlete Is Expected to Give New Lead—"First Real Evidence," Says Prosecutor.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 17.—Charles ("Chuck") Palmer, star football player and senior at Northwestern University, was held in custody tonight in connection with the disappearance of Leighton Mount, freshman student, in September, 1921, despite his denials that he knew anything about the case.

Palmer was taken into custody after Mrs. Violet Bachman, a former friend, had told assistant State's attorneys that Palmer told her soon after Mount's disappearance that Mount was safe and that he knew where he was, and that he later told her he could not talk about the case.

Palmer, who had been held incommunicado since his arrest in a fraternity house at 1 o'clock this morning, was confronted by Mrs. Bachman today in the presence of assistant State's attorneys, when she repeated alleged conversations she had with him.

He flatly denied her statements, although he admitted he knew Mrs. Bachman, then Miss Violet Lawson, in 1921. Also present at the questioning was Roscoe Conkling Fitch, the student who a few days ago claimed to know "all about the Mount case," but later said he thought inquisitors were talking about Louis Aubere, a student killed in an automobile accident a few weeks ago.

Palmer tonight was taken to a cell where Assistant State's attorneys said he would be kept as long as it is believed he can furnish information not yet divulged. Fitch is being housed in a hotel and tonight was taken to the State Attorney's office in the belief that he could help in developing new leads.

"This is the first evidence we have been able to dig up in this case," said Charles Wharton, Assistant State's attorney tonight. He intimated that further information was expected from Palmer.

Palmer admitted, according to investigators, that he participated in the class rush the night Mount vanished, but insisted that because he was in football training he went to his rooms about 11 A. M. He said he had roomed with Allan Mills of Evanston, a former student, who was brought here for questioning, and expressed the opinion that this was why his name was in the case.

Mrs. Bachman is said to have divulged her information first to her husband, E. G. Bachman, a salesman, who said today that he had been trying to get it before the authorities ever since a skeleton believed to be Mount's was found under an Evanston pier three weeks ago. Bachman, it is said, told police that his wife knew and they attached no importance to it.

Mrs. Bachman said her statements "would stand" despite Palmer's denials. Asked if he knew of any differences between himself and Mrs. Bachman which might prompt her to connect his name with the affair, Palmer replied that he knew of none.

Palmer is one of the best athletes developed at Northwestern for many years. He was a star back on the 1922 team and it was his run of over 100 yards that tied the Northwestern-Minnesota score last Fall. He captained last year's baseball team and won a name also in track work. He has signed with the Milwaukee Club of the American Association after he leaves college.

Some surprise was caused by announcement that the Coroner's inquest into the death of Aubere would be resumed tomorrow. It had been set for a later date, but information obtained from Fitch and others was said to have caused a change in plans.

MRS. CATT IS HONORED BY WORLD SUFFRAGISTS

Chosen Honorary President by Acclamation—Will Ballot for Active President.

ROME, May 17 (Associated Press).—Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt was elected by acclamation as honorary President of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance today. The American suffrage worker received an ovation lasting several minutes.

The Chairman announced that all the candidates for the active Presidency had withdrawn with the exception of Mrs. Maud Wood Park of Washington, D. C., but the later immediately arose and said she had not withdrawn because she was never a candidate.

Upon this the Chair proposed to elect Mrs. Corbett Ashby of England by acclamation, but Dr. Bertha Lutz of Brazil objected to this procedure, saying that the rules providing for the election of officers by ballot must be followed.

Mrs. Ashby agreed with Dr. Lutz's view, especially because, she pointed out, it was the first election of a President and should be taken in a regular manner, thus constituting a precedent to govern future elections. The congress registered its approval of this.

GEN. PERSHING PAYS HONOR TO WAR DEAD

KINGS SEND MESSAGES

Envoys Echo Tribute Paid by Root at Notable Dinner to Aid Memorial Fund.

How the Allies, dependent on the efforts of the American Army, came to know that there could be no doubt of the success of the A. E. F., was told last night by General Pershing in a speech to more than 1,000 men and women gathered at a dinner in the Hotel Commodore to pay tribute to those who died in France.

Governor Smith, United States Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, Colonel Alvin M. Owsley, National Commander of the American Legion, and Ambassadors de Cartier of Belgium and Masanao Hanihara of Japan rose to subscribe to the gratitude of America to those who died in France, as voiced by the toastmaster, ex-United States Senator Elihu Root.

From President Harding, Marshal Foch, the Kings of England and Italy, and Premier Mussolini of Italy, came messages of sympathy with the purpose of the dinner.

It was a memorial dinner to endorse the efforts of the American Legion to raise throughout the United States a permanent endowment fund for the annual ceremony and decoration of graves of American soldiers, sailors and marines in Europe.

On the dais sat one of the most distinguished assemblies that has attended a dinner here in years. Among the diners were many prominent New Yorkers. Five radio attachments faced the speakers' table. United States Military Academy Band of sixty pieces played a dozen numbers. One, "The Sidewalks of New York," in tribute to Governor Smith. Miss Grace La Beau, accompanied by Miss Helen Moore, sang with an effectiveness that brought the diners to their feet.

Army Built on Patriotism.

"Our army was composed not only of modest individuals, but it had a modest beginning," said General Pershing. "Our people had not the foresight to anticipate such a necessity. That army was built from the ground up on the basis of patriotic citizenship. It had its beginning in the homes and in the schools. Those of us who knew what those teachings were never doubted what sort of an army would eventuate.

"America was not ready at the start, but the Allies held the line until we were ready. Then we played a very creditable part. I remember how the Allies hung on our successes, and with what anxiety we attacked the most difficult part of the western front. Those who were there never doubted what the outcome would be.

"Those who are left in France are the sacred trust, representing the spirit, spirit of high resolve with which they performed."

General Pershing announced that the American Committee for Devastated France is sending a wreath to be placed on the grave of the Unknown Soldier of France during memorial day, May 30.

History will record that we were not anxious for the conflict," said Governor Smith. "But history will also record that when the majesty and honor and dignity of this nation were threatened and challenged, the call to arms was heard and heeded in every part of the land.

"The youth of the land, from parents who had found here a refuge, rallied to the flag their parents had assumed as their own. It is idle for us to gather to pay tribute to their memories. In our feeble way we are doing the best we can. The memory of their deeds will live within us with stimulus. What we must do is to provide the machinery to perpetuate the upkeep of their graves."

Warns of Radical Menace.

"We cannot discount the unrest in America and abroad. The situation today is freighted with the gravest consequences for all humanity, and calls for leadership of high order. We must have sane counsel and high statesmanship to guide us through the yawning pitfalls that beset us."

Senator Reed dwelt on the qualities that stood out eminently in the make-up of the American soldier.

"His courage is attested by the record," he said. "His discipline was not the discipline of a blind servant, but an intelligent discipline that realized the necessity for teamwork.

"The American soldiers possessed high and intense patriotism, a realization that their country was worth fighting for. They were not soldiers of the Middle West, or the South, or the North, but of the United States of America. We are the beneficiaries of their deaths. We enjoy the peace and prosperity for which they fought and died.

Alliance Not Broken, He Says.

"Are we going to show the qualities which they proved in them? We are on trial and are prattling about showing gratitude.

"Are we going to stand by the Allies and fight shoulder to shoulder with them? The alliance was not snapped off when the armistice was signed. The spirit of shrewdness and patriotism did not stop them."

In his telegram to Senator Root, President Harding said that the fund to insure decoration of the graves in France must appeal to every patriotic American.

This was Marshal Foch's cable:

"As an American and a French Legionaire, I wish to associate myself fully with your work to show perpetual and grateful recognition on French soil for the sacrifice made by the sons of liberty who gave their lives to save civilization."

The King of Italy sent a message of sympathy and the statement of similar sentiments were cabled by King George of England. Mussolini cabled:

"While we are commemorating the American soldiers that offered their lives in the holocaust, I wish to exchange with you the country in the name of the ideals which bind our two countries, the best remembrances for your dead soldiers, who always live in the heart of every Italian."

At the speakers' table were United States Senator Royal S. Copeland, Evangeline Booth, Commander of the Salvation Army; General Edward L. Logan, President of the National Guard Association of the United States; Jacques Rafferay, President of the French War Veterans; Supreme Court Justice Irving Lehman, President of the Jewish Welfare Board; General James G. Harbord, the Belgian and Japanese Ambassadors; Gaston Liebert, French Consul General; General Henry J. Reilly, head of the reserve officers of the United States; General F. W. Sladen, West Point Commandant; Dr. Kate Waller Barrett, President of the American Legion Auxiliary; General George H. Harries, Commander of the Military Order of the World War; Irwin L. Rackoff, Chairman, First District, American Legion, New York; Dr. Woodruff Law Post, Veterans, President British War Veterans; Henry L. Stimson, Thomas J. Brady, Chairman of the New York County Chapter of the American Legion.

Imitator of Charlie Chaplin Picks Berliners' Pockets

BERLIN, May 17 (Associated Press).—Wittenberg Platz, Berlin's Columbus Circle, has been the scene every night recently of a free show staged by an imitator of Charlie Chaplin. Shuffling about in Chaplin's characteristic fashion, the imitator would suddenly raise the nearest bystander as if to save himself from falling. The bystander would join in the general laugh.

Last night a man who had arrived home minus his watch and chain after attending the entertainment, revisited the place wearing a miniature clock so constructed as to sound an alarm upon its removal from his pocket. Just after the entertainer seized this man in a pretended fall, the alarm sounded and the performer was exposed as a pickpocket. He escaped amid a rain of blows from the spectators.

HIGH BUILDING COST LAID TO MONOPOLIES

Labor Unions and Organizations of Dealers in Materials Both Blamed.

SURVEY BY MANUFACTURERS

Apprentice System Denounced—Forty Per Cent. Inflation Is Charged.

The building trades are accused in a survey made public yesterday by the National Association of Manufacturers, ending its annual convention in this city, of restricting the number of apprentices and holding down the number of workmen in some of the crafts with the purpose of forcing up wages. It is charged that the number of apprentices, for instance, in the bricklayers' group last year was not nearly half as many as the number of bricklayers who died in the United States.

The combined power of the closed shop organizations and the building material men is blamed for unwarranted rises in the cost of building throughout the country. In New York City it is estimated that a residence which would cost ordinarily $10,000 is forced up to $14,000 by the combinations of building materials and labor organizations. The analysis of the stoppage of more than $50,000,000 in building construction was made by Noel Sergent, manager of the Open Shop Department of the National Association of Manufacturers.

"In New York City," he says, "it has been demonstrated many times that by agreement between material men and closed shop labor unions their combined power is used to hold up material and labor prices and to extort additional profits from the building public.

"New York building costs are, as a result of the prevailing closed shop policies, the highest in the nation. They are more than double the average cost of construction under open shop conditions, and are even 45 per cent above the average construction costs in other communities where building is done on a closed shop basis. Building in New York City has been kept at a high basis despite exorbitant costs only because of the tax exemption provision. These building costs have gone so far that even tax exemption cannot prevent the stoppage of erection until costs come down.

"The figures for the year 1922 from sixty-three American cities with combined building permits of over $1,200,000,000 conclusively show that where building is dominated by closed shop conditions the amount of construction is reduced. We find for example that in towns where building was around 75 per cent closed shop, permits last year averaged $68 per capita. In towns where approximately half of the building was open shop, the building construction average was 10 per capita, or 10 per cent more than in the first closed shop group. On the other hand, in the towns where building was 75 per cent or more open shop per capita building permits were $84 or 24 per cent more than in towns where building was predominantly closed shop."

John E. Edgerton, who was re-elected President of the National Association of Manufacturers, was challenged yesterday by Louis F. Budenz, manager of Labor Age, to debate the question, "Resolved, That the National Association of Manufacturers, not labor unionism, which has sought to enslave and defraud the American workers."

The convention of the manufacturers was officially brought to a close with a meeting of the Directors at their headquarters, 30 Church Street. Following the meeting the Directors went to the New York Navy Yard, where they were guests of Secretary of the Navy Edwin Denby and Admirals McDonald and Plunkett at a luncheon aboard the battleship Wyoming. Admiral McDonald thanked the manufacturers for the support they had given continuously for an adequate navy.

ARTIST ARRESTED SKETCHING IN PARK

Ozias Dodge, an artist, of Norwich, Conn., was arrested yesterday afternoon for refusing to get off the grass in Washington Square Park. He came here on a telegraphic request from John W. Merrin, President of the Portland Atlas Cement Company, 25 Broadway, to make a sketch of Mr. Merrin's residence at 8 Washington Square North.

He found he could not get far enough back from the house to get all the trees of the Morrin home in the perspective of his drawing without climbing over the fence of Washington Square Park. Mr. Morrin's butler gave him a chair with which to rest on the city's slice of fresh grass and assured him that no one would interfere.

Dodge wanted to catch the 5 o'clock train back to Norwich and he did not have time to see his friend, the Secretary of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, to get his influence to obtain a permit to work on the forbidden ground.

He had been working three minutes and only two more were required, when Patrolman Harry J. Booth of the Mercer Street Station came along. He advised Dodge to move, read him the ordinance but Dodge refused. He said he had worked all over New York and even in Paris without being treated that way before.

Booth took the artist to Essex Market Court, where, with his gray hair and gray goatee and his golf suit of Irish tweed he looked rather out of place. He pleaded guilty, but contended that the policeman had not shown common sense. Magistrate Jacob Elperin gave him a suspended sentence and advised him not to go back to the same spot to finish his sketch.

BUILDING INDUSTRY STRIKE PLAN FADES

Labor Leader Admits Unions Will Have to Negotiate Individual Agreements.

80,000 MEN ARE AFFECTED

WORKERS MAKE PROMISE

Ask Firms to Discipline Those Who Offer Higher Scales, in Effort to Stop "Snowballing."

Developments in the building industry yesterday lessened the possibility of a general strike on June 1 of 80,000 workers affiliated with the old Building Trades Council.

The Executive Committee of the council, headed by Thomas B. Clark, met C. G. Norman, Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Building Trades Employers' Association. The labor leaders asked for a new wage agreement calling for an advance of $1 a day in all trades. The employers, through Mr. Norman, refused to consider a collective agreement.

After the meeting Mr. Clark said that the only thing that remained was for the individual unions of each craft to negotiate individual agreements with the employers' association. Strikes will be called only in those trades in which the employers refuse a new agreement at the demanded increase of $1 a day, he said.

The union representatives offered to make the $10 a day scale a maximum instead of a minimum one, as at present, and promised to stop snowballing by fining workers who accepted bonuses. They suggested that the employers' association discipline its members who offer wages higher than the stipulated scale.

States Employers' Side.

Mr. Norman pointed out that he, representing the employers' association, and Clark, representing the council, had reached an agreement on Oct. 17, 1922, one clause of which he said read:

"Arrangements are to be made for meetings of agreement committees in each trade. Agreements are to be submitted to the Building Trades Employers' Association and the Building Trades Council for approval before being signed. Should the employers and the union in any trade fail to ag

Second prize, a set of silverware, went to Ruth Willett, 15 months old, of 1,107 Jefferson Avenue, Brooklyn. Baby Ruth, dressed in white, was enthroned on a flower-covered float, which bore the title "Miss Brooklyn."

The parade formed near the boardwalk at the east end of Ocean Parkway and proceeded through Ocean Avenue to Luna Park, the mothers wheeling the youngsters in baby carriages. A squad of police from the Coney Island Station, headed by Deputy Inspector Byron Hackett and Captain James Gillem, led the marchers.

Dr. Laura Riegelmann, a sister-in-law of the Borough President and Chairman of the Bureau of Child Hygiene; Dr. Frederick M. Gordon, Secretary of the Brooklyn Federation of Charities, and Miss Harriet Young of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, were the judges.

Seventy-five additional prizes were also presented to babies in the parade. They were distributed by Borough President Edward Riegelmann and Miss Swan Ringen, champion high diver, performing at Luna Park this year. Herbert Evans was master of ceremonies.

Last night was "Elks' Night" at Coney Island. Several hundred Elks and delegations of the American League and Boy and Girl Scouts paraded.

GIANTS ROUT REDS IN FIRST OF SERIES

KELLY MAKES LONG HOMER

Clouts Ball Into Upper Tier of New Left Field Stand—Meusel Also Gets Four-Bagger.

The Cincinnati Reds came to town yesterday and suffered no little damage to their pride, dignity and immediate pennant aspirations. After mingling with the Giants at the Polo Grounds, Moran's men looked slightly haggard and the worse for wear. They were beaten by as big a margin as 13 to 6, and the Giants made fifteen hits, two of which were home runs. Over it all was the merry sound of a shillalah being briskly applied.

As one enthusiast put it after the game, "If that is the best of the Western clubs, let's get started at printing the world's series tickets right now."

But that is putting the case too baldly. No club looks good when it is eight or ten runs behind and its best pitcher—the headliner of the cast—is being knocked from pillar to post. Besides, the Reds were crippled. Pat Duncan was not in left field, at the special request of President Heydler. Babe Pinelli was in uniform but not at third base, and Sammy Bohne, who was understudying at the far corner, played a bad game all the way through, making errors of judgment and uncorking one erratic throw that gave the Giants four of their thirteen runs.

For the day the Reds were outclassed, no mistake about it. The Giants made it look as if the National League race is likely to become looser with each passing day. They hit when they wanted to, fielded well and got pitching of the adequate kind from Jess Barnes, who started his first game since the opening series with the Braves some weeks back. After the champions got in a few early licks at Pete Donohue, the Redland star collapsed completely in the fifth and went out in the middle of a rush of base hits. "Cactus" Keck, who finished the game, was hit for five runs, but he was poorly supported.

Two Homers Score Six Runs.

The Giants did more with a couple of home runs than the Reds with all their twelve hits. There was a true economy of effort about these homers. Each came with two men on bases and each scored three runs.

Irish Meusel gave the Giants a three-run lead with his four-baser. Donohue walked Bancroft in the third and Groh beat out his roller to shortstop. After Frisch had filed to Roush, Meusel slammed the second pitch far back into the lower tier in right field, and there you had three runs.

But this was only an ordinary homer. For real distance, speed and solid respectability, take the drive that George Kelly delivered in the sixth. That was a home run. It leaped over left center and landed well up in the top tier of the new grand stand, yards and yards away from the foul line. "A home run in any league," as a visiting expert so aptly put it, and also the longest left field drive of the season at the Polo Grounds. In the old field it probably would have cleared the fence and gone into the elevated yard.

However, before this took place a number of things had happened to Mr. Donohue. After getting the three-run lead in the third, the Giants lost one back to the Reds in the fourth when Eddie Roush lashed a beautiful line drive just over the barrier in front of the right field stand. The Reds couldn't follow up the attack, and the minute it subsided the Giants rushed in with the heavy artillery. They blasted Donohue out of the picture in the fifth, and Pete had to flee to the hills.

It started with Bancroft who was busy all afternoon. He singled over second to start the fifth and was safe at second on Groh's fly ball when Cavenev dropped Donohue's hurried and low throw on Groh's grounder. Frisch cut a hit over second in the same groove as Bancroft's, and Dave scored. Groh scurrying to third. With the infield in Meusel hit a sharp liner to right for a base, scoring Groh and moving Frisch to third.

Assault on Donohue Continues.

The dam was bursting. Donohue still lingering on the scene, Young touched him up for a line hit to right centre, and Frisch carted in the third run of the inning, Meusel sprinting to third. By this time it looked like a track meet. When Kelly hit a terrific single to left, Meusel did the 100 yards in 10 flat, scoring another run while Young was chasing down to second.

Not being a man given to snap decisions, Pat Moran waited until this moment before he removed Donohue. Keck came on, and a pair of long flies by O'Connell and Snyder enabled Young to come in from second.

Burns's single, Daubert's triple and a fly by Roush gave the Reds two runs in the sixth, and then the Giants fell to again. Bancroft walked, and, with two out, Meusel was safe on Bohne's wide throw to Daubert. Young scored Banny with a single, and Bohne's error assumed more humble proportions when Kelly slapped his homer to left.

That made it 12 to 3, a lead not to be sneezed at. What happened thereafter was of little moment. Getting careless in his prosperous days, Barnes was hit freely in the eighth and ninth, but it would have taken an earthquake to dislodge the Giants from their clutch on the pastime. Burns and Roush doubled in the eighth for one run, and Fonseca, Cavenev, Wingo and Pinch Hitter Bressler singled in succession for two more tallies in the ninth.

RUDOLPH ON MOUND AS BRAVES TRIUMPH

BOSTON, May 17.—Dick Rudolph, veteran twirler of the Braves, whose pitching was one of the leading factors in the winning of the pennant and the world's championship by the local National League club back in 1914, made his first start of the year here today and scored a 1 to 0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates in ten innings. He allowed only eight scattered hits, two of which were doubles, and gave only two bases on balls. Wilbur Cooper, the Pirates' ace, yielded only seven hits, but gave five bases on balls. Rudolph pitched only one complete game last season.

The winning run came with one out. Boeckel singled and took third when McInnis singled to short left field on the hit-and-run play. Traynor made a good stop of Felix's grounder, but his throw to the plate hit Boeckel on the head and the latter scored. Nixon's fielding in centre field for the Braves was sensational.

Charley Grimm, the Pirates' first baseman, after hitting safely in twenty-five consecutive games, failed to connect safely today. His mark is sixteen short of the modern major league record established last year by George Sisler of the Browns. The break in Grimm's string was the result of a hair-line decision by the official scorer.

In the ninth inning, with two out, Grimm hit a ball viciously through the box and it was knocked down by Larry Kopf, the Braves' shortstop, who failed to field it cleanly enough to get his man at first. Newspaper men were divided as to whether Kopf should get an error or Grimm a hit.

The Pirates' first baseman was walked once, was thrown out by Rudolph once and filed out to McInnis at first base on another trip to the plate.

SHOCKER CHASED TO COVER

Gives Way to Pruett in Third Inning—Joe Bush Banished by Umpire Evans in Eighth.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, May 17.—The Yankees continued their triumphant march through the West by defeating the Browns here today by a score of 9 to 2. The champions made sixteen hits for a total of twenty-two bases, and enjoyed the satisfaction of batting Urban Shocker off the mound in the third inning.

Barring Sam Jones, who succeeded Joe Bush on the mound when the latter was ordered out of the game for disputing a decision by Umpire Billy Evans at the start of the eighth inning, every man in the Yankee batting order made at least one hit. Two of the Hugmen, Bob Meusel and Wallis Schang, each had a perfect day at bat, while Babe Ruth boosted his home run total to five by slamming one over the right field bleachers in the ninth.

Meusel made three singles and a triple and drew one pass in five times up against Shocker. Hubert Pruett and Billy Payne, while Schang came through with two singles, a double, a sacrifice fly and a sacrifice bunt. They figured in all but one of the Yankees' runs, Meusel scoring four and driving in one, while Schang scored one and batted in three.

Bush pitched the first seven innings and was brilliantly effective in the first five. He began to slip in the sixth, however. In the seventh he filled the bases after two were out. With Jacobson at bat at the start of the eighth, Evans called his first delivery a ball and ordered Bush out of the game when Joe protested too vigorously. Jones retired the side in order in the two innings he pitched.

Witt Makes Fine Play.

Witt made the most spectacular play of the series to date when he leaped against the right field bleachers in the fourth inning and grabbed a liner off Ken Williams's bat. Wally Pipp also starred in the field.

The Yanks broke away to an early lead by driving three runs across in the second inning. Pipp led off with a single to left, advanced to third on Meusel's hit to short right centre and scored on Schang's sacrifice fly. Ward struck out but Scott, Bush and, Witt weighed in with consecutive singles, two more runs resulting.

McManus hit to the roof of the left field pavilion for a home run at the start of the Browns' half but the next three men went out in order and the Yankees came to bat for another assault on Shocker. Ruth was the first man up in this inning, and, with Third Baseman Robertson creeping for a possible bunt, the Babe deliberately chopped one into short left field for a single. Pipp sacrificed and Meusel brought the run across with a single to left. The lanky Californian went to second on Williams's throw to the plate and scored a moment later on Schang's hit to centre. Shocker was taken out of the box, Pruett replacing him, and Ward saluted the young left-hander with the fourth hit of the inning.

Schang went to third on the hit and Ward took an extra base on the throw to head off Schang, but neither Scott nor Bush could hit the ball out of the infield.

Yanks Score Two More.

The fourth was an uneventful round, but in the fifth the Yankees launched another offensive movement and added two runs to their total. Meusel singled to left for his third hit of the game, Schang also singled to left, sending Meusel to third. Schang took an extra base on Williams's belated throw to Robertson. Meusel scored on an infield hit by Ward, and Schang completed the circuit while the Browns were engineering a double play on Scott's rap to Gerber.

Durst batted for Pruett in the second half of the fifth and in the following round Bayne assumed the pitching burden for the Browns. The shift in pitchers seemed to arouse the Browns from their lethargy and in the second half of the sixth they started a little rally of their own.

Tobin was the first man up and he singled to centre. Foster drew a pass and Jacobson lined a single over second. Tobin scoring and Foster going to third. Bush fielded William's roller to the box, drove Foster back to third and then whipped the ball to Scott, who stepped on second, forcing Jacobson and delayed to Pipp in time to complete a double play. McManus then lifted to Ruth and the inning was over.

There was no further scoring until the ninth when the Yankees bagged two more runs. Ruth started the drive by hitting the first ball pitched to him for his fifth homer of the season. Pipp passed out on an infield fly, but Meusel tripled to right and scored on Schang's double to left. Ward then grounded to Robertson, who tagged Schang going into third and doubled the batter at first.

SENATORS WIN IN TENTH.

CHICAGO, May 17.—Doubles by Fisher and Goslin and Evans's sacrifice in the tenth inning, gave the Washington Senators the winning run in their 3 to 2 victory over the Chicago White Sox today in the first game of the series. Thurston, the former St. Louis pitcher, worked well for the White Sox, while Warmoth was replaced by the veteran, Walter Johnson, when Chicago rallied in the tenth.

ROBINS DEFEATED BY CARDS, 6 TO 3

St. Louis, In First Appearance Here, Reaches Grimes for Five Runs in Seventh.

The St. Louis Cardinals made their first appearance of the season at Ebbets Field yesterday afternoon and at the end of nine innings Manager Robinson and his Robins admitted that Branch Rickey has a good ball club, especially behind the pitching of Jess Haines. The final figures were St. Louis 6, Brooklyn 3.

Burleigh Grimes started for the Robins and Art Decatur completed the work. Grimes twirled excellent ball for six innings, yielding only four hits in that time, two of which accounted for a run in the fourth. But it was in the seventh that the Cardinals staged their rally, pounding Grimes for five hits, which, aided with bases on balls and a hit batsman, enabled the visitors to register five runs and clinch the contest.

For six innings it was another one of those pitching duels. Grimes was working well, while Haines was equally as effective. The Robins managed to break through the Cardinal defense in the third for the first run of the game, and it was an error by Smith in left field that provided for this tally.

Robins' Infield Changed.

Manager Robby again presented a changed infield. Ray French reported with a lame arm and Andy High was sent to shortstop. McCarren continued at third and also continued to hit, making two safeties. Rogers Hornsby, the Cardinals' star second baseman, who injured his knee in the Philadelphia series, was on the third base coaching line during part of the game. He is expected to be able to play when St. Louis meets the Giants here.

The Robins started after Haines in the third inning, Smith dropped Grimes's liner, High sacrificed and Grimes continued to third on Johnston's roller to Toporcer. Tommy Griffith's single scored Grimes. The Cradinals tied the score in the fourth. Toporcer singled and was safe at second when Johnston juggled High's throw on Bottomley's grounder for a force play. After Stock and Myers filed out to Nels, Freigau singled to right, Toporcer scoring when Grimes interfered with Griffith's throw to the plate.

Freigau started the rally for the Cardinals in the seventh with a double. He was retired, however, when Grimes took Ainsmith's tap and tossed to High, getting Toporcer a few feet off the bag. Ainsmith moved to second on Haines's single to left. Stock singled to left and Ainsmith beat Wheat's throw to the plate. Flack dropped a Texas Leaguer in left and the bases were filled. Grimes then passed Toporcer, forcing home Hines, and after Bottomley had worked him to a count of three and two, Grimes hit the Cardinals' first baseman on the leg with the next pitch, Smith scoring. Flack came home on Stock's single to right, and, when Myers grounded to Johnston at second, Toporcer crossed the plate. Freigau, up for the second time in the inning, was a strike-out victim.

Decatur Supplants Grimes.

Bailey batted for Grimes in the Robins' half of the seventh. Decatur worked the last two innings and held the invaders hitless and runless. The Robins made their second tally in the eighth when Tommy Griffith lifted one of Haines's slow balls over the right field wall. In the ninth the Robins started what looked like a rally, but it soon died with only one run counting. McCarren started with a single to left. High hit the first ball and Grimes an easy fly to Smith in left field. Taylor then filed out to Flack in right. De Berry batted for Decatur and tripled to left centre, McCarren scoring. Nels ended the game with an easy fly to Smith.

RED SOX BOW TO TIGERS.

Murray Pitches Well but Loses, 6-2—Heilmann's Streak Broken.

DETROIT, May 17.—Pillette and Murray engaged in a pitcher's duel here today in the first game of the Boston-Detroit series, the Red Sox twirler permitting the smaller number of hits but allowing the most runs, the Tigers winning by 6 to 2. Passed batsmen, followed by hits, accounted for Detroit's runs.

After hitting safely in twenty-one consecutive games Harry Heilmann, Detroit outfielder, failed to register a safe blow today.

It was announced that two bones in Bobby Jones's right foot were broken when he slid into the plate in Monday's game with the Yankees. The Tigers' third baseman will be out of the game for several weeks.

COLUMBIA DEFEATS DARTMOUTH, 7 TO 0

Scores First Baseball Victory Over Green in Four Years on South Field.

The Columbia baseball team defeated Dartmouth on South Field yesterday for the first time since 1919, 7 to 0.

Pitcher Van Brocklin was largely responsible for the victory. He had variety, was cool and used his head. Dartmouth made some lusty swats yesterday which totaled only six singles.

There was fine fielding back of Van Brocklin. Gehrig, who was on first, and Roderick and Heinzelman were particularly brilliant in handling the ball. The Morningside Heights players found the ball for nine hits. Gehrig, who keeps his batting average higher than the .500 mark, smashed out two doubles and a triple in five times at bat. The triple went into deep centre, while both of the doubles hit the lower row of seats in right field.

Columbia began preparations for its first victory over Dartmouth in four years on the second ball pitched by Steinhilber, when Kennedy singled past second. Moeschen followed with another single. Steinhilber tried to locate a weak place in Gehrig's batting, but Gehrig drove the ball into centre for three bases, Mannheim scarificed Gehrig home. Strom reached first on Smith's error and went to second on the bad throw. Heinzelman sent him to third on a single. Strom scored the fourth run a little later on Roderick's sacrifice.

Van Brocklin started the second with a lusty single. Coach Tsareau called Steinhilber and Lyon was sent in. In the fifth Gehrig sicked Lyon for a double and went to second on Mannheim's fielder's choice. Gehrig scored on Strom's sacrifice. In the sixth Blatteis scored when he walked, went to second on Van Brocklin's out and came home on Smith's error of Kennedy's drive. Heinzelman opened the last run in the eighth, when he reached first on an error, made third on Roderick's hit and scored on Van Brocklin's sacrifice.

The closest call that Van Brocklin had was in the seventh. Harris led off with a sharp single to centre. Then the pitcher lost control, passed Bjorkman and Smith, filling the bases, with only one out. Heep knocked one in front of the plate and Van Brocklin made a running pick-up and threw to the plate catching Harris, who was coming in from third. Shapleigh ended Dartmouth's chances by flying out to Moeschen.

HAGEN AND SARAZEN WIN IN LEEDS GOLF

VICTORY ON 21ST GREEN

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LEEDS, Eng., May 17.—There were two sensations in the match play stages of The Yorkshire Evening News professional golf tournament, the first two rounds of which were played here today. In the first Joe Kirkwood of Australia was knocked out by H. C. Kinch of Woodcote Park, who excels at putting, by 3 up and 2 to play, and Walter Hagen, holder of the British open crown, had to struggle desperately in the first round to beat T. Barber of Alderley Edge, practically an unknown player, at the twenty-first hole. Hagen only managed to win by successfully negotiating a stymie.

Kirkwood was in arrears all the way around and never looked like a winner. Kinch was not putting with machine-like precision but he had secured such a safe position that he was able at times to indulge in safety play.

Barber also was putting excellently against Hagen, who found himself unable to forge ahead. There never was more than a hole difference between them. The American became dormy one at the seventeenth hole, but he missed a one-yard putt on the eighteenth for the match. Two halves followed and then Hagen made a spectacular shot, lifting the ball over the stymie, winning the hole in three and passing into the second round. Hagen had had luck at the second hole, where a spectator trod on the ball, almost burying it.

In the second round Hagen knocked out M. J. Bingham of Stourbridge by 3 up and 4 to play. This was a ding-dong match at the outset, but the American gradually wore down the Englishman and had a comfortable journey on the homeward stretch.

Gene Sarazen, the American open champion, also got through both rounds. He was up against two formidable opponents in Mark Seymour of Rochester, England, and George Gadd of Roehampton, the latter of whom won the "News of the World" tournament last year. In the first round the American accounted for Seymour by 5 up and 3 to play in a match which was his all the way, and in the second round Gadd had to admit defeat by 3 and 1, but the golf was not particularly brilliant.

Abe Mitchell Eliminated.

LEEDS, England, May 17 (Associated Press)—Walter Hagen and Gene Sarazen, holders respectively of the British and American open golf championships, today successfully came through the first and second rounds of the professional tournament now in progress here.

Hagen had a hard struggle in the morning round before shaking off T. Barber of Alderley Edge, whom he was able to beat only on the twenty-first green. In the afternoon Hagen was outdistanced by M. J. Bingham of Stourbridge for a considerable period, but by careful play he wore down the Midlander and won 6 up and 4 to play.

Sarasen in the morning round defeated Mark Seymour of Rochester, England, 5 up and 3 to play, and in the afternoon beat George Gadd of Roehampton. They were all square on the home journey and Sarasen won on the penultimate green.

The defeat of Joe Kirkwood, former Australian champion, in the first round by H. C. Kinch of Woodcote Park created a sensation. Kinch won by 3 up and 2 to play. Kirwood failed completely to show his form of recent years.

Kinch was put out of the tournament in the second round by A. G. Havers of West Lancashire, 5 up and 4 to play. Another surprise of the day was the defeat of Abe Mitchell, who, after having beat Audrey Boomer of St. Cloud, went down before H. C. Jolly, a young professional of Fox Grove, at the twenty-fifth hole.

NO RADICAL CHANGE IN HARVARD TICKETS

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 17.—The committee appointed at Harvard last Winter to consider and recommend revisions in the system of allotment of tickets, particularly for the Yale football game, in its report made public today offers no radical change in the system of distribution now in operation. The committee found that the current way of doing things—the plan adopted in 1911—was practical and no new way that could afford more satisfaction was available. But there are to be cuts in the privileged classes, referred to in the new report as "service list."

The football captain, manager, head coach and graduate treasurer will continue to receive not more than fifteen tickets. The players on the varsity squad formerly in possession of ten tickets have had their future supply cut to eight. This applies also to assistant coaches and assistant football managers. The second varsity squad will receive the customary allotment of four each, but their coaches, as well as those of the freshman squad, have been cut from six to four. The freshman players will still receive two tickets.

"Whereas before the war it was possible to supply every Harvard applicant for the Yale game with two tickets, provided one of them was for his own use, and to supply a considerable number of applicants, preferred for various reasons, with more than two, the present demand is such that a large number of applicants can be supplied with only one ticket.

"In fact the time is coming soon when no graduate can expect to get more than one seat. Meantime it is of the first importance that the already established rule forbidding any Harvard man to apply for tickets unless he expects personally to attend the game and requiring him to return his tickets if he finds he cannot attend be impressed upon applicants in every way possible and that it be enforced by blacklisting those men who violate it.

"The allotment recommended for the 'men in the service,' so to speak, the committee believes is no more than they are entitled to for their families and intimate personal friends. The total allotment in this class will not affect by five yards the location of those coming in later classes.

"In addition to the specific classifications outlined in the plan, the committee believes that the Graduate Treasurer in handling the business of the football season in its present magnitude should have a certain limited discretion, beyond any hard and fast rules, in extending the application privilege as a matter of courtesy or in recognition of obligations when obviously desirable, and recommends that as a general rule such privilege should be exercised through the form of endorsed application blanks to be filled in one of the later groups."

GOLFERS BOOK PASSAGE.

Gardner, Quimet and Others Will Leave England on May 23.

LONDON, May 17 (Associated Press).—Robert Gardner, Francis Quimet, Jess Sweetser and other American golf amateurs have booked passage on the steamer Majestic, which sails from Southampton for New York May 23. This indicates that they may not compete in the open championship at Troon June 24.

Golfers to Wage Warfare On Fungus Growths on Links

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 17.—A scientific warfare on fungus growths which have baffled the best efforts of caretakers of some of the leading golf courses in the country is being planned by the United States Golf Association, James Francis Burke, of Pittsburgh and General Counsel of the Association, said today in announcing the organization of the greens section as a branch of the national body. Besides trying to develop a scientific means of eliminating wild growths from putting greens, the greens section will also devote much time to experimenting with the growth of sturdier grass adaptable to climatic conditions in all parts of the country. J. Frederick Byers of Pittsburgh, President of the United States Association, has been elected to the directorate of the branch organization, headquarters of which will be in Pittsburgh.

WALKER CUP PLAY WILL START TODAY

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, May 17 (Associated Press).—On the historic St. Andrews golf course, the very home of the game, eight of the best amateurs of the United Kingdom will begin tomorrow their effort to take the Walker Cup away from the Americans, who came to England with the especial purpose of retaining that emblem and team supremacy in the golf world.

Eight two-ball foursomes will be played tomorrow over the course from which golf spread around the world, and on Saturday a similar number of matches in singles will finish the Walker Cup competition of 1923.

Captain Robert Gardner of the American team and Robert Harris, leader of the British players, this afternoon selected the men who are to make the struggle in the foursomes. There were no surprises over the players picked to represent Great Britain, but everyone who has been following the play of the Americans was surprised to discover that Dr. O. F. Willing of Portland, Ore., and Fred Wright, Dr. of Los Angeles were not included in Gardner's list.

Willing's Record Abroad Ranks Second.

Dr. Willing, on his record since reaching England, is second only to Francis Ouimet among the dozen of amateurs who crossed the ocean a month ago. The Oregonian tied Ouimet in stroke competition for the St. George's Cup, which Ouimet finally won, and remained in the running for the championship at Deal until every American except Ouimet had been eliminated. He went down two and one to Roger Wethered, the same score by which that brilliant British youth disposed of Ouimet the following day.

Wright was the last American to stick in the lower half of the championship draw. Since coming to St. Andrews three days ago for practice, Dr. Willing's play for steadiness and sureness surpassed that of any of the American players on the list, much as does not even appear in the M. G. A. handicap list. Investigation, however, revealed that he has been at golf for some time, for he was captain of the Cornell University golf team at the same time that Peacock was wielding the mashie in behalf of Princeton when the Nassau hockey season was not flourishing. That he is worthy of a place among the district's low handicap men was shown by the manner in which he "fought and cheated" the wind yesterday.

He did not have much margin to spare, however, for a stroke back of him came A. C. Gregson of Lido, who was just that much ahead of Captain H. C. C. Tippett, his clubmate. Peacock, after a faulty start, came sailing home in 40 for an 84 total, putting him in solitary confinement in the 86 bracket. Four players shared the honors with 85—Van Vleck, W. F. Ladd of Rockaway Hunt, Hamilton K. Kerr and R. L. Smith of Dutchess.

Survive by One Stroke.

One stroke inside the safety zone came Parker, J. L. Anderson of Cherry Valley, Eddie Driggs Jr., runner-up in the recently-played Long Island championship, who declared after his round that he had had great difficulty in hitting his wooden shots; G. E. Hale of Brooklyn Forest Park, a brother of Eddie Hale, the New Jersey district player, who was runner-up to Sweetser in the metropolitan last year; H. J. Topping of Greenwich, a former winner of the event and the 1922 North and South champion; James R. Hyde of South Shore and R. Akahoshi, a Japanese student at Princeton, who has been making rapid progress in the reading golf in recent years.

There were five players tied for the last place in the first sixteen—all at 87. They were J. Lang and F. Allaire of Hempstead, B. B. Bryan Jr. and W. F. Truesdell of Garden City, and A. Bligh of Cherry Valley. The place was decided by a drawing and Lang was the fortunate one.

The pairings for today: Lang vs. Van Vleck; Parker vs. Akahoshi; Anderson vs. Driggs; Peacock vs. Hyde; Smith vs. Tippett; Kerr vs. Topping; Ladd vs. Gregson; De Witt vs. Hale.

Some little flurry was caused by the bulletining of the notice that "under the rules of the United States Golf Association the use of steel shafted clubs is prohibited." The governing body has made known its stand on the question of steel shafts on a number of occasions, but yesterday was the first time that such a notice has ever appeared on a scoreboard, and it caused no little discussion, since some of the players had the steel-shafted utensils in their golf bags.

De Witt Starts Slowly.

De Witt didn't start off like a medalist. He took a 5 at the first hole, which is a par 4 creature, and after getting his par 3 at the second required a 6 at the third. He got his par 5 at the long fourth and a fine birdie 3 at the fifth—well-earned against the wind. He was only twice over par on the next four holes, taking a 6 at the seventh and a 5 at the eighth. He reached the turn in 41. On the homeward round he was never more than a stroke off the pace path and that only four times. He finished out the last three holes in even 15 for a 40 and a total of 81.

Gregson started away with a birdie 3 at the first hole, but then encountered difficulties at the short second and ended up with a 5. He followed with 5 and 7 at the third and fourth and looked to be on the verge of ruin so far as a low round was concerned. A birdie 4 at the seventh helped, however, and enabled him to get to the turn with a card of 40. Two 6s at par 4 holes robbed him of his chance for the low medal, but one came at the ninth and the other at the fifteenth. On the seventeenth he had another birdie, which offset a lost stroke at the home hole across the pond.

BANKERS' NINES TO MEET.

Bond Club of New York Will Play Chicago at Tarrytown Today.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., May 17.—Charles H. Sabin, Chairman of the Board of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, will pitch for the baseball team of the Bond Club of New York against the Bond Club team of Chicago at the annual outing of the Bond Club of New York tomorrow, at the Sleepy Hollow Country Club.

If Sabin's arm gives out, somebody else will take the job. Sabin started the game for the New York team at the outing two years ago. The victorious team will get possession of a cup given by J. P. Morgan.

It is expected that 450 bankers will attend the outing. In the morning there will be a golf tournament between representatives of the two bond clubs, and also a tennis tournament. The baseball game will be played in the afternoon.

U. S. BOWLERS DEFEATED.

Lose to Swedish Team in First Match for New Trophy.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, May 17.—The Swedish bowlers defeated the Americans in the international bowling tournament today by a score of 1,725 to 1,688. This was the first match and was between teams of five men, the prize being the American Bowling Union Trophy, a $500 silver loving cup, which the Americans carried abroad with them, to be placed in competition as a perpetual challenge trophy.

The American team today was composed of George E. Jarrett, F. Siffert, William Heine, Thomas Lund and F. Westberg. The American bowlers expressed surprise at the high quality of the playing of their Swedish opponents.

DE WITT'S 81 TOPS GARDEN CITY FIELD

When all of the shootin' was over in the qualifying round of the annual invitation tournament of the Garden City Golf Club yesterday the name of an unknown golfer occupied the place of honor on the scoreboard. The record-shattering field of 131 starters was led by J. E. DeWitt of Ardsley, whose 81 scored early in the day, stood up against the attacks made on it by more than a hundred golfers who followed the Ardsley representative around the course.

This historic old tournament, one that goes back in heritage to the very beginning of things in the metropolitan district, was a mere shadow of its former self yesterday, for there were many familiar faces absent. But there were also a goodly number present and among them several who found the test of course and wind too exacting. One could make a splendid sixteen out of those who, for one reason or another, had "no cards" marked after their names on the scoreboard. Witness: W. Fay Fullerson, youthful phenomenon of Belleclaire; John M. Ward, home club veteran; A. M. Brown Jr. of St. George's; J. S. Worthington, former Westchester amateur champion; W. H. Pellett and L. G. Spindler, Fox Hills pair; H. E. Will of Nassau; Norton L. Perry of Garden City; E. W. Nash of Rockaway Hunt, W. W. Fell of Cherry Valley, John D. Chapman of Greenwich and M. Parish Watson of Pine Valley.

Down in the list of those who "failed to make the grade" one also finds several familiar-sounding names—Dr. N. E. Sprague of Lido, Don McKellar of North Hempstead, runner-up in last year's Long Island championship, and many others.

Seldom has the Garden City invitation medal been won in such high-scoring fashion as it was yesterday. This was due to two reasons. First was the fact that several of the leading lights of other clubs were not present. Most of them doubtless "cured" of golf for a spell after their harrowing experiences of the two previous days at Lido. The other was due to the elements. Although the day was warm and bright, the high winds continued to play havoc with shots that bordered the least bit on the wayward side. Then, too, Garden City, apparently inoffensive enough to the casual eye, is a course that devours golfers who do not hew strictly to the line. It always has been that kind of course and it probably always will be.

Once Won by Travis With 84.

When the scores were partly in the veteran master, Walter J. Travis, winner in the British amateur championship the only time the event was ever captured by an American, recalled one occasion when he won the medal with an 84. No one else was able to recall a time when the trophy went for the taking at 81.

But yesterday was an unusual day, as was further proved by the fact that only two players out of the field succeeded in breaking 40 for the outward nine holes, par for which is 37. Those two were E. C. Van Vleck and Don M. Parker, both home club players. Parker was the runner-up in the event last year when Robert A. Lynne of Oakmont was the winner. The latter has experienced an even more difficult time on the homeward journey. Par for the last nine holes at Garden City is 36, but again there were only two golfers who did 40 or better. One was De Witt and the other was Grant A. Peacock of Cherry Valley, metropolitan runner-up two years ago.

De Witt's victory was rather unexpected, inasmuch as he is a comparative newcomer in metropolitan competitive golf matters—so much so that his name does not even appear in the M. G. A. handicap list. Investigation, however, revealed that he has been at golf for some time, for he was captain of the Cornell University golf team at the same time that Peacock was wielding the mashie in behalf of Princeton when the Nassau hockey season was not flourishing. That he is worthy of a place among the district's low handicap men was shown by the manner in which he "fought and cheated" the wind yesterday.

He did not have much margin to spare, however, for a stroke back of him came A. C. Gregson of Lido, who was just that much ahead of Captain H. C. C. Tippett, his clubmate. Peacock, after a faulty start, came sailing home in 40 for an 84 total, putting him in solitary confinement in the 86 bracket. Four players shared the honors with 85—Van Vleck, W. F. Ladd of Rockaway Hunt, Hamilton K. Kerr and R. L. Smith of Dutchess.

Survive by One Stroke.

One stroke inside the safety zone came Parker, J. L. Anderson of Cherry Valley, Eddie Driggs Jr., runner-up in the recently-played Long Island championship, who declared after his round that he had had great difficulty in hitting his wooden shots; G. E. Hale of Brooklyn Forest Park, a brother of Eddie Hale, the New Jersey district player, who was runner-up to Sweetser in the metropolitan last year; H. J. Topping of Greenwich, a former winner of the event and the 1922 North and South champion; James R. Hyde of South Shore and R. Akahoshi, a Japanese student at Princeton, who has been making rapid progress in the reading golf in recent years.

There were five players tied for the last place in the first sixteen—all at 87. They were J. Lang and F. Allaire of Hempstead, B. B. Bryan Jr. and W. F. Truesdell of Garden City, and A. Bligh of Cherry Valley. The place was decided by a drawing and Lang was the fortunate one.

The pairings for today: Lang vs. Van Vleck; Parker vs. Akahoshi; Anderson vs. Driggs; Peacock vs. Hyde; Smith vs. Tippett; Kerr vs. Topping; Ladd vs. Gregson; De Witt vs. Hale.

Some little flurry was caused by the bulletining of the notice that "under the rules of the United States Golf Association the use of steel shafted clubs is prohibited." The governing body has made known its stand on the question of steel shafts on a number of occasions, but yesterday was the first time that such a notice has ever appeared on a scoreboard, and it caused no little discussion, since some of the players had the steel-shafted utensils in their golf bags.

De Witt Starts Slowly.

De Witt didn't start off like a medalist. He took a 5 at the first hole, which is a par 4 creature, and after getting his par 3 at the second required a 6 at the third. He got his par 5 at the long fourth and a fine birdie 3 at the fifth—well-earned against the wind. He was only twice over par on the next four holes, taking a 6 at the seventh and a 5 at the eighth. He reached the turn in 41. On the homeward round he was never more than a stroke off the pace path and that only four times. He finished out the last three holes in even 15 for a 40 and a total of 81.

Gregson started away with a birdie 3 at the first hole, but then encountered difficulties at the short second and ended up with a 5. He followed with 5 and 7 at the third and fourth and looked to be on the verge of ruin so far as a low round was concerned. A birdie 4 at the seventh helped, however, and enabled him to get to the turn with a card of 40. Two 6s at par 4 holes robbed him of his chance for the low medal, but one came at the ninth and the other at the fifteenth. On the seventeenth he had another birdie, which offset a lost stroke at the home hole across the pond.

NEW JERSEY WOMEN GOLFERS DEFEATED

Special to The New York Times.

ENGLEWOOD, N. J., May 17.—Thoroughly aroused over their recent shortcomings in the match against Long Island, the women golfers belonging to the Westchester area today crossed the Hudson with full wartime strength and practically annihilated the New Jersey second of the interdistrict matches for the Golf Illustrated team trophy found the Westchester players on the winning end of an 18 to 10 score. Against Long Island, in the first of the series of three matches, the Westchester team lost to the Insular golfers, 20 points to 11. The concluding match of the series will be played at Apawamis next week between New Jersey and Long Island.

The result of today's match was considerable of an upset to the New Jersey players who, figuring on the basis of the Westchester-Long Island match, underestimated the strength of their opponents. But today's team was a far more formidable one than they met. Mrs. Charles Dickinson, acting Westchester team captain, was able to put into the field against the Long Islanders. Not only did it possess additional strength but the players fairly outdid themselves, four of them turning in 3-point victories over their New Jersey rivals. New Jersey, on the other hand, was able to win only one match by the three-point method.

That feat fell to the lot of Miss Anita Lihme of the Englewood club, a nineteen-year-old miss who, it is now predicted by competent critics, will be ready to step into the national championship class almost any day. Miss Lihme was pitted against Miss Georgianna M. Bishop of Brooklawn, former metropolitan women's champion and, although it was practically her first competitive event, she won an easy winner. Miss Lihme had a medal score that was in the neighborhood of 89 in spite of three putts on several greens.

Mrs. H. Arnold Jackson of Greenwich, former national champion, did even 63 against Mrs. Hucknall of Morris County, No. 1 player on the New Jersey team yesterday. It was the lowest round that has been made by a woman golfer on the newly-constructed Englewood course. Several years ago Mrs. Bishop had an 81, but the layout was then several strokes easier than it now stands.

Mrs. Jackson took her match rather handily, Mrs. Hucknall being considerably off form and losing three holes on each nine. The Greenwich player was out in 44 and home in 39. There was nothing particularly striking about the outward round on which she had three 5s and as many 4s. But after the turn she had two birdies, a 4 at the eleventh and one at the fourteenth. She was either par or one over at all the other holes except two, the thirteenth and the seventeenth, where she took 6s against par 4s. Mrs. Jackson's feat was accomplished under somewhat trying conditions, for a troublesome wind swept the course.

ROSENBAUM LOSES TO ONDA AT TENNIS

Upset Marks Harlem Tourney Play—Bodkin Beats Wood In the Fifth Round.

The play in the annual open tournament of the Harlem Tennis Club has reached the round before the semi-finals, with one match yet to be completed in the preceding brackets. One upset yesterday resulted in the elimination of Dr. William Rosenbaum, which leaves six of the seeded players still in the running. Rosenbaum was put out by S. Onda, the Japanese player, after three close sets at 6—3, 4—6, 6—4. Bartier in the day Rosenbaum had gained his fourth round bracket at the expense of Walter Abels.

In the upper half of the draw are found Percy Kynaston, Alfred D. Hammett, Jerome Minster, Onda and Paul Martin. Minster and Hammett will meet today to determine the occupant of the eighth bracket in the round before the semi-finals, who will then face Kynaston. Onda and Martin meet in the second quarter. In the lower half the survivors are Philip Bodkin, Henry C. Tremaine, Anton F. Von Bernuth and George C. Whitlock. They will meet today in the order named.

Bodkin gained his bracket in the fifth round at the expense of Charles M. Wood Jr. The score was 6—2, 6—4. The match should have been one of the best, if not the most interesting, in the tournament. But Wood was off stroke and only in stretches did he play the best tennis of which he is capable. In those moments the play was the most interesting seen on the Harlem courts thus far in the week. In spite of his setback Wood has the head of a veteran, the result of years at the game, and his strokes are beautiful to watch, so cleanly made are they and so uncompromising in the pace and in the length they carry, even at the most critical stages, that at other times would play it "safe." It was only at long intervals, however, that Wood was able to get his strokes working right, and against a player of the readiness and ability of Bodkin it needed to be at his best every moment.

Bodkin Is Steady.

Wood played so erratically in the first set that Bodkin ran out five straight games in a very brief space of time. The younger player was hitting the ball with all his power from the outset, but his control was bad and he could get nothing back safely. He committed faults in an endless stream, into the net or far over the baseline and failed completely at the net, where he was passed frequently or erred on his returns. Many of these errors were made for Bodkin gave the ball back straight at his feet as he advanced and Wood was forced to stroke from a disadvantageous position. Bodkin, playing in his methodical manner never ran into any trouble, his safety depending upon his ability to find the openings with his ground strokes to win his points. Occasionally he changed his tactics, and when he did it was usually to win the point with a well-placed volley well out of reach of the other's racquet.

After losing five games in a row, Wood left off his error-making and for the first time gained control over the shots, which enabled him to put up in winning the sixth and seventh games. Repeatedly he caught Bodkin out of position with his speeding forehand drives, and at the net he dealt his opponent's ground strokes out of the air in flawless fashion, winning several of the rallies with his decisive chop volleys. Bodkin weakened noticeably in these two games, finding it impossible to handle the stinging drives. He regained control of the situation in the eighth and won the set at 6—2.

Wood played in improved form in the second set, but he was still not good enough to overcome the brand of tennis that Bodkin was putting on, and lost the frame at 6—3. The Harlem club champion made few errors in this set, and the manner in which he found the openings with his fast ground strokes left his younger opponent's best efforts to naught again and again. While his play in general was methodical, there was nothing slow in the quickness with which he got off his strokes, and when he smashed back Wood's service for placement aces it was evident that all the speed was not on one side of the net. Had the younger player been able to keep within the lines better and out of the net, the score would have been somewhat different, for his tactics were commendable at all times. He simply was unable to do what he wanted to do.

Kynaston Comes Through.

Percy Kynaston, the ranking player in the tournament, had his hands full for the first set in disposing of M. T. Ackerland. The latter put out Manfred Goldman on Wednesday, thereby proving his worthiness to meet the Long Island man, and at times in the first set yesterday it looked as though Kynaston would be lucky to get off with a three-set victory. Every point was keenly contested, both players fighting hard and covering more than the normal amount of territory. Kynaston finally broke through to win at 7—5. In the second he won in more decisive fashion, although Ackerland made him earn his points to the last. Kynaston's ability to work the other out of position for his openings served him in good stead and more of his points were earned on placements than in the first set.

Von Bernuth put in one of the most strenuous afternoons of his court career in gaining his fifth round bracket. To do so he had first to dispose of Leonard W. Knox and then to get past Armand L. Brunsau. Both opponents proved difficult obstacles, and against Knox, Von Bernuth was called upon to give his utmost before he won in three sets at 3—6, 6—4, 6—3. Knox forced the issue all the way in this match, rushing the net constantly and carrying the fight to his opponent. Lack of steadiness, particularly at the net when he had clean kills before him, cost Knox the match as much as did anything else.

DOT WINS HANDILY IN THE STUYVESANT

30 TO 1 SHOT IN FRONT

St. Lawrence, Opening at 50 to 1, Takes Fifth Event—Dunsandel Bleeds and Is Pulled Up.

The Stuyvesant Handicap, feature of a good card at Jamaica yesterday, was won in convincing fashion by J. Byer's Dot, a three-year-old daughter of Tagalamento and Dorigen. Dot was one of the yearlings sold by A. K. Macomber at Saratoga in 1921, the price being $800. Yesterday she won a purse of ten times that value and enriched her owner by $8,650.

The eighth running of the Stuyvesant, the victory by a head of a 30 to 1 shot, and a straight enough, pleasant weather, combined to make yesterday's racing worth while to the unusually large mid-week crowd which turned out at the Long Island course. It is true that the featured race might have been more interesting had the start been better, but poor starts are a part of racing and, taken as a whole, there was no cause for complaint about the quality of the sport.

Dot's galloping victory was a surprise, although her owner has consistently maintained that he had a stake winner in the chestnut filly. The talent was about equally divided between the Riviera Stable's Great Man and R. L. Gerry's Cyclops, and these two went to the post equal favorites at odds of 13 to 5. Cyclops might have finished inside the money, but when the barrier was sprung he was turned sideways and he was length behind the field before he struck his stride. Once under way, he closed ground with the fine burst of speed that seem to be always at his command, but the initial loss of ground was too great, and he was lucky to get as near the front as he did, which was sixth in the field of eight.

Dot Gets Good Start.

Great Man likewise got none the best of the start, but might have won had he run up to the expectations of his backers. As it was his performance was amply rewarded when he won third money.

Dot was one of the three starters to get a clean break. She was in motion when Starter Cassidy let them go and Sande, who had the leg on the fleet filly, is a rider who makes the most of such advantages. He took his mount out in front and rated her just ahead of the others until the final eighth, where he let her have her head to find that she had enough to draw away and win by three lengths from the Greentree Stable's Moonraker. The latter, along with Mark Twain, was aided by the bad start, and these two both tried unsuccessfully to overhaul the leader. Mark Twain tired so badly under the effort that he lost the show money to Great Man.

The 30-to-1 shot which went over was R. L. Soule's St. Lawrence in the fifth race. This contest resulted in the most thrilling finish of the afternoon, with two rank outsiders battling it out with the favorite at the end. St. Lawrence opened at 50 to 1 along the oval line and several adventuresome souls were reported to have taken those odds. In fact, one young man was said to have brought a small bet all the way from Maryland to place on St. Lawrence. If so, it was worth the trip.

St. Lawrence was outrun in the early stages of the race, and at the turn into the stretch the race apparently was between Sequel, the favorite at 3 to 1, and Good Time, another 30 to 1 proposition. But rounding the turn St. Lawrence came from no where, overtook the leaders in the final sixteenth and won by a head going away. Good time, which had held a short lead until the bay gelding shot past her in the closing strides, hung on gamely and saved the place by another head from the fading Sequel. The latter had no excuse, for she had only a featherweight of 99 pounds up. Her defeat was a severe disappointment to a large portion of the crowd.

Dunsandel Bleeds.

The opening contest, a six-furlong affair for four-year-olds and upward with jockeys up who had not won two races, was marred by the fact that the favorite, Dunsandel, also the property of J. Byer, bled shortly after the start and had to be pulled up. Aiken, at 12 to 1, was the winner by a nose over L. Liebling's Sunny Girl. Jockey E. McCarthy was the winning rider.

Lord Baltimore 2d, coming to the races for the first time, scored a handy victory in the closing number for J. S. Cosden. The Rancocas Stable's Tester with Sande up was second, and J. E. Madden's Thorndale was third. After the race Sande entered a claim of foul, but the stewards disallowed it.

Eddie Rickenbacker to Start Indianapolis Automobile Race

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 17.—Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, American flier during the World War and a former automobile race driver, will be the official starter of the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30, it was announced today. Twenty-five machines are being worked here daily in preparation for the race. Thirty-three are expected to start.

COURSE OF N. Y. Y. C. CRUISE ANNOUNCED

Commodore Harold S. Vanderbilt of the New York Yacht Club announced the program of the annual cruise at a general meeting of the members yesterday at the clubhouse, 37 West Forty-fourth Street. The fleet, which probably will be made up of forty or more sailing yachts and as many propelled by power, will have its rendezvous at New London on Tuesday afternoon, August 7.

The first run of the squadron will be to Block Island on August 8, and on the following day the run will have Newport as its destination. The races for the Astor Cups, one trophy for schooners and one for sloops, will be sailed over one of the regular courses off Newport on Friday, August 10. The run on Saturday will be to Mattapoisett in Buzzards Bay where the yachts will remain until Monday when the run will be to Vineyard Haven. From Vineyard Haven the yachts will race to Newport on Tuesday, and on Wednesday, August 15, the race for the King's Cup will be sailed off Newport. This trophy was put up by King George V. of England and any yacht more than fifty feet in length and owned by a member of a recognized yacht club is eligible to enter. After this event the squadron will disband.

Yachtsmen seem pleased with the program. All of the racing is outside Long Island Sound and chiefly in open water. Last season the squadron went around the Cape of Marblehead. The Race Committee of the club will prepare instructions and define the courses over which the yachts are to race.

DERBY CANDIDATES HAVE FINAL TRIALS

VIGIL'S WORK IS BEST

Saimon Colt Does Mile and a Quarter in 2:08 1-5—Track Conditions Improve.

Special to The New York Times.

LOUISVILLE, KY., May 17.—Candidates for the Kentucky Derby, the score or more of the best thoroughbreds of the country which will go to the post Saturday afternoon in the forty-ninth renewal of the classic, have completed their strenuous preparations and are as fit for the word as their trainers could get them under the conditions that have prevailed here during the last week, and especially since the arrival of the Eastern contenders.

General Thatcher was the last of the eligibles to work at speed over a distance this afternoon and tomorrow morning the clockers will not worry much over the Derby horses, for not one will get more than the lightest kind of work, just to keep up the keen edge.

It may have been a wise move on the part of certain trainers to postpone their final trials until this afternoon between races. There is no doubt on one score, they had the best track conditions and the later the trial the better the track was. This morning's efforts were under clear skies, but the track was not nearly dried out. It was not by any means heavy, but this afternoon it was good and rapidly approaching being fast.

Out of all the trials, early morning and mid-afternoon, that of Walter J. Salmon's chestnut colt, Vigil, winner of the Preakness and a contender which will go to the post carrying the hopes and money of thousands of turf followers, stood far above the rest. Vigil was the second of the derby horses whose trials were reserved for the afternoon, having been preceded by Carl Wiedemann's McGee colt, In Memoriam, which ran between the first and second races, doing the Derby distance in 2:06 3-5. Vigil shaded this a fifth of a second. In Memoriam ran his mile in 1:41 2-5, while Vigil did it in 1:40 4-5, and was eased up in his last two furlongs. It was by all means the best of the Derby trials and this convinced many that the son of Jim Gaffney is ready to repeat his Preakness victory.

In Memoriam's fractional times were 0:24, 0:48 4-5, 1:14 4-5, 1:41 2-5, 2:06 3-5. Vigil was caught as follows: 0:23 4-5, 0:48, 1:14, 1:40 4-5, 2:08 2-5.

Trainer Thomas J. Healey arrived today and saddled Vigil for this afternoon's trial, over which he was naturally greatly pleased. He also confirmed the report than Benny Marinelli, who sported the Salmon silks at Pimlico, would have the mount on Vigil Saturday afternoon. The youngster is expected to arrive at the Downs tomorrow.

Big Crowd on Hand.

Bright sunshine and prospects of a rapidly improving track brought out the largest crowd of the week this afternoon. The visitors, in addition to the racing, enjoyed the derby trials, and, between trials and races, saw Track Superintendent Tom Young making desperate efforts to get the track into perfect condition with sprinklers and two tractor harrows.

After Vigil's trial the track was good and it was a trifle better when James Rowe sent Harry Payne Whitney's Picketer for his final go. His trial was not nearly as impressive as that of Vigil, for the bay son of Chicle was doing all he could all the way to wind up in 2:09 3-5. In between, his times were 0:24 2-5, 0:48 3-5, 1:14, 1:40 2-5, 2:09 3-5. He stepped his mile fast enough, but the last quarter told the story.

Last of all came General Thatcher, which has not been forced in his training all season by Trainer Burch, but which has been ready when called upon. General Thatcher showed his wares in the Preakness and will be fit to the minute on Saturday in the estimation of those who have followed his fortunes this year. General Thatcher was caught in 2:10 4-5 the fractional times being 0:24 2-5, 0:49 3-5, 1:15 3-5, 1:42 3-5, 2:10 4-5. In view of the fact that General Thatcher was not pushed, his time was considered to compare favorably with the other afternoon workouts. Clifford Robinson, who was engaged by Burch for Saturday, arrived in time to ride the colt in his final work.

Fair weather is promised for tomorrow and the track should be fast in the early hours of the morning for the final canters. One more day of sunshine and hard work should make Churchill Downs lightning fast for the Derby, a condition that will be welcomed for a fair test of the 1923 three-year-olds.

Harry Payne Whitney, accompanied by Mrs. Whitney and a party of friends, will arrive in Lexington tomorrow morning on the way to the Derby. The party will stay at the Whitney estate on the Paysville Pike, where it will enjoy the treat of an old-fashioned barbecue. During his brief stay in Lexington Mr. Whitney will inspect his breeding establishment and horses.

Members of the Panama Mission who are in the United States will be Derby guests of Mrs. John C. Scott, wife of the Minister of Panama, who is visiting Governor Edwin P. Morrow and Mrs. Morrow in Frankfort. Among those expected by Mrs. Scott are Dr. Eusabio, Secretary of State, and Dr. Octavio Vallarino, First Assistant to the Secretary; Dr. Juan Moralles and Richard Arango, Chief of the Secret Service of Panama. Other guests will be Governor and Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. Sam Heald and Rowland Bancroft of Panama, Mr. and Mrs. John T. Thatcher of New York, Dr. and Mrs. W. S. Elkin of Atlanta and Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Moriarty of Covington, Ky.

General W. B. Haldeman will give a breakfast before the races on Saturday and will have as his Derby guests Mr. and Mrs. Cooper Ewing of Calcutta, India; Major Edward Tutwiler of Birmingham, Colonel Wm. Price of Stovall of Tampa and Mrs. B. Lipscomb.

Innumerable breakfasts have been planned for city and country homes and dinners and other functions will follow the running of the race of the year. Visitors from every State in the Union, and it would seem from every country in the world will be here to cheer the winner of the classic.

Many Specials Expected.

Arrangements were completed late afternoon for handling the largest number of special trains and private cars that has ever rolled into Louisville for Derby Day. The first private car came in bearing George H. Bull of the Jockey Club and Secretary of the Saratoga Association and party in time to enjoy this afternoon's racing. This was handled by the Louisville & Nashville.

The first special train to arrive will bring the members of the Chicago Athletic Club, which will come over the Pennsylvania and will arrive early tomorrow morning, being sent directly to Cave City, where the members will spend the day playing golf at the Blue Grass Country Club. The train will come back to Louisville early Saturday morning and will go out at 10 o'clock Saturday night.

It was estimated tonight that approximately 600 special Pullmans and private cars will be parked in the various railroad yards in Louisville tomorrow night and Saturday, and that all of these will be on their return way some time during Saturday night. These are in addition to the regular daily trains in and out of Louisville and practically every regular train will run extra cars or sections.

McGill Quits and Bloomfield Retains British Boxing Title

LONDON, May 17.—Jack Bloomfield tonight retained the light-heavyweight pugilistic championship of the British Empire in what was to have been a twenty-round bout with Dave McGill of Ireland. McGill quit in the thirteenth round. Seaman Hall, lightweight champion of Europe, lost his title to Harry Mason of Leeds. Hall was disqualified in the thirteenth round for hitting low. The fights were held at the Olympia.

RICKARD'S AGENT IN BUENOS AIRES

Promoter Says Juan Homs Is Not There on Dempsey-Firpo Bout Mission.

BUENOS AIRES, May 17.—Juan Homs, who said he represented Tex Rickard, has arrived in this city to see whether it would be possible to stage a bout between Jack Dempsey and Luis Firpo here.

Tex Rickard yesterday confirmed cabled reports from Buenos Aires that Juan Homs had undertaken a business mission for him in the Argentina, but denied that it had to do with a proposed Jack Dempsey-Luis Firpo match for the heavyweight title in the South American city. Homs was representing him in other matters, the promoter declared.

While he declined to discuss the possibilities of a Dempsey-Firpo contest in the Argentine, it has been known for some time that Rickard has considered staging such a bout there in November, providing Firpo emerged as the leading challenger for the heavyweight crown. The promoter, however, indicated that he would make no definite plans for a title match, either in this country or South America until the outcome of Firpo's bout with Jess Willard to be held before July 7, either in New York or Jersey City.

Alluring financial prospects for a title bout in the Argentine, where Firpo is a national idol, have been pointed to as a reason for promoting a match there. At the same time Rickard is known to feel that the South American and Dempsey would attract a record "gate" in the metropolitan area and Labor Day has been mentioned by him as probable date for a match here between the champion and either Willard or Firpo.

RICKARD INSISTS FIRPO WILL SIGN

Says Argentine Boxer Approves Contract and Is Sure to Meet Willard.

Luis Angel Firpo is still unsigned for his proposed bout with Jess Willard, to be held in this vicinity some time between June 30 and July 7. He was expected to attach his signature yesterday to the contract already signed by Willard, but for various and sundry reasons that were not disclosed he deferred action. But Rickard declares he is not worrying. The promoter blandly asserted that Firpo's signing is a mere formality.

The chief terms of the contract have been accepted by the Argentinian. Some of the minor details have to be straightened out to suit him. According to Rickard these are very minor and cannot possibly develop into obstacles sufficiently great to cause the match to fall through. In other words, Firpo is as good as signed, and it was stated at Madison Square Garden, following a conference between Firpo and Rickard, yesterday, that the South American would perform his artistic pen feat today.

Yesterday Rickard also was busy completing arrangements for the bout between Johnny Dundee and Jack Bernstein for the junior lightweight championship to be held at the New York Velodrome on May 30. Like the Floyd Johnson-Jess Willard imbroglio and the Willard-Firpo jamboree, the meeting between Dundee and Bernstein will be another case of age vs. youth.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 17.—The varsity "P" was awarded to eight Princeton athletes and 115 undergraduates received insignia at the meeting of the Undergraduate Athletic Committee held here last night.

Louis Kaplan of Meriden, Conn., knocked out Danny Frush of Cleveland, in the sixth round of their scheduled twelve-round bout at the Queensboro Stadium, Long Island City, last night before a crowd of 4,000 spectators. Kaplan's aggressiveness throughout was marked, and Frush was always on the defensive. Frush went down for a count of nine at the opening of the sixth round, and a few moments later caught Kaplan's overhand right on his jaw and fell flat on his back. Both boxers weighed 129 pounds.

Billy Defoe was complete master of Jack Hausner of Harlem in their twelve-round bout, and won the decision easily. Defoe weighed in at 129 1-4 pounds and Hausner at 125.

FULTON TO FILL CONTRACT.

Manager Notifies Massachusetts Commission That Boxer Is Ready.

BOSTON, May 17.—The Massachusetts Boxing Commission has received word from Jimmy Johnston, manager of Fred Fulton, that the latter is ready to make amends for the breach of contract committed when the Minnesota plasterer fought Floyd Johnson in New Jersey on the date on which they had contracted to meet in Boston. The two boxers and their managers stand suspended by both the Massachusetts and New York commissions as a result of their having agreed to box in the two cities on the same date, April 16.

It was said here that Jack McAuliffe, ex-, probably would be Fulton's opponent in place of Johnson when he fulfilled his contract to fight here.

BOXING BOUTS TONIGHT.

DEMPSEY STARTS TRAINING TODAY

GREAT FALLS, Mont., May 17.—While Jack Dempsey was making a talk at a luncheon, attending a live stock show and motoring, his handlers rushed preparations for the champion's training quarters at Great Falls Park, where Dempsey will spend six weeks getting into trim to defend his title at Shelby, Mont., July 4. Scores of workmen today were busy at the large residence in which the champion will live, and others were rushing to complete two rings where he will punch heavyweight sparring partners now hurrying to Great Falls.

Dempsey will move from his hotel to the training camp tomorrow and will open his workouts with rope skipping and shadow boxing. On Saturday he will box with Jack Burke of Pittsburgh and on Sunday George Godfrey, colored heavyweight, will be his opponent.

"I was a bit skeptical about this Shelby bout when I arrived here three days ago," said the champion at the luncheon, "Now I know the bout is going over big. The seat sales to date insure its financial success, and I think a great crowd will watch the contest. As to Gibbons, I have great respect for him. He is a logical opponent for me. I am going into serious training at once to prepare for my bout, and I will be in the best of shape when we meet on Independence Day."

Jack Kearns, manager of Dempsey, is expected here tomorrow from New York, and Willie Meehan, Joe Benjamin, Billy Wells, Harry Drake and other sparring partners are due here by Sunday. Dempsey will have from seven to eight boxers to work with at the outset. This number will be increased later.

At Shelby, 100 miles to the north, promoters of the bout said construction of the arena was going forward. It will be completed early in June.

Tommy Gibbons, who will open his campaign at Havre, Mont., about June 1, now is touring the State giving exhibitions. The challenger is booked to visit Great Falls on May 26.

KILBANE AND WILDE ARRIVE HERE TODAY

Featherweight and Flyweight Will Box on June 2 and 16, Respectively.

Two of boxing's elite are due to invade the precincts of this city today. For a change they are not heavyweights. The lighter divisions are on the verge of absorbing a portion of the public's attention. Johnny Kilbane and Johnny Wilde should be part of New York's transient populace before sunset. Kilbane is coming up to put the finishing touches to his training for his bout with Eugene Criqui for the world's feather-weight championship at the Polo Grounds on June 2, and Wilde is coming to prepare for a fifteen-round session with Pancho Villa at the same place on June 16 with the World's flyweight title.

Kilbane left his home in Cleveland last night. He was accompanied by his wife and his sparring partner, Al Ziemer. His representative in this city has made arrangements for three other sparring partners to join the Kilbane camp within a few days. The featherweight champion declared that he has attained excellent physical condition already and that all he needs is a little more boxing to perfect his judgment of distance. It was said here that he will enter the ring weighing between 122 and 123 pounds. The featherweight limit in the State is 126 pounds.

Criqui has been here for some weeks. He has been working at Manhasset, L. I., where Georges Carpentier, his countryman, trained for his fight with Jack Dempsey. He is reported to be in fine condition. Tom O'Rourke, the matchmaker of the Polo Grounds, following a conference yesterday declared that he has perfected all of the details for the scrap and that he expects a big crowd to invade the home of the Giants when the two little battlers step into the ring to strive for world's honors in their division.

Wilde, who is aboard the Aquitania, due today, is known to have been training consciensiously in England. He has continued working on the ship while on his way across the Atlantic. Before sailing, cabled reports stated that the Welshman was within easy reaching distance of the weight and that he had shown much of his old-time form in spite of a long lay-off in his preliminary training.

FORDHAM DEFEATS C. C. N. Y. ON TRACK

Captures First Place in Nine of Twelve Events and Wins Meet by 70 to 38.

By winning first place in all the track events and two firsts in the field events, Fordham University defeated City College in the annual track meet between the two institutions yesterday in the Lewisohn Stadium by the score of 70 to 38. City College took only three events; the discus throw, high jump and running broad jump.

Captain Harry Rosenwasser was the Lavender's individual star, winning two of his team's first places, the discus throw and running broad jump, and placed second in the javelin throw. Eddie Farrell, well known in metropolitan circles, was Fordham's mainstay, capturing the 100 and 220-yard dashes and taking second in the hurdles.

The feature event of the day was the one-mile run. Hamburger of City College was out in front until the last half lap, having set a terrific pace throughout, but was overtaken by his Fordham rivals.

TELLS DISCOVERIES AT UR OF CHALDEA

LINKS IT TO BIBLE STORY

Alterations in Temple of the Moon God Support the Account of Nebuchadnezzar.

By C. LEONARD WOOLLEY.
Director of the University Museum, Philadelphia.

The first season's work of the joint expedition of the British Museum and the University Museum of Philadelphia has been remarkably fruitful in results. A good deal of information as to the progress of the excavations has already appeared in the press, but a general summary of the discoveries is due to the public.

Ur, which was a great Sumerian city ages before the arrival of the Chaldees, had the reputation of being one of the most ancient centres of civilization in Babylonia, and though we have not yet tapped its lowest strata and the earliest object dated by inscription goes back no further than 2900 B. C., yet painted potsherds and flint implements found loose in the soil, and even some of the walls already laid bare, must be very many hundreds of years older than that.

The final destruction of the city, or at any rate, of its temples, took place in the Persian period when Zoroastrianism had attained sufficient intolerance and power to sweep away the monuments of the older faith; and from the Third Dynasty of Ur (about 2300 B. C.) to this time, perhaps about 400 B. C., the history of the buildings excavated by us is virtually continuous.

Most of our work centred on the temenos or sacred enclosure formed by Ur Engur, the first King of the Third Dynasty. At the beginning of the third millenium, the city had been subject to the Kings of Lagash, a statue of one of whom, Ennanatum, we found in the débris piled against the foot of the Ziggurat tower; it is headless, but finely carved, and bears across its back and shoulders a long and important Sumerian inscription.

Ur Engur, as the founder of a new dynasty and an independent ruler, undertook on the task of virtually rebuilding his capital. From of old the temples of the moon god, the patron diety of Ur, and of the lesser divinities had been grouped together in the low ground northeast of the city mound—the mound itself being formed of the gathered débris of many generations of buildings.

Ur Engur built a great wall around this sacred area, enclosing the old shrines and part also of the town mound where, apparently, he prepared to set up a palace for himself. This wall, restored and rebuilt by many later rulers, still survives, and has been traced out for nearly the whole of its circuit. It is some fifty feet thick, made of sun-dried bricks, roughly rectangular; it encloses an area about 400 yards long by 200 wide, and in places it still stands ten feet high. It was pierced by six gateways set back in the wall face with flanking towers and carved entries, the gates turning on stone-hung sockets inscribed with the names of the kings who built or repaired this great wall of defense; the earliest of these stones is found in position bore the name of Burnaburiash, Ur Engur's grandson, the latest that of Nabonidus (555-538), the last King of Babylon.

In the west corner of the temenos stand the ruins of the great Ziggurat tower, built of brick with a solid rubble filling which rose high above the city. It was constructed in four rectangular stages, diminishing in size as they went up, of which the lowest and part of the second survive; a staircase led up to the lowest platform and from this a sloped ramp ran round the building to the top, whereon stood presumably a small shrine of Nannar, the Moon god.

Built by Ur Engur and his son Dungi, this great tower survived throughout the whole of Ur's history. Nabonidus faced it in part with bright blue glazed bricks, now all fallen away, and added to it on one side a sort of platform whose use cannot yet be determined; in the old days it must have been an amazing monument; even today its ruins form a landmark visible for many miles across the flat Mesopotamian desert.

Temple of the Moon God.

At the foot of the Ziggurat lies the building whose excavation was the main work of our season. It is the Temple of the Moon God and his consort. Complete in itself, the temple is at the same time part of a great complex of shrines which filled up most of the temenos area and culminated in the Temple of Nannar himself.

In 1918 Dr. Hall had dug out part of the sanctuary of the great Nannar Temple. This still awaits complete excavation; the work we did on it this year shows that the existing building was begun by Ur Engur and finished by his son (the wall bricks bear the older King's name, whereas the floor bricks have that of Dungi), and that it was divided into two parts, of which one was the sanctuary proper and the other a private dwelling, presumably that of the chief priest. In the masonry of one corner we found the foundation deposit with a bronze figure of the King.

The Temple of the Moon God and his consort was on a smaller scale. The actual sanctuary was a little five-roomed building hidden away in the midst of long service chambers, priests' quarters and store rooms, the whole surrounded by a heavy wall. When the temple was founded we cannot say. It certainly was in existence before 2650 B. C., for we found thrown out as useless and embedded in the floor numerous inscribed stone vases dedicated in it by Kings of Agade at that date.

Ur Engur had built here, but below what remained of his work were two strata of unbaked mud brick walls, and below these again walls of "green" brick laid while still damp and reduced to a kind of terre plein. These (the most primitive walls yet found, I believe, in Mesopotamia) must go back to very remote antiquity. But more was the sanctity attaching to the temple that each royal builder in turn followed religiously the ground plan of the older work, when destroying to rebuild, he left leave in place one course or two courses of his predecessor's brickwork to serve as guide to his own workmen, and so, though its walls were at different dates due to Ur Engur to Burnin (c.2225), Gimil Illehu (c.2000), Kurigalzu (c.1400), the form of the building never altered.

The first king to make any radical change was Nebuchadnezzar, who about 600 B. C., quite recast its plans. He repaired but did not otherwise alter the venerable five-chambred sanctuary, except that he built out from it two projecting wings. But he destroyed all of the service chambers in front of it, leveling their ruins and laying down over them a wide courtyard paved with brick. This appears to have been the public court. Between the new wings of the central building was a smaller court, at a higher level, whereon stands an altar of brick, once overlaid with metal, and immediately behind this is the sanctuary door, and facing it, against the back wall, we found the remains of the pedestal whereon stood the cultus image.

A Change of Ritual.

Obviously Nebuchadnezzar's remodelling of the temple was to correspond with a change of ritual whereby the public took part in a service hitherto conducted by the priests in secret. The upper court is that of the people, the lower is for the priests, who stand behind the altar and its ministers, the great gilded statue only visible in the darkness of the shrine. It is impossible to contest this innovation [illegible] Testament story according to which Nebuchadnezzar not only set up an image (older kings had often done that) but proclaimed that when they heard the sound of the sackbut, all the people were to fall down and worship it.

Nebuchadnezzar's reforms endured, and when Cyrus the Persian in his turn repaired the temple, he reproduced every feature of the old; even in the inner chambers of the sanctuary, the small altars, the tables of offering and the chancel screen are identical and identically placed; on the pavements of Nebuchadnezzar's and of the Persian's building. It is interesting, too, to observe how closely Herodotus's description of the great Marduh temple at Babylon fits the contemporary temple of Nannar and his consort at Ur, and our reconstruction of this is helped not a little by the account of the Greek historian.

The excavations have proved very fruitful in objects. Apart from the statue of Ennanatum and the bronze figure of Ur Engur already mentioned, a hoard of Persian jewelry was found beneath the floor of one of the sanctuary chambers, and a second smaller hoard of the Neobabylonian period in a trial trench drug across the ruins of another temple. Great numbers of inscribed tablets were found, mostly of the Third Dynasty of Ur (2300-200 B. C.) and some of the time of Artaxerxes (B. C. 465-424) and the inscribed bricks cover the whole range of the town's history.

A brick lined well within the temenos produced a large number of clay cones of Kudur Mabuk, of Aradsin and Rimsin (C. 2000-1950 B. C.), describing the building operations of these kings. The well was cleared down to a depth of forty feet, and then the rains filling it made further work impossible.

The inscribed and decorated stone vases, dedicated in the temple—many of them wrought in Egyptian alabaster—cover a range of some 900 years and are of great value both historically and artistically; while a fine series of terra-cotta reliefs and figurines throws new light on the religious iconography of the later period. And a useful beginning has been made with the dating of Babylonian pottery. A special exhibition of these objects will be arranged at the British Museum.

The prospects for next season are excellent. Though we have excavated but a tiny fraction of the vast ruined field, we have learned a great deal about the geography of the site, and our results up to date are sufficient guarantee of its richness. But funds will be needed if the British Museum is to continue its collaboration with Philadelphia in the thorough exploration of this, one of the most important cradles of civilization and religion.

CARNARVON'S ESTATE IS £398,925 GROSS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, May 17.—Lord Carnarvon left property of the gross value of £398,925. Probate of his will, dated Oct. 29, 1919, with two codicils, has been granted to General Sir John Grenfall Maxwell, Major Gen. Sir Robert Hutchison and Arthur F. B. Portman.

His Egyptian collection he left to Lady Carnarvon in a codicil written in his own hand, with the request:

"I would like her to give one object to the British Museum, one object to the Ashmolean and a fragment cup of blue glass (Thothmes III.) to the Metropolitan Museum of New York. Should she find it necessary to sell the collection, I suggest that the nation (i. e., the British Museum) be given first refusal at £20,000, far below its value; such a sum, however, to be absolutely hers, free of all duties.

"Otherwise I would suggest that the collection be offered to the Metropolitan, New York, Mr. Carter to have charge of the negotiations and to fix the price.

"Should my wife decide to keep the collection I leave it absolutely to her whether she leaves it to my son, or to the nation, or to Evelyn Herbert. I suggest, however, that she consult Dr. Gardiner and Mr. Carter on the subject."

The second codicil, made a few days before his death, was written out by Dr. Gardiner at his request on a cable form of the Eastern Telegraph Company. It reads:

"I give all my bearer bonds to my dear daughter."

He stated that he wished to be buried on Beacon Hill and directed his executors to erect a mound of earth with trees or a stone, which, however, was not to cost more than £50. He desired that there should be no black horses or any sort of mourning used at his funeral or afterward; that the funeral should be exceedingly simple, and that two doctors should view his body before burial to make sure that life was extinct.

Among a number of other bequests he left £500 to Howard Carter, £100 to Dr. Bridge of the British Museum, £100 each to Dr. Gardiner and Dr. T. E. Bruce. To his wife he gave the emerald ring he always wore, hoping she would always wear it after his death, and a pearl pin which was her gift and which he hoped she would have mounted and wear herself. To his daughter Evelyn he gave his pearl stud, with £200 to have it mounted; his gold cigarette case and £1,000.

Miss MaHaffey, Harvard, Wins on Central Park Lake.

The first annual regatta of the Ziegfeld Follies girls on the Central Park lake yesterday afternoon brought out the largest crowd that that body of water has seen this season. Spectators, anxious to get within eyeshot of the racers, emptied the boathouse of every floating craft, and at a late hour yesterday afternoon the boathouse keeper was still counting up profits.

Agitation for water sports among the Follies girls, it was said yesterday afternoon, started some time ago with arguments as to which was the best athlete. Boat races were decided upon as a means of settling the dispute, and Florenz Ziegfeld Jr. offered a silver cup to the winner. Permission to use the Central Park lake was obtained from Park Commissioner Francis D. Gallatin, who agreed to act as judge.

At 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon ten girls and Sally, the Follies chimpanzee, who was rigged out in a collegiate-looking sweater and knickerbockers, rolled up in taxicabs to the Seventy-second Street end of the Mall and filed down to the lake. Immediately there was a lively demand for boats by persons who had hitherto been sitting quietly on benches.

The five girls who raced were sweaters of Harvard, Yale, Princeton, Columbia and Cornell. Each had her coxswain, and Sally acted in this capacity for the launch which followed with Mr. Gallatin and the spectators.

The course stretched from the bridge near Seventy-second Street around to the boathouse. Mr. Gallatin found the time of the winning boat to be 6 minutes and 40 seconds, and estimated the length of the course as "such as could be reasonably made in that length of time." Some spectators estimated the time at nearer half an hour.

Miss Blanche Mahaffey, representing Harvard, came in first, and Miss Edna Wheaton, representing Cornell, came in second, although delayed by losing an oar. After the race the girls had luncheon in the Casino, where Sally entertained them by eating ice cream with a spoon and smoking a cigarette.

MAX REINHARDT TO PRODUCE HERE

ENGAGED BY MORRIS GEST

His Returns Tomorrow to Austria to Complete His Plans—Hippodrome Negotiations Are Canceled.

After spending four weeks in New York at the invitation of Morris Gest, Professor Max Reinhardt, foremost European stage director, yesterday signed a contract with the firm of F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest to make several large productions here next season. He will sail tomorrow on the Olympic for his home, Schloss Leopoldskron, in Salzburg, Austria, accompanied by his manager, Rudolf Kommer, to proceed with plans for his first American season.

The many rumors connecting the Hippodrome with the plans of Gest and Reinhardt were definitely quashed yesterday when it became known that Gest, with the approval of Reinhardt, had terminated negotiations to the lease of the Sixth Avenue theatre. It is possible that these negotiations will be resumed later. But for the present all plans for the presentation of the Reinhardt production in the Hippodrome have been canceled.

According to the Gest-Reinhardt agreement, at least three productions will be made here—"The Miracle," Strindberg's "The Dream Play" and Offenbach's "Orpheus." The exact theatres in which the productions will be made and the methods and details of production will be arranged in conferences between Gest and Reinhardt this Summer in Austria.

The production of "The Miracle" here, however, is slightly problematical. "The Miracle," a spectacular dramatic pantomime, enlisting the services of a cast of one thousand, was first shown at the Olympia in London under Reinhardt's direction in 1911, and was produced by him the following year in Berlin at Busch's Circus, a building which he recently remodeled into the Grosses Schauspielhaus.

The rights to "The Miracle" belong to its author, Karl Vollmoeller, and the estate of its composer, Englebert Humperdinck. On his return to Central Europe, Professor Reinhardt will enter immediately into negotiations in the hope of obtaining these rights for the use of "The Miracle" in America.

More than one person violently opposed to unionism in all its phases acquired a sudden tolerance a few years ago when James Barton, in an Equity strike show, burst forth into Broadway prominence from the obscurity of burlesque shows, in which he was only known to several hundred thousand people. The same Barton, with the same virtues that then commended him, came back to Broadway last night in "Dew Drop Inn" at the Astor Theatre.

So far as Barton is concerned, the proceedings last night were most commendable. There may be a better burlesque dancer than this Barton, but, if he exists, he is still mute and inglorious. Barton is more conducive to joy with his feet than an overwhelming 99 per cent. of his fellow-actors are with everything else they can command. When he dances, he reduces to absurdity all the philosophical schools in the world.

What the voice is to Irene Castle and Dorothy Dickson, also, one remembers, excellent dancers, a poor show and a poor supporting cast are to Barton, however. He had them last night.

Despite the cooling off of the sun, the managers insist upon proclaiming the arrival of Summer. "Dew Drop Inn," thus, is a Summer show, and as such probably not subject to the more or less stringent eligibility rules of Winter time. If it were, it must be said, it would rank low indeed, despite Barton's excellent dancing.

The book is decidedly one of those things. It deals, if memory serves, with some one waiting to sell a Summer hotel to some one else, Barton raising the price by continuing a legend about buried treasure in the place, in his capacity as hotel porter. The complications this leads to can be imagined, and are funnier that way than on the stage.

As to the cast, two Swanson girls, sisters, they say, to Gloria, make a favorable impression. They are personable, graceful and adequately tuneful. The reach of the rest exceeds their grasp.

Milk Fund Fight Films Here Only.

Theatres outside of New York State will not be able to see the Milk Fund fight pictures, because no pictures of prizefights are permitted to leave the State in which they are taken. Carl Laemmle, head of the Universal Film Corporation, said yesterday that no attempt would be made to show the pictures of the Willard-Johnson and Firpo-MacAuliffe fights in any other State.

Laemmle said that if the production were permitted to be shown throughout the United States it might bring in $1,000,000. The bulk of the proceeds from the pictures will be turned over to the Milk Fund. There is 1,000 feet of the Firpo-MacAuliffe fight and nearly 3,000 feet of the Willard-Johnson battle. The pictures are being shown this week at the Rialto Theatre and next week will be seen in different theatres in the city and State.

OWSLEY A WITNESS AT 'MOVIE' INQUIRY

Edward Bowes, Director of the Capitol Theatre and Vice-President of the Goldwyn Pictures, which corporation shares a fifty per cent. interest in the Capitol Theatre, testified that prior to the building of the Capitol, Goldwyn had difficulty in securing first runs for its pictures.

In answer to a question by Marvin Harrington, Government Counsel, as to why the Capitol Theatre had been built, Mr. Bowes stated the reason was to insure first run for the company's pictures.

Colonel Alvin Owsley, National Commander of the American Legion, was a witness at the afternoon session. He testified for the Government to show the importance of motion pictures in influencing and dominating public opinion. He told the commission that while abroad he had made a study of the American soldiers and found that "of four million men in the army, one out of five could not read, write or speak the English language," and that "one out of four were physically unfit for service."

"When we were overseas," he said, "in every division consisting of an average of 27,500 men, 5,000 to 10,000 had to be sent to school before they were fit for service."

He said the Government had made a series of "flash-in-action" pictures which had been shown throughout the country.

Asked if the legion had had any trouble in showing these at the larger theatres, he replied that reports had come to him that there had been difficulty in procuring runs at first-class houses. He could not explain how or why.

Colonel Owsley stated that it had been necessary to institute a system of education for our soldiers, and he had found that the most effective system was the use of motion pictures. He stated that after investigation it had been found that over 50 per cent. of the soldiers could be interested in this form of education and decided that the money which was to be spent through other means of education would all be used for motion pictures.

He stated that through the American Legion he proposed to use films to educate men for better citizenship. At least 85 per cent. of all knowledge was gained through the eye, he said.

"Will you give your opinion as to the power of motion pictures to mould and influence public opinion in this country?" he was asked.

"It is tremendous; it is far-reaching. I know of no better method in America at the present time than the motion picture power," Colonel Owsley said.

Regarding the use of motion pictures in the schools he said "in the future it is my humble opinion that school books will be supplanted by films."

Charles Rosenzweig, manager of the film booking office which distributes the Robertson Cole Pictures, testified that while he was manager of the Universal Films he had encountered a great deal of difficulty in having first-run pictures shown. He also showed Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, Director of the Rialto Theatre, several first-run pictures; that the Director inspected the pictures and said they were O. K., but he could not use them because he had no open dates. He told the commission he had encountered the same conditions at the Criterion and Rivoli Theatres.

"In order to have our pictures shown we had to lease the Central and Astor Theatres," said the witness.

The meeting was adjourned until 10:30 A. M. today.

New York Men Honored for Distinguished Service and Bravery in Action.

THIRD DECORATION FOR ONE

Business Man, Labor Leader, Banker and Soldiers Receive Awards at Governor's Island.

J. Leonard Replogle, steel maker, was among the New York business men to whom war honors were paid yesterday at Governors Island, when Colonel Peter Murray, Chief of Staff of the Second Army Corps, bestowed five Distinguished Service Medals and eight Distinguished Service Crosses. One of the crosses was awarded posthumously to First Lieutenant William H. Taylor, who served with the Ninty-fifth Aero Squadron.

The honors were to have been distributed by Major Gen. Robert Lee Bullard, but he was called away on service. The cross bestowed upon Matthew George Rice, former private in Company A, 165th Infantry, which was the Sixty-ninth Regiment, was the third commendation received by him. He has the Croix de Guerre, with two stars, and a citation from General Pershing. Rice was wounded and gassed twice in the Argonne fighting. The awards were:

Distinguished Service Medals.

Hugh Frayne, General Organizer, American Federation of Labor, 1,416 Broadway, New York, for "exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in a position of great responsibility in connection with the operations of the War Industries Board during the World War," and as Labor Commissioner, "he contributed largely to the successful mobilization and conservation of man power for war industry."

Pope Yeatman, 167 Broadway, for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in connection with the operations of the War Industries Board during the World War," and as Director of non-ferrous metals," "he rendered, through his untiring efforts and devotion to duty, exceptionally valuable service to the War Department."

J. Leonard Replogle, 927 Fifth Avenue, as Director of Steel, War Industries Board, "for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished service in a position of great responsibility in connection with the operation of the War Industries Board during the World War, and as Director of Steel he rendered, through his untiring efforts and devotion to duty, exceptionally valuable service to the War Department."

Leland L. Summers, 140 Nassau Street, "for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in a position of great responsibility in connection with the operations of the War Industries Board during the World War, and as technical adviser of the board and later as representative on the Interallied Munitions Board he rendered, through his untiring efforts and devotion to duty, exceptionally valuable service to the War Department."

Sydney B. Williamson, 120 Broadway, Colonel, Corps of Engineers, United States Army, "for exceptionally meritorious and distinguished services in a position of great responsibility. As section engineer, Intermediate Section, West, France, he constructed hospitals, depots, camps and miscellaneous structures. He displayed rare technical skill, broad vision and business experience, untiring energy and devotion to duty, contributing in a material way to the successful operations of the American forces in France."

Distinguished Service Crosses.

Charles C. Rosaire Jr., 18 Lattin Drive, Yonkers, Major, Infantry Officers' Reserve Corps, then Captain, Company F, 319th Infantry, Eightieth Division, "for extraordinary heroism in action near Inecourt, France, Nov. 1, 1918. His company being halted by enemy machine-gun fire, he secured two hand grenades and rushed alone for an enemy machine-gun nest, throwing his grenades and compelling the surrender of the gun crews. Returning to his company he directed the fire of the remaining machine-gun crews causing heavy casualties in his company, silencing the enemy guns and resuming the advance with minimum losses. The soldierly courage displayed by Captain Rossire greatly inspired the members of his company."

Robert C. Paradise, 121 Madison Avenue, Captain, Air Service Officers' Reserve Corps, then First Lieutenant, Twelfth Aero Squadron, "For extraordinary heroism in action in the vicinity of Bourelles, France, on Sept. 26, 1918. As pilot, Twelfth Squadron, he was assigned the duty of locating the American front lines during the first two hours of the Argonne offensive. Unable to locate the line of the usual altitude, he flew down to the dangerous altitude of fifty meters, secured the important information and immediately discovered our lines held up by a strongly held nest of enemy machine guns. Noting the exact location of the nest upon his map, he flew back to Division Headquarters and reported.

"With his plane riddled by enemy bullets, one control shot away, he returned to the lines, discovered the enemy nests had not been destroyed and that they were inflicting heavy casualties upon our troops. In the face of concentrated enemy fire and attacked by four enemy planes he went down, his plane barely skimming the tree tops and deliberately fired over 400 rounds into the enemy nests, thus causing the enemy gunners to abandon their nests and positions and enabling the troops of his division to resume their advance. Again gaining altitude, he discovered and destroyed by his fire an enemy signal station. This act was performed at fifty meters' altitude amid a storm of protection fire from enemy anti-aircraft guns."

Edward A. Walton, 924 West End Avenue, Captain, Infantry, O. R. C., then First Lieutenant, Adjutant, 3d Battalion, 369th Infantry, 93d Division, "for extraordinary heroism in action near Ripont, Marne, France, Sept. 26, 1918. He accompanied the battalion commander on a personal reconnaissance, advancing 100 metres in advance of the assaulting lines, where they were met by heavy enemy machine-gun fire. The battalion commander received six severe leg wounds; he was carried and dragged under intense fire to a place of comparative shelter by Lieutenant Walton, who assisted a member of the Medical Corps to apply first aid. While so engaged he himself was wounded."

William H. Taylor, First Lieutenant, 95th Aero Squadron, " for extraordinary heroism in action near Font-a-Mousson, France, May 28, 1918. Accompanied by Lieutenant Hambleton, he answered an alert to Lironville and encountered five enemy planes in the vicinity of St. Mihiel. As they approached, the enemy turned away. Lieutenant Taylor and Lieutenant Hambleton followed and at Font-a-Mousson again came upon them. Lieutenant Hambleton attacked the lowest one, firing twenty rounds and forcing it from the formation, while Lieutenant Taylor remained above to protect him and to keep off the other enemy planes. An enemy bullet having shot the cross section wires of Lieutenant Hambleton's plane away, the splinters from the same cutting his cheek and right shoulder, he turned from combat to ascertain damage to his plane. As the enemy plane was falling Lieutenant Taylor opened fire and immediately brought the German down."

Peter Finucane, 1,467 Amsterdam Avenue, mess sergeant, then corporal, Co. F, 306th Infantry, 77th Division, " for extraordinary heroism in action near Bazoches, France, Aug. 14, 1918. He voluntarily exposed himself to intense enemy machine-gun and artillery fire while crawling forward, in company with four other men of his company, in search of their wounded company commander, who had fallen in front of his company's position. After a fruitless search the patrol engaged the nearest enemy post and in a fight with hand grenades destroyed it. Corporal Finucane then assisted a wounded comrade to return to his own lines."

Robert A. Straub, care of Empire Trust Company, 120 Broadway, sergeant, then corporal Co. F, 306th Infantry, 77th Division, " for extraordinary heroism in action in Bazoches, France, Aug. 14, 1918. Voluntarily joining a daylight patrol seeking information as to the positions of the enemy which was attacked about 100 yards beyond its own lines by an enemy hostile post of seven men. The enemy was immediately attacked from the rear, several of the men killed and the survivors scattered. A moment later another enemy post was attacked and in hand to hand fighting Corporal Straub killed one of the enemy and was himself badly wounded. Although unable to walk and under heavy fire from near-by enemy posts, Corporal Straub dragged himself to our lines and gave valuable information as to the dispositions of the enemy forces."

Richard Foy, 747 Franklin Avenue, Brooklyn, corporal, then private, Company F, 306th Infantry, Seventy-seventh Division, " for extraordinary heroism in action near Bazoches, France, Aug. 14, 1918. He voluntarily exposed himself to intense machine gun and artillery fire, crawling forward, in company with four other men of his company, in search of their wounded company commander who had fallen in front of his company's position. After a fruitless search the patrol engaged the nearest enemy post and in a fight with hand grenades destroyed it. Private Foy then assisted a wounded comrade to return to his own lines."

Matthew George Rice, 466 West 166th Street, private, Company A, 165th Infantry, Forty-second Division, " for extraordinary heroism in action at Landres-et-St. Georges, France, Oct. 15, 1918. While acting as runner he delivered a message from the regimental commander to the commander of the assault battalion crossing a level field swept by intense machine gun and artillery fire, and though severely wounded returned with a message to the regimental commander, who stated that all the runners had been killed or wounded and that he desired another message to the battalion commander. Private Rice promptly volunteered to carry the message and in accomplishing his mission was again wounded, notwithstanding which fact he again crossed the fire-swept zone and delivered a return message to the regimental commander. Private Rice was then carried from the field."

YALE 'TAP DAY' BRINGS HONORS TO JUNIORS

Special to The New York Times.

NEW HAVEN, May 17.—Yale's senior societies held their annual elections today, with the customary picturesque "tap day" exercises, each present member of the four societies slapping a student between the shoulders as token of election. The Faculty closed the campus to the public during the elections, but the undergraduates thronged the quadrangle until the last junior had been chosen.

Franklin Mussy Grosby of Minneapolis, who received the honor of being the first man slapped for Skull and Bones, refused the election and was later received into Wolf's Head. VETOES EXTRA PENSIONS.

Mayor Expected to Sign $10,000,000 Note Issue Measure.

Indications that he would sign the bill enabling the city to issue long term notes to an amount not exceeding $10,000,000 during the present year, were given yesterday by Mayor Hylan, at a public hearing on this and several other legislative bills.

The bill provides that $5,000,000 of the amount allowed may be used for repaving thoroughfares and the remainder for "public improvements other than a bridge over the East River." This clause prevents the city administration from spending any of the money for the kind of a bridge proposed recently by Grover A. Whalen, Commissioner of the Department of Plant and Structures.

The Mayor vetoed a bill to amend the city charter to provide extra pension money for dependents of firemen killed in the performance of their duty. The bill would provide a pension equal to the salary the fireman received at the time of his death. The present law fixes the amount not to exceed one-half of a fireman's salary, and in no instance to exceed $1,000.

TRAINS WOLVES FOR PETS.

Special to The New York Times.

GREENWICH, Conn., May 17.—That pet wolves may replace poodles and other breeds of small dogs now so popular among society women is a possibility. If the plans of Lord Auckland of England, now stopping at the Pickwick Arms Hotel here, are carried out. Helen is the name of a pet Montana wolf, aged 11 months, which Lord Auckland has as his companion at the hotel. She roams with him and is a great favorite among the hotel guests. Lord Auckland expects to leave for the Middle West within a few days to make a business of raising wolves, which he will introduce into society in New York and elsewhere, and he believes that it will become a hobby among women to acquire these wolves when young and have them as pets.

Lord Auckland says that the wolf can be taught to become just as warm a friend to his master or mistress as a dog.

Gives Up Silk Trip.

Because of political disturbances in the interior of China, D. E. Douty, Vice President of the United States Testing Company, Inc., has abandoned the trip he planned to make this Summer with the object of developing a new source of raw silk supply in China. He had intended to go about 2,000 miles west of Shanghai into the third largest Chinese silk-producing centre, situated in the province of Szechwan on the Chengtu Plain. Here there are about 70,000,000 people who have little or no export trade. The nature of the silk produced, however, was deemed of such high quality that it warranted investigation. Mr. Douty was requested by the Silk Association of America to determine the possibility of extending present Chinese production in the district and to urge the filature men to be prepared to ship raw silk for export as soon as transportation facilities improve sufficiently to make it possible.

Foreign Buying for Retailers.

Arrangements have been completed whereby Alfred Fantl & Co., Inc., the Paris division of the Alfred Fantl resident buying organization, will purchase all of the foreign merchandise for forty-six stores throughout this country. The stores with which the contracts have been made have annual sales volumes ranging from $1,000,000 to $36,000,000. The arrangements were the result of a trip to fifty cities of John W. Thorne, Vice President and general manager of the Paris office. It is planned to show highly complete lines of the merchandise bought abroad to the buyers of these stores every July and January, with landed prices quoted in American money, thus obviating the great handicap which buyers face when they go abroad. A large hotel in this city will probably be selected for the showing of the merchandise. Mr. Thorne estimates that a store here could have from 15 to 25 per cent of its gross sales in foreign merchandise, with resultant savings in buying at cheaper cost of the goods, which would also have the additional consumer incentive of being imported. Mr. Thorne will leave tomorrow for Paris on the Olympic.

New Colors for Fall.

Egyptian colorings feature the Fall color card which was released to the trade yesterday by the Textile Color Card Association of the United States. The card contains seventy-eight colors, sixty-six of which are shown in one and twelve in two fabrics. Ten shoe, leather and hosiery shades are shown under separate groupings. A generous array of the Egyptian shades for silks is depicted, leading off with three browns known as papyrus, cartouche and mummy brown. Following are new effects in typical tapestry colorings. Venice and India have also given inspiration for a series of new shades, and golden colors prominently given the tan shade called camel's hair, as well as darker desert ones known as Sakkara and Biskara. In the shoe, leather and hosiery colors beige, thrush, hazel, Mandalay and Congo are featured, and navy is in their continued popularity. Silver, fog and cruiser, three grays, are repeated from the Spring card. A distinctly new brown called log cabin is depicted.

Raw Silk Is Lifeless.

The local raw silk market continues dull. Prices have receded in sympathy with a decline in the Yokohama market. This has caused buyers generally to hold off and watch for the bottom. Manufacturers find themselves in the same boat, with the requirements of the mills light. Prices at Yokohama, according to advices received by H. L. Gwalter & Co., Inc., have dropped sharply. Current quotations contrast strikingly with the very high prices reported for the original cocoon contracts of the new crop. These are claimed to have been made at a producing cost of 2,480 yen for Kansai No. 1. Shipments from Yokohama to May 15 total 87,100 bales, compared with 262,044 for the same period a year ago. The Canton market is dull, with no business reported for American account. No trading in steam filatures is being done at Shanghai. The quiet with little business transacted for European consumption.

Has the Flurry Ended?

It is thought that the flurry of cancellations which were received in the men's wear trade has about ended for the present, at any rate. During the last few days, while the trade has continued quiet, the number of cancellations has been growing very small. More seasonable weather, it is believed, has the effect of doing away with them altogether. It was a curious trend of events that caused cancellations for Fall, according to one well-known seller, because of bad weather for the prior season. The agent takes the position that the goods which have been canceled will cost the cancelers more money later when they want them. It is also pointed out that most of the cancellations came from the local trade with only a few from out of town.

Gray Goods Sales Improve.

Considerable improvement in the demand for gray goods was reported in this market yesterday, with the bulk of the call for printcloths. Spot trading in 39-inch 68-72s was done at 11¾ cents, with June-July deliveries sold at an eighth less. The same was true of 38½-inch 64-60s which brought, respectively, 9¾ and 9¾ cents. Other constructions moved on that basis. In the sheetings the sales were confined largely to the lighter weights, the best selling constructions being 36-inch 5.50s at 8 cents and 6.15s in the same width at 7¾ cents. The fine-yarn cloths and specialties continued to drag.

Pastel Dresses for Graduation.

The two features of the business being done in graduation dresses for misses and girls at the moment is the unusual size of the demand that has been in evidence this month, after only a fair business in April, and the number of dresses in the pastel shades that are being bought in addition to white for the purpose. For leadership in the early business placed, georgette and crêpe de chine dresses had a pretty race, but in the re-orders the georgettes appear to be ahead of the other crêpes. Another surprise reported by one of the prominent local manufacturers yesterday was the number of organdie dresses that buyers are taking for graduation and Class Day wear, considering the slump in this merchandise last season. Canton crêpe and dotted Swiss dresses are also moving well here.

Jobbers Pause on Hosiery.

It is generally estimated, according to the current news letter of the National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers, that jobbers have more than 50 per cent. of their hosiery business for Fall still to purchase. Selling agents handling the lines bought by wholesalers have been on the verge of pressing for this business, but the unsettled condition of the raw material markets in the last week or so has brought about a period of marking time on the part of these buyers and the agents realize that trying to rush things now would be only wasted effort. However, according to the letter, both silk and cotton will have to decline a good deal further before hosiery prices will be adversely affected.

Lingerie Duplicates Numerous.

Duplicate business on Spring lines of lingerie and nightgowns is coming from buyers in satisfactory quantities, all things considered, according to comments heard in the local trade. In addition to Philippine and Porto Rican hand-made and crepe nightgowns, there is a good call for gowns of novelty fabrics from buyers of the higher priced merchandise. In the lingerie line the best call is for the specified step-ins and costume slips, and sales of these articles with the larger houses are well ahead of those of the same season a year ago. General indications were said to point to a still better business as the retail season advances.

AFTER THE THROWSTERS.

Silk Men Seek to Change Practices Said to Be Injurious.

Unfair methods of competition on the part of certain unreliable throwsters are criticised in the report of a special committee of the Commission Throwsters' Division of the Silk Association of America, which was made public yesterday. Many things, it is pointed out, combined during past seasons to produce chaotic conditions in the silk throwing industry, but recently they grew so bad that at a recent meeting of the division it was decided to take steps to provide remedies.

The main evil, according to the report of the committee, is the fact that these throwsters take work at absurdly low prices. This has created a condition which, it is asserted, is so serious that unless immediate measures for relief are taken the future of the trade is threatened.

"When a throwster takes work at the absurd prices prevalent in certain quarters," the report continues, "it means that he is losing money or he is unreliable or both. If he is losing money, he must employ as cheap labor as the lowest class of help, unskilled and unreliable. Labor of such a type, even if offset by careful supervision, can only result in imperfect work, extra waste, mixed lots and generally unsatisfactory goods. Labor to succeed and get the quality of work demanded today requires operatives of superior skill and intelligence. To get and retain this class of labor means high wages. Where is the money for high wages coming from?"

The report urges silk manufacturers to take steps to correct this situation. "They should realize," it is said, "the results of ridiculously low prices. They should not consider reliable or well-established any throwster who does not carry insurance covering fire, theft and all other hazardous risks and who is not financially able to stand back of any just claim that may arise."

A further survey of the situation will be made and more detailed reports submitted at the meeting of the throwsters which will be held next week.

Miss Jarvis, Founder of the Observance, Reproves Confectioners.

PHILADELPHIA, May 17.—Miss Anna Jarvis, the founder of Mother's Day, engaged in a verbal tilt with members of the Associated Retail Confectioners of the United States at their convention today. She charged them with having profiteered and "gouged the public" through the commercialization of Mother's Day symbols.

"I want to tell you that you are using a beautiful idea as a means of profiteering," she began. "As the founder of Mother's Day, I demand that it cease."

Some of the delegates suggested that Miss Jarvis be asked to leave the hall. She continued her attack, however, declaring that "Mother's Day was not intended to be a source of commercial profit."

While she was still talking the convention voted to take a recess. Officers of the convention said that she had not been invited to speak.

Seeks to Prevent Trade Abuses.

On the theory that it is better to prevent trade disputes by eliminating the abuses from which they spring than to arbitrate these differences after they arise, the United Women's Wear League of America has for some time been carrying on a quiet campaign throughout the country with this end in view. That it has had a good effect is indicated by the records of the organization's Service Bureau, which show that the number of violations of good business practices by retailers and manufacturers in the industries it represents has been reduced more than half in the last year. A significant thing about the work of the association, according to Executive Chairman M. Mosessohn, is that there is seldom any recurrence of an abuse by a manufacturer or retailer whose attention has once been called to the fact that complaints have been made against his methods of doing business. This has had the native effect of materially reducing the number of complaints and the resultant need of arbitration.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

On a day in which the markets again showed little but indecision, and in which transactions on the Stock Exchange fell to the smallest full day's total since the dull weeks of last Summer, it was not without interest to see in yesterday's Federal Reserve statement the reflection of a similar halt in the credit market. Rediscounts at the twelve Reserve Banks increased hardly $3,000,000 for the week, outstanding note circulation decreased $6,800,000, cash reserves were virtually unchanged. The really interesting comparison, however, is that which shows the movement for the year to date, covering the period of intense industrial activity and of alleged "credit inflation."

Since the last statement of 1922, the Reserve system's rediscounts have increased $67,400,000; not an unusual increase in a season of expanding trade. Reserve note circulation, which ordinarily increases in a period of increasingly large employment of labor, has actually fallen $321,000,000. In that direction, at all events, there is no inflation; the fact, as shown by the "index numbers," that prices have risen on the average less than 1 per cent. since the beginning of the year, perhaps has its bearing on the movement.

Yesterday's stock market again embodied nothing but rather ineffective sparring against one another by the opposing speculative groups. Prices were more or less unsettled by professional selling in the early hours; but the tactics were transparent and the trading unimportant. The later market recovered most of its earlier losses—probably enough on the afternoon repurchases by the forenoon sellers. The amount of business done was so small as to give no significance to the market, except as a proof of the absence of the real investor.

The day's foreign exchange market was on the whole as meaningless as the stock market; at the close, the rates were virtually unchanged from Wednesday. The German mark ended somewhat higher, after sinking nearly to the season's low level. A report which circulated that some 60,000,000 marks of the Reichsbank's gold is on the way from Germany to New York was credible enough; it would presumably mean the establishment of another outpost in the campaign to "stabilize" the mark.

The persistent effort of France to reduce her paper currency; even in the face of disadvantageous circumstances, has all along presented so striking a political and economic contrast with the policy pursued by Germany, that yesterday's statement of the Bank of France deserves attention. It shows that the reduction of 271,934,000 francs, made in the outstanding circulation this past week, has brought the total to the lowest figures of the year. The currency has been cut down 1,130,000,000 francs since April 5, when the high point of the year was touched. As most people know, this reduction has been made in accordance with a rule imposed by the Government on itself, and was effected through paying off State's debt to the bank with the proceeds of a new Government loan.

It would not be wholly fair to assume that Germany, if her Government had started rightly, might have done the same, instead of inflating: its currency five trillion marks since the beginning of 1923 and increasing the Treasury's floating debt eight trillions. But if Germany had reparations to pay before her Government defaulted, France had reconstruction expenditure to meet, and met it. Germany, like France, borrowed to meet the war obligations; the difference lay in the fact that France pledged the public credit in honest interest-bearing loans, whereas Germany chose the suicidal policy of selling unlimited quantities of Government promises to pay in the shape of paper money.

FINDS EXPORT FIELD GOOD.

But Americans Must Study Changed Conditions, R. A. Reed Asserts.

The United States can get export business if the manufacturers and exporters will take the trouble to study conditions and make a serious effort to go after it, Russell A. Reed, President of Russell A. Reed, Inc., general exporters and importers, said yesterday. Mr. Reed made a study of trade conditions in a fifteen months' trip around the world. He found everywhere, he said, that American manufactured goods commanded respect. Prices are such that it is possible for American goods, especially agricultural implements to compete with those of other countries, he says.

The greatest weakness, he asserts, is that American manufacturers are attempting to conduct business in the same manner as it was handled years ago, while conditions have changed. Summing up the whole situation, he says, that to obtain volume business American manufacturers must now send out the highest caliber salesmen developed, or still better, open minded executives who grasp the situation. American merchandise and manufactures can be marketed throughout the world in a volume undreamed of, even during the war boom, but this result will not be accomplished by primitive methods, he says.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

An Uninteresting Stock Market.

The characteristics of the stock market yesterday were much the same as on other recent days. Prices were weak at the start, with a rally during the middle of the day only to be followed by a reaction at the close. In many quarters the complaint was heard that it was "impossible to get a line on the market." In others the action of prices was looked upon as a natural development following such a break as was witnessed during the last six weeks. It was pointed out that the averages, despite the wide fluctuations of the last two weeks, were only a fraction below the level of May 2. Nevertheless, the rank and file of Wall Street appeared yesterday to be discouraged, declaring that while numerous strong Wall Street interests continue to talk optimistically regarding the future of business, they seem unwilling to back up their convictions in the stock market.

It was evident yesterday to those who follow market affairs closely that stocks have at any rate reached the position where they are no longer responsive to alarming reports. Despite this obvious fact, speculators for the decline appeared to have set under way a powerful propaganda, possibly for the purpose of staving off a rally. One could hear on every side yesterday pessimistic statements about the steel industry, about the copper industry and about the automobile industry, and, while none of these stories could be actually nailed down, still it was evident that the underground telegraph wires were working overtime and that all of the information (or misinformation) was being circulated for a purpose. There was hardly one of these stories but that could not be quickly denied when put up to some one in the trade who had actual knowledge of the conditions.

Favorable Dividend Announcements.

Directors of numerous prominent corporations yesterday held meetings to declare quarterly dividends on the capital stock, due to be declared at this time of year. In most instances, these companies declared only the regular payments, but there were virtually half a dozen organizations which increased their quarterly payments or announced extra dividends. In the existing state of mind of the speculative element, however, these dividend declarations were looked upon as a matter of course. It was replied that these payments were a result of business already transacted by the corporations and wiped off the books, and no indication of what the future has in store for these same companies.

German Gold for the United States.

Reports reached the financial district yesterday, via the cables from Berlin, that a shipment of 60,000,000 gold marks was en route from Germany to the United States, with an explanation that "the sum will be accounted for in the next statement of the Reichsbank." This arouses much curiosity and speculation among international bankers as to just what the shipment is for and whether or not, after gripping her gold and gold marks tightly for four years, Germany has at last decided to adopt the policy of distributing the specie, and the paper based on specie, where it will do most good. In this connection, it is not to be overlooked that the last statement of the Reichsbank showed shipments of gold marks to London, of some $17,500,000 since early March, but it was evident that this fund was the used in the more or less unsuccessful attempt to hold up the price of the mark in the face of a flood of new note circulation. A deposit in Switzerland is believed to have been similarly used. In default of definite information here as to why Germany should ship gold marks to us, some international bankers and dealers in foreign exchange suggested that it might for the purpose of replenishing her balances in this country. In order that shipments of cotton, copper and fats be not interrupted. It is pointed out in banking quarters that Germany is finding it increasingly difficult to finance the import of these necessities with marks around 22 cents for ten thousand.

The Foreign Buying of Our Securities.

The following paragraph is contained in a letter received by a New York banking house from its Dutch correspondent: "The purchase by Holland or Switzerland of securities in the American market is very small except for bonds as the 5½ per cent. Dutch Indies, of which, in our opinion, at least half of the amount issued has found its way back to Europe. The big purchase by Holland of American securities took place at the moment when people were frightened for the gulider. This fear has practically disappeared entirely, and people are now speaking of 'paying a premium of 2 per cent.' when buying the dollar at 2.55." The Dutch East Indies issue of $25,000,000 sinking fund gold bonds, was floated here in the week of Feb. 16.

Cash Account and Dividend Payments.

Early in the week an independent oil company, whose stock has been unusually active on the New York Stock Exchange in the recent wild speculation in the oil shares, published an earnings statement covering the first quarter's operations, and at the same time gave a balance sheet showing its financial position as of March 31, 1923. This balance sheet received more than the usual amount of consideration in brokerage circles because of the fact that it showed cash holdings of only $960,000. Only recently the company declared a regular dividend of $1 a share and an extra dividend of 50 cents a share on its 750,000 shares of capital stock outstanding, both dividends calling for an expenditure of $1,125,000 on June 15. The question was raised in Wall Street yesterday as to where the company would get the cash for its dividend payment and still have a sufficient amount for working capital.

The Silver Market.

There is a wide difference of opinion among dealers, and among producers as well, as to what is going to happen to the silver market when the purchases at one dollar per ounce, under the Pittman act, are completed on July 1. A large number of forecasts are currently made, ranging from 50 to 90 cents, as forecasts for the open market price of silver when the artificial peg is withdrawn at the end of next month. Most of the dealers take the attitude that there is nothing at all to be worried about in the silver situation, and that from present indication there will be a sufficient demand to keep production going at a fair pace. Some of the dealers anticipate an unsettlement in the market for a time, until it has become adjusted to new conditions, but none of them expect the bottom to fall out of it. Incidentally, while Wall Street has been very slow to appreciate it, this is one of the obstacles in the path of an upward movement at the moment in copper stocks. Most of the big copper producers are silver producers as well, and if they are to get but 50 cents or so for silver, for which they now receive $1, it is going to represent a considerable item in annual balance sheets. This was one of the factors in the pressure on copper shares yesterday.

THE ATLANTIC COAST GETS CAROLINA ROAD

LEASE RUNS FOR 999 YEARS

Louisville & Nashville May Be Joint Lessee—Richmond Bankers to Protest.

Officials of the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio Railway Company yesterday confirmed the reports that negotiations were under way to lease the property to the Atlantic Coast Line for 999 years. It is expected that the formal contract will be signed within a month. Information as to the amount of capital involved in the transaction, the terms or the date on which the transfer would be made was not available.

The lease gives the Atlantic Coast Line access to the mining district in Kentucky and the Carolinas. The principal business of the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio Railway Company is the transportation of soft coal. The Clinchfield's tonnage revenue report shows that there has been a steady increase in the soft coal tonnage from 2,158,165 carried in 1912 to 5,890,136 tons in 1920. In 1921 the tonnage handled was 4,871,151.

The stated total assets of the company in 1921 were $79,318,349, including $64,410,445 for road equipment and $8,157,360 invested in affiliated companies. The operated lines consist of 282 miles, from Elkhorn City, Ky., to the North and South Carolina State line, and branches and trackage rights over 14.16 miles. In addition to this mileage the company owns 18.09 miles which are operated by the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio Railway of South Carolina.

The Clinchfield Northern Railway of Kentucky is also controlled by the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio, and the Black Mountain Railroad is affiliated with the company.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 17.—The Atlantic Coast Line will be a joint lessee with the Louisville & Nashville in the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio acquisition, and both will take part in the financing of the acquired property, it is understood here.

No opposition is expected from the Interstate Commerce Commission, as that body is said to be in favor of developing the vast coal section of this part of the country and also in view of the fact that the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio is not a competing system. The Kentucky coal fields are the largest in the country with the exception of those in Pennsylvania, and the development of the Kentucky fields has scarcely begun.

RICHMOND, Va., May 17.—Lease of the Carolina, Clinchfield & Ohio Railway to the Atlantic Coast Line and Louisville & Nashville Railroads will be contested before the Interstate Commerce Commission by a group of Richmond financiers headed by John Skelton Williams, former Controller of the Currency, on the ground that the line should be open to all railroads with which it conects or should be operated jointly by them.

*FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

After displaying a weak tone in the early dealings yesterday, as a carry over from the lower trend on Wednesday, European exchanges later enjoyed a sharp rally from the forenoon concessions, sterling moving up to $4.62⅞ from a previous $4.61⅞, while French francs improved to 6.67⅛ cents from 6.63⅝.

Lire, guilders, marks, the Scandinavians and Swiss documents all turned higher in sympathy with the advance in sterling and francs, closing at net gains over Wednesday's finals. Irregularity ruled in the Far Easterns, some of the Chinese rates moving up, although silver at London and New York reacted, while the Indian and Japanese remittances sagged for slight losses. South Americans held generally firm, with Canadian dollar declining to 97.9⅝ cents from 97.97 cents.

In the subjoined table the quotation on sterling represents dollars and decimals of a dollar; all other rates represent cents and decimals of a cent. Quotations preceded by the decimal mark indicate a price measured in fractions of a cent.

BIG UTILITY ISSUES SOON TO BE OFFERED

New $100,000,000 Financing, to Include Railroads, Is Reported Pending.

TO REIMBURSE TREASURIES

Illinois Bell Telephone Co. Plans to Sell $50,000,000 of 33-Year 5% Mortgage Bonds.

Reports reaching the Wall Street district indicate that approximately $100,000,000 of new bonds and notes will be offered on the domestic investment market this Summer and Autumn, practically all in the interests of railroad and public utility companies. In addition there are several other large issues said to be pending.

The largest piece of future financing reported yesterday was in regard to a refunding operation for the Illinois Bell Telephone Company, which has applied to the Illinois Commerce Commission for authority to issue $50,000,000 of thirty-three-year 5 per cent. first and refunding mortgage bonds. Proceeds will be used to meet obligations due under existing first mortgages, to retire floating indebtedness and to obtain additional working capital. As the existing issue of bonds does not mature until Dec. 1, 1925, the date for the offering of the refunding bonds will depend largely upon the condition of the bond market.

Another sizable issue reported as pending was for the account of the Humphreys Pure Oil Company. According to this report the new organization would soon seek $5,000,000 or more through the sale of notes for the purpose of buying oil at or near existing price levels. In this connection it was pointed out that crude oil, following its swift advance in price during January and February, has subsequently reacted to levels which are within striking distance of the low prices for the year.

For the railroad account heaviest financing needs are for the purpose of acquiring new equipment and of improving rights of way. From applications made to the Interstate Commerce Commission it is indicated that the New York Central, Michigan Central and Big Four railroad companies are seeking authority to assume obligation and liability in respect of $17,340,000 of New York Central 5 per cent. equipment trust certificates. It is proposed to sell this issue to J. P. Morgan & Co. to raise funds which will pay in part a total estimated expenditure of $28,206,938 for equipment.

The Cleveland Union Terminal Company has asked authority to issue $15,000,000 of 50-year first mortgage sinking fund 5 per cent. gold bonds, to be guaranteed as to payment of principal and interest by the New York Central, Nickel Plate and Big Four, the proceeds to be used to construct a union passenger station at Cleveland.

Similar requests were also filed yesterday in behalf of the Virginian Railway to the amount of $5,700,000 of 5 per cent. equipment trust certificates to be sold to the National City Company and Lee, Higginson & Co.; $2,115,000 of 6 per cent. equipment trust certificates for the Boston & Maine to be sold to a group of Boston houses, and $600,000 of 5 per cent. equipment trust certificates for the Indiana Harbor Belt Railroad Company to be sold to J. P. Morgan & Co.

In a majority of cases the new issues for the railroad companies will be used to reimburse their treasuries, a large part of the amounts asked already having been spent for new equipment.

STEEL OUTLOOK PROMISING

Midvale Company a Profitable Acquisition but Lackawanna Property Needs Rehabilitation.

No new financing is contemplated on the part of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, according to a statement made yesterday by E. G. Grace, President of the company. For some time past reports to this effect had been circulated in the financial district. Mr. Grace said that the company had no intention of selling the additional $15,000,000 of preferred stock authorized at the time of the acquisition of the properties of the Lackawanna Steel Company. He also pointed out that the company is in a strong financial position and that during March the company more than earned the full dividend on the $150,000,000 common stock of the company, and that earnings for April were even better than those for March.

Mr. Grace expressed optimism regarding the outlook for the steel industry. The recent curtailment of buying of steel products and the holding up of building contracts he construed as a favorable rather than an unfavorable factor, intimating that it would prolong the period of prosperity from the industry's point of view, as this work will eventually have to be undertaken.

Regarding steel prices, Mr. Grace said that there had been no weakening and that business was fundamentally sound. There had been no holding up of shipments by steel consumers, which ordinarily furnished the first indication that the steel business is on the down grade. In answer to a question as to whether settlement of the Ruhr problem would have any effect on the steel industry in this country, Mr. Grace said that the "prosperity of American steel industry is in no sense based on curtailment of production in Europe."

Regarding the operations of the Midvale Steel and Ordnance Company and the Lackawanna Steel Company, the properties of which were recently acquired by the Bethlehem Steel organization at the time when these companies were expected to go into another steel merger, Mr. Grace said that the Midvale organization, for some time before and since being officially taken over, had more than earned the dividend requirements on the amount of Bethlehem Steel stock issued to take them over. In the case of the Lackawanna the results were not as favorable. This, he said, was due to the fact that when the property was taken over the books carried many contracts which were closed at low prices, and which, due to subsequent developments, were unprofitable. These low-priced contracts are gradually being liquidated. The Bethlehem Steel Corporation has already authorized the expenditure of $12,000,000 for the purpose of placing the plant in a condition desired by the Bethlehem management. The results of these expenditures are expected to materialize in the near future, and Mr. Grace expressed the opinion that before long the Lackawanna property will be one of Bethlehem's best earners.

Directors of the United States Realty and Improvement Company yesterday increased the quarterly dividend on the common stock from $1.50 to $2 a share, payable June 15, to stockholders of record June 5. At the same time the company made public its statement of earning covering the year ended April 30, 1923. This showed net income of $3,335,-681 after depreciation and interest, which was equal to 20.63 per cent. on the $16,162,800 capital stock outstanding, against 16.73 per cent. earned in the previous fiscal year. The dividend declared yesterday places the stock on a regular $8 annual dividend basis.

The Texas Gulf Sulphur Company increased the annual dividend rate on the capital stock to $6 a share, against a $5 rate paid previously. This was brought about by the declaration of a quarterly dividend of $1.50 a share, payable June 15, to stockholders of record June 1. Three months ago the company paid a quarterly dividend of $1.25 a share.

Directors of the Quaker Oats Company, according to advices from Chicago, increased the dividend on the capital stock. A dividend of 3 per cent. on the junior shares was declared, payable July 16, to stockholders of record July 3. In the first quarter of the year the company paid a dividend of 2½ per cent., so that the current dividend is equal to 12 per cent. annually against a previous rate of 10 per cent.

A dividend of 8 per cent. was declared on the preferred stock of the United Paper Board Compnay. This is payable in a lump sum on July 2 to stockholders of record June 7. This is the first dividend paid by the company in two years. Directors of the Chesbrough Manufacturing Company declared the regular dividend of 3½ per cent. on the common stock and 1¾ per cent. on the preferred stock. Both dividends are payable June 30 to stockholders of record June 9. Directors of the Pennok Oil Company declared an extra dividend of ten cents a share on the capital stock in addition to the regular quarterly payment of the same amount. Both dividends are payable June 25 to stockholders of record June 15.

Directors of the Pacific Oil Company postponed their meeting until next Monday. Fleischman Company's Directors are expected to take dividend action at a meeting today.

Kennecott Directors declared the regular quarterly dividend of 75 cents a share on the capital stock, payable July 2 to stock of record June 8. Directors of Utah Copper also declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1 a share, payable June 30 to stock of record June 8.

PRICE OF GASOLINE IS REDUCED AGAIN

Standard of New York Makes One-Cent Cut and Other Companies Follow.

The Standard Oil Company of New York yesterday announced another reduction of one cent a gallon in the wholesale price of gasoline in all its territory, which includes New York and the New England States. This is the third reduction recently and brings the wholesale tank wagon price down to 21½ cents a gallon, or 3 cents below that which prevailed in the late Winter, when consumption was smaller than at present. The company also reduced the price of naphtha, a cent a gallon. The reduction was immediately met by the Texas Company, the Gulf Refining Company and other organizations which compete with the Standard of New York.

The reductions, coming at a time of the year when increased consumption usually forces gasoline prices upward, are due to the increased production of crude oil in California, which is turning out more oil now than at any period in the history of the industry. Much of this overproduction in California is being shipped by the larger companies to the Atlantic seaboard, via the Panama Canal.

Figures made public by the American Petroleum Institute yesterday showed that in the week of May 12, a total of 1,100,000 barrels of California crude oil was received at Atlantic and Gulf Coast ports. This is an average of 157,142 barrels daily and compares with a total of 947,000 barrels or a daily average of 139,142 barrels in the previous week. With existing facilities, the petroleum industry estimates that, if conditions warrant it, 45,000,000 barrels of California crude can be shipped to eastern ports during the current year. Due to the low prices for California crude because of the over-production, the eastern companies can make a larger profit handling it than they could if operating with mid-continent crude.

The opinion in the oil trade, however, is that the California production has reached its peak for the time being. The figures of the American Petroleum Institute showed a drop of 15,000 barrels in the average daily production of the California fields for the week of May 12, this being the largest decrease reported in many months. Whether the curtailment is only temporary, is a matter of conjecture, but it is expected that output will be held in check if possible, because of the demoralization in the industry since the beginning of the year, caused by developments on the Pacific Coast.

The total average daily production of crude oil in the United States in the week of May 12 was 1,963,500 barrels, this company with the highest record of all times in the week of May 5, when the daily average was 1,988,300 barrels. In the second week of May last year, the daily production averaged 1,422,400 barrels.

A year ago California's production was only 340,000 barrels a day. Now it is 695,000 barrels and the record output was 710,000 barrels. Other fields which reported a decrease in output, included Oklahoma, North Louisiana, Gulf Coast, Wyoming and Montana.

FAVORS MODIFIED RAIL COMBINATION

FOR NEW ENGLAND MERGER

Reading Head Advocates Unification of Four Roads for Terminal Service in Eastern Territory.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Extensive modification of the tentative Government plan for railroad consolidations in the East were advocated today by rail executives appearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission. Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore & Ohio, while concurring generally with the commission's project to combine his road with the Philadelphia & Reading and the Central Railroad of New Jersey, expressed the opinion that the New York, New Haven & Hartford and all other New England lines should be left to merge into a single regional system, serving the territory east of the Hudson.

A somewhat similar regional consolidation should be made to include all the railroads in the Michigan peninsula, he said, and the resulting consolidated corporations should recive independent rights to interchange with the east and west trunk lines on their own traffic arrangements.

Mr. Willard also suggested that the Chesapeake & Ohio, Virginian and Norfolk & Western, coal carriers, be left to head separate groups, instead of being attached to trunk lines. The commission's tentative plan calls for attaching these roads and the New Haven system to various east and west trunk lines.

If these propositions in relation to the New England region and the coal-carrying railroads were accepted, Mr. Willard said, and a proper and economic basis for adjustment of capital investment could be mutually agreed upon between ownerships, the Baltimore & Ohio would be prepared to consider carrying out the consolidation proposal.

"The Baltimore & Ohio-Reading system as outlined," he continued, "while comprising 8,253 miles of line is not so large from the standpoint of mileage as some of the already existing trunk line systems, and is so compact as to admit of the maintenance of relations sufficiently close to enable the management to define the needs and to respond to the requirements of the territory it would serve. The traffic now developed and in prospect on these particular railroads so overlaps that it is evident that with closer co-ordination of operation, greater expedition and economy in its handling might reasonably be expected.

"I wish personally and officially to state that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has no plans of its own looking to consolidations such as have been outlined into the purposes of the Transportation act are recognized and the company, in making the suggestion it has, has done so through a desire to co-operate with the commission."

President Smith of the New York Central lines proposed yesterday that the Central of New Jersey be added to the New York Central system, but Mr. Willard urged the commission to include the Jersey road with the Baltimore & Ohio. The Baltimore & Ohio needed better terminal facilities in and around New York, he said, if it was to maintain a service equivalent to that which the enlarged New York Central system could give.

A. T. Dice, President of the Philadelphia & Reading, opposed the consolidation in so far as it would affect his road. The Reading system should not be attached to the Baltimore & Ohio, he held, but should be united with the Lehigh New England, Central Railroad of New Jersey and Lehigh & Hudson River corporations rendering terminal service in Eastern territory to all of the trunk line railroads.

A compact consolidation of the four railroads named, Mr. Dice declared, would give better transportation service than would be possible under an unwieldy artificial system serving a number of sections of country which are in active competition."

FORESEES INSURANCE FOR UNEMPLOYMENT

Possibility of Companies Adopting It as a Risk Discussed Before Actuaries.

The possibility that unemployment might eventually be included among the risks covered by insurance companies was discussed yesterday by J. D. Craig, actuary of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, at the annual meeting of the Actuarial Society of America at the Hotel Astor. His proposals were prompted, he explained, by the suggestion of Secretary Hoover, made recently at a dinner of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, that unemployment was the one remaining life hazard still outside the operation of insurance companies which were in a position to deal with it scientifically. Mr. Craig indicated that the insurance companies, under certain conditions, might enter that field.

Among the conditions governing such risks, however, would be a stipulation to the effect that an employe who was discharged for incompetency could not benefit; nor could an employe who voluntarily left his job. The beneficiaries, according to present outlook, would be those employes thrown out of work under conditions beyond their control.

Mr. Craig suggested that unemployment funds established by employers could be administered more effectively by the insurance companies the same as pension funds and group insurances. After pointing out the services performed by insurance companies for industrial employers who carried group insurance, Mr. Craig said:

"Might it not be one solution of the problem to have life insurance companies undertake for employers a trusteeship of industrial depression reserves, or unemployment premiums, and agree not only to pay certain amounts to certain employes under prescribed conditions, but also to assist the employer to the extent of its ability in stabilizing his business.

"Such a contract might well provide that no employe should be covered until at least six months' employment had been rendered; that for the purpose of the contract unemployment insurance might be accomplished, while the drones, wanderers and the restless, who apparently cause the big expense in unemployment insurance, would be left to their own resources."

He suggested that there would be no differentiation between organized and non-union labor. He explained that some progress in unemployment insurance had already been made by companies operating their own funds, but that the wider field was as yet unexplored by the insurance companies of America.

TO SUE EXCHANGE FIRM.

David W. Kahn of 120 Broadway, counsel for the trustee of the bankrupt brokerage firm of Kardos & Burke, announced at a meeting of creditors in the office of Peter B. Olney Jr., yesterday, that suit would be brought against Marks & Graham of 32 Broadway, members of the New York Stock Exchange, for $177,000. Reports of the accountants showed, said Mr. Kahn, that creditors of the estate might have an action for an additional sum against the same firm, for stocks turned over to them by Kardos & Burke.

Examination of Louis M. Kardos Jr. was postponed until June 4, at 2 P. M. The next meeting of creditors will be held May 29.

GOVERNMENT TO SPEED SUGAR CASE DECISION

Will Tell Supreme Court Monday of Need to Protect Necessaries of Life.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—Hearing by the Supreme Court of the Government's appeal in the sugar case is to be requested by the Department of Justice on the earliest day convenient to the court.

The department's motion, to be presented to the court Monday, will declare that the injunction proceeding against the New York Sugar Exchange presents "a question vital to the welfare of the American public." The court must decide, the motion will say, whether under existing statutes the Government has the power to protect the public against sudden and artificial fluctuations in the prices of necessaries of life directly occasioned by purely speculative operaitons on future exchanges."

"If the power exists," continues the text of the motion, as made public today, "it should be brought to bear on the sugar situation as early as practicable; if it does not, the Congress should be apprised before it next assembles, in order that it may give consideration to the enactment of additional legislation."

The court will be told further that "the conditions complained of still obtain."

Albert M. Bloom, Deputy Supreme President of the Order of Owls, 522 Fifth Avenue, said yesterday that members in about 60,000 families in New York had enlisted to save sugar, and thus reduce the price. A motion picture crusade was launched by Mrs. Louis Reed Welsmiller, Deputy Commissioner of Markets and Chairman of the New York Housewives' Sugar Committee, as another move in the fight to bring down prices.

HOOVER SEES TURN IN THE TIDE OF GOLD

Declares Unfavorable Trade Balance Will Probably Result in Export of Metal.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The turning of the balance in international trade against the United States, indicated by latest Commerce Department reports of imports and exports, is chiefly important in the tendency it will have to reduce the country's stocks of gold, Secretary Hoover said today in a general discussion of the subject. The vast volume of imports, he declared, might in reality be considered somewhat of an index to the country's need for raw materials and manufactured goods to help up the volume of production recently attained in industry.

"I don't think the excess of imports over exports has any relation to the fundamental situation within the nation in production and consumption," Mr. Hoover said. "However, it does mark the turning of the tide in the flow of gold, and we may be exporting our surplus stock soon.

"Undoubtedly, the imports are stimulated to a degree by rising prices within the United States, which attracts commodities here at the same time that it tends to keep home products on the domestic markets. Yet the total volume of exports when compared to the country's domestic production is small.

"Much of our increasing imports are made up of raw materials and semi-manufactured products which go to our own manufacturing plants. To the degree they fall within this classification, our increased imports are due to increased activity of business and to heightened consumption within the United States."

Increases during recent months in imports to the United States have been largely due to enlargement of the country's intake of crude materials for use in manufacturing, according to an analysis made public today at the Commerce Department.

The department's figures for February show these comparisons with February of 1922:

Raw foodstuffs, $28,595,000 against $22,370,000; foods ready for consumption, $35,579,000 against $27,702,000; raw materials for use in manufacturing $127,658,000 against $80,972,000; manufactured commodities, $52,320,000 against $49,377,000; partially manufactured products $55,332,000 against $34,088,000.

SAUNDERS SELLS 97 STORES

Those in Chicago Reported Disposed of to National Tea Company.

CHICAGO, May 17.—Purchase of the 97 Piggly Wiggly stores in Chicago by the National Tea Company for more than $1,000,000 was affected in Memphis today, according to unofficial reports.

A week ago Clarence Saunders admitted that a sale of some stores was the only way he could see out of his financial dilemma.

Harry Field, commission merchant, said he was going to Memphis to confer with Saunders relative to taking over the remaining Piggly Wiggly establishments.

1,200 STRIKE IN BROCKTON.

Walkout Also Forces Douglas Shoe Shops to Lay Off 2,000.

BROCKTON, Mass., May 17.—Two locals of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, the treers and edgemakers, against the advice of their officers, voted almost unanimously to-night to strike to-morrow in sympathy with the dressers and packers, who went out earlier in the week. The membership of the edgemakers is estimated at 500, and the treers number between 700 and 800.

More than 2,000 employes of the W. L. Douglas Shoe Company were laid off today until Monday morning as a result of the strike of dressers and packers. This is the first factory to find its other departments so effected by the strike as to make a partial suspension of operations necessary.

The strikers, whose charter as a local of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union was revoked yesterday, refused today to consider an offer from union executives to reinstate them if they would return to work next Monday. They have formed a new local and its officers said today that the strike would continue until the demands for increased wages were met.

Soldiers at Fort Hamilton Hunt for Dorothy Regan, 15 Years Old.

Three hundred soldiers last night searched the waterfront in the vicinity of Fort Hamilton, Brooklyn, for Dorothy Regan, 15 years old, of 349 Eighty-eight Street, Brooklyn, who left her home at 8 o'clock yesterday morning to attend church and school.

According to Regan, his daughter is a model pupil and also a model daughter. He said she had been studying hard recently for her examinations. He fears she may have been a victim of foul play or amnesia. The girl is described as being five feet seven inches tall and weighing 135 pounds. She had blue eyes and brown hair and was clad in a brown Spring coat, blue waist, plaid skirt, brown Oxford ties, brown silk stockings and blue straw hat.

WEATHER IN BELT AIDS COTTON HERE

It was estimated that between 25,000 and 40,000 bales of July were covered yesterday, which advanced that month to 28.55 at one time. Reports of a better demand for actual cotton at a higher basis following recent bad weather in growing sections stimulated buying by those who had sold either above or below the current level of prices. But thus far the situation has failed to attract general outside business and as a result late months lost all the advance made. Weather improved, though night temperatures continued unseasonably low. Many stations reported 50 or below, even Texas having one point as low as 43 degrees. While May gained 21 points, January closed at a loss of 10 points on the day.

Early trading revealed similar characteristics in all three markets. Prices churned around in a most abnormal fashion. Liverpool rose sharply early and then broke 80 American points in October. There was so much cotton for sale here on the call and immediately after that July ran off 40 points to 24.85 before buying developed. This started active covering and a quick recovery of 35 points resulted. In New Orleans July rushed up 40 points and broke 25 without meeting enough support to prevent a decline. Reports of clear weather throughout the belt and predictions of a continuation of improved conditions brought out late months. October ran under 23 cents to 22.90 before the market steadied. But after the morning advanced all pressure ceased abruptly, giving place to an increased demand for both near and distant months. Indications of a better spot demand, with 125 points reported bid over July for actual cotton in Galveston, arrested attention. Various covering orders were executed, disclosing fewer contracts for sale. When July crossed 29¼ cents buying increased, producing some of the most active covering in several weeks.

New Orleans shot up rapidly later in the morning, holding a 20-point lead over New York in the July position. Buying orders for 5,000 bales were distributed during the advance and absorbed no many contracts that reactions became unimportant. Cotton was wanted in some directions whenever a slight setback occurred, so that July rose over 25¾ cents early in the afternoon. This represented a recovery of nearly 1 cents from the low point in Saturday. During the market demoralisation last week prices declined beyond what any one regarded as probable a month ago. Outside conditions became so unsettling that many lines of cotton textile goods held by mills were sold out on stop loss orders. An impression prevailed that hedges have also been sold in order to prevent a repetition of the losses experienced in 1920. Throughout these recoveries this week demand has come mainly from recent sellers, while general commission house business continues light. The market seems to be readjusting itself after hysterical conditions with the whole crop and prospective value of cotton a few months hence coming in for an unusual amount of discussion. For a week trade purchases of the new crop have been a prominent feature of the situation.

Liverpool was more urgent covering orders had been executed, room opposition developed, bringing a quarter of a cent setback the last hour. New crops lost all advance and closed 10 to 15 points net decline. A reduction in export figures was made amounting to 24,000 bales, bringing the movement to 4,371,000 for the season, against 5,041,000 last year.

WHEAT PRICES DROP WHEN BUYING STOPS

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 17.—Outside buying orders do not follow advances in wheat and corn at the present time, and, while there was a fair class of buying of wheat at times by houses with Eastern connections, the market failed to get far from the finish of the previous day, with the close unchanged to ¼ cent lower. There was a pronounced disposition on the part of local longs to sell on the bulges and, as soon as buying ceased, values reacted easily, although the undertone was by no means weak.

Numerous reports of crop deterioration were received from Kansas, with grain dealers who attended a meeting at Topeka, Kan., generally estimating that the State would raise less than the 115,000,000 bushels indicated by the Government May returns. Some are looking for a yield as low as 85,000,000 bushels.

Sentiment on the whole is bullish, but there is nothing sufficiently sensational in the news to bring sustained buying. Weather conditions were somewhat more favorable over the belt and the forecast was for unsettled and warmer in the West and Southwest with colder Northwest.

The purchase of a cargo of a new crop hard winter wheat at the seaboard by Germany marks the entrance of foreigners as buyers of grain for deferred shipment for the first time this season, and should it continue it might have considerable influence on values. Under nominal conditions there are around 20,000,000 bushels usually under contract at this season, whereas, so far practically, no business has been done.

Export sales of all positions were estimated at 600,000 bushels to 700,000 bushels. Two boats were chartered at Duluth for wheat at 5½ cents to Georgian Bay while from Fort William to Buffalo 5¾ cents was paid. The rate from Lake Michigan ports to Buffalo is 4 cents, with boats very scarce.

With cash corn up 1 cent as compared with May on yellow and white in the sample market, receipts of only forty-two cars in three days and limited offerings, it was easy to advance the May to ¾ cent over July at the last.

Cash houses bought May early at July price to ¾ cent over, selling the July as they took the near-by month. The latter deferred month under pressure, with several strong local operators on the selling side having been good buyers lower down. Closing trades were ¼ cent higher to ¾ cent lower.

Oats after a drop of ¼@¾ cent closed ¼ cent higher to ¾ cent lower, the former on May, which went to a fractional premium over the July for the first time this month.

Primary arrivals of wheat today were 449,000 bushels; week ago, 495,000; last year, 787,000. Shipments were 260,000 bushels; week ago, 667,000; last year, 557,100.

Corn receipts were 168,000 bushels; week ago, 320,000; last year, 631,000. Shipments, 278,000 bushels; week ago, 703,000; last year, 1,229,000.

LATEST DEALINGS IN REALTY FIELD

Resales by operators and builders were a strong factor in yesterday's real estate market, when transactions involving hotel and apartment house properties valued at over $6,000,000 were closed.

Important among the Manhattan deals was the resale of the Hotel Savoy, at the southeast corner of Fifty-ninth Street and Fifth Avenue, to L. M. Boomer, manager of the Du Pont chain of hotels, which includes the Waldorf-Astoria. The deal was arranged by Douglas L. Elliman & Co. as brokers, who sold the property for Frederick Brown, who recently purchased it from the heirs of the late Justice P. Henry Dugro.

No definite information regarding the disposition of the property could be obtained yesterday, but it was said that the hotel will be conducted as a unit of the Du Pont chain. Real estate men are of the opinion that the lower floor will be converted into stores.

The Savoy is twelve stories and has a frontage of 125 feet on Fifth Avenue and 150 feet on Fifty-ninth Street. There is also an L 25 by 100 feet at 8 East Fifty-eighth Street. Justice Dugro built the hotel in 1880.

Third Resale of Theodore Roosevelt Apartments.

The largest of the Bronx transactions was the resale of the Theodore Roosevelt Apartments by the Meister Builders, Inc., to the Nikrew Realty Company, of which M. Workin is President.

This is the third time the property has changed ownership since its completion this Spring.

The structure has a frontage of 358 feet on Grand Concourse, 264 feet on 171st Street, 350 feet on Wythe Place and 178 feet on 172d Street, approximately thirty-six city lots. The building contains over 1,100 rooms and accommodates 270 families. The rental is about $330,000, and the property was held at $2,500,000. Samuel Ginsberg was the broker, and William Reiss represented the purchasers.

Operator Buys and Sells.

Criterion Arms at 526 West 111th Street has been purchased by Frederick Brown from Hugh P. Skelly, President of the F. and H. Realty Company. It is a six-story apartment house with elevators, on a plot 108.4 feet wide and 91.10 feet deep, between Broadway and Amsterdam Avenue. The apartments are divided into suites of three, five, six, seven and eight rooms and rent for $38,000 a year. Mr. Brown resold the five five-story non-elevator apartment houses at 167 to 175 East Ninety-sixth Street to Fannie Benowitz. The property is on the north side of the block, about 100 feet west of Third Avenue. The houses have a frontage of 125 feet and are 100 feet deep. I. Levine negotiated the resale.

Realty Notes.

Isaac Haft was the seller of 511 Eighth Avenue. He was represented by Sigmund Rubin.

The property of the De Forest estate, which was held for over half a century by the family, at 78 St. Mark's Place, a four and a half story building, 25 by 98, was given title from Frank H. Mackintosh of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company to the Amahe Achem Eliasvetgrad Benevolent Association. Plans have been filed by the association to alter a new synagogue on St. Mark's Place. The building was sold for $21,000, all in cash. S. Hoets & Co. were the brokers in the transaction.

Pease & Elliman have sold in 570 Park Avenue, a twelve-story apartment house on a lot 100 by 125 feet, at the southwest corner of Sixty-third Street, which they are selling on a co-operative basis for Bing & Bing, a typical apartment to G. Hunter Brown.

White-Goodman were the brokers in the sale of the thirteen-story apartment at 905 West End Avenue, valued at $1,100,000, and have been appointed managing agents of the property by the new owners.

$400,000 Beaux-Arts Lease.

Charles M. Kohn, President of the Beaux-Arts Building and Studio Corporation, has leased to Joseph M. Nimhauser, agent for an investing client, the store in the Bryant Park Studios, at the southeast corner of Fortieth Street and Sixth Avenue, formerly occupied by the Beaux-Arts restaurant, which has retained the easterly portion of the building.

The lease is for a space approximating 2,700 square feet, facing 45 feet on Fortieth Street and 60 feet on Sixth Avenue, and is one of the most valuable sites on what is practically the south side of Forty-second Street, between Fifth and Sixth Avenues. The lease is for a term of years at a rental aggregating approximately $400,000. The present lessees are to make alterations of the corner into stores.

Operator Buys on West Side.

Eugene C. Ludin sold 260-2 West Thirty-ninth Street, two four-story buildings on plot size 41 by 89.9. The buyer is Samuel Brener. Negotiations for resale are pending through the brokers, Hell & Stern.

It is a five-story and basement dwelling, size 20 feet by 98.9 feet 9 inches. The seller, Nora Fanny D. Wylie, widow of the late Dr. W. G. Wylie, has owned and occupied the property since 1891.

In 1920 the club purchased through the same brokers 30 West Fortieth Street and now controls a frontage of 104 feet.

Russell Estate Sells Dwelling.

The United States Trust Company, as trustees for the Jane C. Russell estate, sold the five-story altered dwelling, 21 by 100.5, at 11 East Fifty-fifth Street. The property is under lease to Alice M. Swift, Inc., decorators, who have been at this location since 1914. A. M. Gitterman was the broker.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, May 17.—The disturbance that was over the lower lake region Wednesday night has moved slowly east-northeastward, and it has been attended by local rains in the lower lake region, the upper Ohio Valley, and in the Atlantic States north of Maryland. Pressure was low generally over the western half of the country Thursday night, with centres of minimum pressure over the southern plateau region and Southern Manitoba. There have been scattered showers within the last twenty-four hours in the lower Missouri Valley, the plains States, the Rocky Mountain and plateau regions and in Florida. Pressure remained high Thursday in the vicinity of Bermuda and it was relatively high and rising over the States east of the Mississippi River, except Northern New England.

The temperature was lower Thursday in the Middle Atlantic and North Atlantic States, Western New York and in the interior of California, and it was higher in the Ohio and Mississippi Valleys and the southern Rocky Mountain regions.

The indications are for generally fair weather throughout the Washington forecast district Friday and in the Atlantic States Saturday, while the weather will become unsettled with a probability of local showers Saturday or Saturday night in the lower lake region, the Ohio Valley, Tennessee and the East Gulf States.

The temperature will be slightly higher in the lower lake region and the extreme upper Ohio Valley Friday and in the Atlantic States, except New England.

Public School Notes.

CO-OPERATION TO AID CHILDREN—The American Child Health Association, of which Herbert Hoover is President, is setting on foot a movement to establish parent-teachers' associations in America for the general welfare of all the children of the country. "The former organization," says a prospectus, "is interested in the health of children from infancy through the school age. Parent-teacher associations concentrate on the school age solely. It is hoped, through co-operation, to mass the efforts of both organizations for the school-age child. The American Child Health Association has a membership of 4,000, including many widely known authorities on health and child welfare in the country. Parent-teacher associations number into the thousands and their members are legion, reaching practically into every community in the country." Dr. Lucas Jean, director of health education for the American Child Health Association, says the proposed co-operation will make it possible to emphasize more easily health as a positive ideal and to present it to children in terms of both strength and joy. Efforts, she says, will be concentrated on the formation of health habits rather than the acquisition of facts in physiology and hygiene. She holds that the interest and imagination of the child must be captured in order to teach health effectively.

MISS HATCH ELECTED—Miss Lillian A. Hatch was elected yesterday afternoon a member of the Teachers' Retirement System at the meeting of the delegates in the building of the Board of Education. Dr. William L. Ettinger, Superintendent of Schools, who addressed the meeting, pointed out that "the question still remains whether or not—with reference to matters of great moment to the school system—the teachers should not have at their command a directly representative organization which would meet or call and which might authoritatively voice the judgment of the majority of teachers in our great school system."

CHRISTIAN BROTHERS TO TEACH CLASSICS. The Christian Brothers, forbidden for twenty years by the Papal authorities in Rome to teach Latin and Greek in their colleges and academies, are now at liberty to study and teach the classics. The Catholic News, in its issue of this week, publishes a dispatch from Paris to the effect that at the General Chapter of the Christian Brothers, held at Lebocq-les-Hal, in Belgium, it was announced that the Holy See had abrogated all restrictions in the Brothers' rules and regulations regarding the teaching of Latin and Greek in high schools and colleges conducted by the Brothers.

This decision, The Catholic News points out, is "almost coincident with the opening of the great new Manhattan College at Van Cortlandt Park. The new Manhattan will thus be in a position to offer to its students a complete collegiate education as a sound foundation for their higher studies for the priesthood and the various professions."

ADMIT LABOR BANK TO FEDERAL RESERVE

Deposits Reach Million-Dollar Level in Thirty Days, Directors Also Announce.

The Amalgamated Bank, owned and controlled by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, has been admitted to membership in the Federal Reserve and its total deposits were reported yesterday as having reached the million-dollar level in the first month's business.

The bank was opened on April 14 as the first labor bank in New York. Application for membership in the Federal Reserve system was made two weeks prior to the opening. Notification of favorable action was received by the bank yesterday.

The total resources of the bank have now reached $1,266,000, an announcement of the Board of Directors stated. These are 2,833 accounts on its books. The bank has time deposits amounting to $345,000 and commercial deposits of $821,000.

"The action of the Federal Reserve authorities in admitting the Amalgamation to membership in the system shows a confidence in our bank which is very gratifying and promises well for labor banks," said Leroy Peterson, cashier.

"The only other labor bank which is a member of the Federal Reserve System is the Locomotive Engineers' Bank in Cleveland. This could not be considered a precedent, however, as the Locomotive Bank is a national bank and as such must become a member of the Federal Reserve System in order to organize. The Amalgamated, on the other hand, is a State bank and the authorities could refuse us admisison if they were at all doubtful of labor banking in general or us in particular.

"Membership will of course, materially improve the bank's facilities. We are now part of a nation-wide banking system. We can use all its facilities for rediscounting and can carry our full reserves with it."

Urges Canadian Tariff Reprisals.

QUEBEC, May 17.—J. E. Caron, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, in an address last night urged the Dominion Government to take measures of reprisal against the United States by increasing the duty on incoming American products to offset the losses Canadian farmers are facing through the Fordney tariff.

TRUCK HITS TROLLEY 8 HURT, 2 SERIOUSLY

SIX OF INJURED WOMEN

Eight persons were injured, two of them seriously, in a collision between a motor truck and a trolley car of the Manhattan & Queens Traction Company at Queens Boulevard and Ascan Avenue, Forest Hills, late yesterday afternoon.

FAULKNER, MRS. MARGARET, 28, of 12,716 Kimball Place, Forest Hills, lacerations of the face and hands.
MARKA, MRS. MARY, 36, of 1,470 Hillside Avenue, Jamaica, lacerations of both arms.
RICKEL, MRS. ROSE, 52, of 45 Remington Street, Jamaica, lacerations of face and body.
SCHMITZ, MRS. W. J., 22, of 45 150th Street, Richmond Hill, lacerations of neck and hands.
VAN ETSON, MRS. ELIZABETH, 56, of 41 Rose Avenue, Jamaica, lacerations of the side, face and arms.

There were about fifty passengers in the trolley car, nearly every window of which was smashed by the collision. Many of the passengers not listed among the injured were bruised by the shaking up or slightly cut by pieces of broken glass. Four surgeons answered the call for ambulances and established an emergency dressing station on the scene.

Robert Perina, driver of the truck, received a summons to answer to a charge of reckless driving, as witnesses said he had turned sharply into Queens Boulevard from Ascan Avenue just before the collision. Perina told Policeman William Harrer of the Elmhurst station, that a cloud of dust which blew into his face at the corner caused him to swerve and strike the car.

WANT BUILDING CONTROL.

Maryland Bankers Favor State Supervision of Associations.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., May 17.—State regulation and supervision of building associations by legislative enactment creating a new department was urged for Maryland today by the Maryland State Bankers' Association in annual meeting at the Hotel Traymore. Resolution to that effect was introduced by Samuel A. Graham of Salisbury, the retiring President.

The convention also endorsed the stand of Governor Albert C. Richie as expressed before them in an address by the Executive yesterday against tinkering with the Federal Constitution by Congress without first getting approval of any projected amendments by a popular referendum.

General Louis W. Stotesbury, former Adjutant General of New York, condemned moves of Congress to change the system of the United States Supreme Court whereby greater vote than a majority would be required in handing down opinions. "It appears to me that Congress is entering upon uncharted seas, and no one can foresee the end," he said.

Officers elected for the ensuing year were: President, T. Rowland Thomas, President of the National Bank of Baltimore, who was First Vice President last year; First Vice President, J. Enos Ray, President of the Prince George National Bank, Hyattsville; Secretary, Charles Hann, Merchants' National Bank, Baltimore, and Treasurer, William Marriott, Western National Bank, Baltimore.

A Wonderful Collection of
by Hart Schaffner & Marx
$50
this typifies how "Value Built on Volume" works for you here

The ideal way to establish the importance of "Value that's Built on Volume" would be a personal investigation of the current offerings of every good clothing store in town, finishing up here with an inspection of our handsome assortments of fine suits.

If every man interested in correct custom-type clothes could indulge in such an expedition our problem would be simply to supply the demand for them. Few men have time for such exhaustive comparisons. So maybe the best plan is to come direct to any Wallach store where every item of merchandise is guaranteed to satisfy—or your money back.

The Spotlight is always on your Tie.

Wherever you go, all eyes are on your tie. It is the one part of your attire you cannot hide. Your whole appearance often depends upon the way your four-in-hand is tied.

But no man can tie his best knot every time. Many days are off days—if you wear an ordinary four-in-hand tie.

Let your next four-in-hand be a STA-TI, and you will never wear any other kind of tie.

Once tied through the Loop, STA-TI will form a neat knot and stay at the top of your collar all day long, and look fresh and new every time you wear it.

STA-TI can not become wrinkled and prematurely old, because you can wear it over and over again without retying.

FOUR PIECE GOLF SUITS

BUY a sport suit at a sport shop; buy it here. Besides being smart enough for city wear, the four-piece golf suit must be 100% suited for actual play. More than style must be tailored into it; golf-wise fit and "playability" are indispensable.

Every Davega-Lurie golf suit scores as high on the links as at a style show. Norfolks, regular and English Sack Coat models in a variety of fabrics—all priced $45. No tailored suit at $75 could give you more satisfaction.

Consider Leighton's Skolny Clothes:

Consider that when you buy here you pay for nothing but the garment. The reputation, the professional style-advice are thrown in gratis. Here, $40 to $65 secures genuine Skolny-tailored clothes. Which means, that even tho you should prefer to pay some highly reputed merchant-tailor many dollars more, you would receive no greater measure of tailoring skill or money's worth than you receive here.

Consider Leighton's "Aristocrat" Straws:

The "Aristocrat" is Leighton's own straw. Made especially for us. The styles are those demanded by our exclusive clientele. The straws embody all the elements of fine workmanship, fashion and quality which have ever distinguished this shop. Sennets and Fancies.
